4 Bottle Clubs Fail to File Answers to Charter Suits

Fay's Office to Start Revocation Action Against After-Hours Spots on Wednesday

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

At least four of Washington's after-hours bottle clubs have not bothered to answer United States Attorney George Morris Fay's lawsuit to revoke their charters, it was disclosed yesterday.

Accordingly, members of Fay's staff will proceed Wednesday in District Court to present proof which is required under the law to obtain judgments revoking the charters. Names of the clubs which have not made answer were not available yesterday. But they are among 11 which Fay sued on March 13.

Two Lines of Evidence

At the same time it was learned the District Attorney's office has two lines of evidence available for use in some of the contested cases which may show by the clubs' own statements that they are organizations for profit.

These were:

1. Return forms for payment to the Bureau of Internal Revenue of 20 percent cabaret taxes require a statement in effect that the tax is paid on a public performance for profit.
2. Some of the clubs have paid royalties to the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers, for public use of copyrighted music, for profit.

But Not for Profit

The club charters, obtained under District law, specify they shall not be organizations for profit but for "social, patriotic, educational, mutual benefit, protection and improvement, literary, musical, scientific purposes," or for "public welfare or recreation" or for "missionary" activity.

Fay's suit alleges the clubs are for none of these purposes, but are organized to evade liquor laws, and operate for profit, in violation and misuse of their charters. On these grounds, he seeks the revocations.

In some of the 11 revocation suits, the clubs have until Monday to file answers controverting the charges. In others, motions are pending, which will delay temporarily the final outcome of the cases.

Handling the Action

Ross O'Donoghue and Bruce G. Sundlun, assistants on Mr. Fay's staff, are handling the actions.

Meantime, the plushy Stagecrafters Club, one of those sued, remained closed, sealed and padlocked by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Deputy collectors closed it Wednesday on a warrant for distraint, for nonpayment of $3090 in Federal taxes.

These include levies for the cabaret tax, withholding and social security taxes. However, that amount is not all that is owed. Sylvan Schwartz, attorney for Edward P. (Patsy) Meserole, secretary-manager of the club, said the

Kerr Gas Bill Is Vetoed By President

Measure to Free Independents From U. S. Control Held 'Unwise' Policy

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday vetoed the controversial and politically volatile Kerr bill to exempt independent natural gas producers from Federal control.

His 750-word veto message declared his belief the measure was "not in the national interest," and his conviction that surrender of regulatory authority over the producers did not appear to be "wise public policy."

Indications last night were that Congress would accept Mr. Truman's rejection of the bill without attempting to muster the two-thirds vote in each House necessary to enact it over his veto.

No Pressure to Override

Senator Kerr (D., Okla.), whose name it bears, told The Washington Post he would not press for a vote to override. Senator Connally (D., Tex.), an ardent supporter of the measure, said there would be no attempt to force its passage.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Texas), who took the floor to speak for the bill and who had predicted the President would sign it, declined comment yesterday.

Even were the bill's sponsors inclined to fight for rejection of the veto, there would be small likelihood the two-thirds majority could be raised in either house. It passed the Senate by the narrow margin of 44 to 38 and squeaked through the House only after four members had changed their votes to make the tally 176 to 174 in its favor.

Split Both Parties

Regarded here as political dynamite, the Kerr bill had split both parties and Mr. Truman had been under great pressure from those who favored it and those who were opposed. Although a small majority of Democrats present on the House floor voted against the measure on final passage, it was strongly supported by Representatives from the heavily Democratic oil-producing States. Not only is Rayburn Speaker of the House, but Connally is chairman of the vital Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Kerr nominated Mr. Truman as President Roosevelt's running mate at Chicago in 1944.

Yesterday Kerr described the veto as a "mistake," and inferentially charged the President with misleading proponents of the measure. He said:

"In the Eightieth Congress the Priest bill was introduced. It was unanimously indorsed by the Federal Power Commission and by the President, who stated that its passage was in the public interest. The Kerr bill was identical in principle and purpose with the Priest bill. If the Priest bill was right in '47 and '48, the Kerr bill is right in 1950.

Kerr said the veto "made it definite and certain" that consumers in the future would get less gas at a higher price, whereas his approval would have assured more gas at lower cost.

President's Position

In his veto message the President recognized the fact that the Federal Power Commission so far has not taken steps to regulate natural gas prices at the source in spite of rising prices. But he said that nevertheless the authority to deal with them in the fu-

Search Plane Reports Seeing Raft in Baltic; Rescue Craft Depart

'Was All Excited About It'

Wife Reports Co-Pilot Wrote Of Going on 'Secret Mission'

New Orleans, April 15 (U.P.)—Mrs. Howard W. Seeschaf, former Washington Government girl, whose husband was copilot of the U. S. Navy plane missing and presumed lost after meeting Russian fighter planes over Latvia, today said he had written her he was going on a "secret mission."

The Navy had said the Privateer plane was on a routine training flight.

In New York, however, Seeschaf's mother, Mrs. Ethel Seeschaf, also said he had written her in a letter she received April 7 that it was a routine flight on an unarmed plane.

While pretty Mrs. Howard Seeschaf would not show the letter, she said: "It was written Tuesday, a week ago (April 4). Howard wrote me that he was going on a secret mission. He was all excited about it. He would not tell me where or when he was going."

She said she received the letter two days ago at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Graff, whom she is visiting.

She was near hysteria and in bed on her doctor's orders.

Mrs. Seeschaf was sobbing and twisting her hands, in which she held her husband's last letter. A crucifix was on the bed beside her, and she said she had been praying continually that he would be found alive.

"Howard and I are very much in love," she said. "He wrote me four or five times a week. He had been looking forward to this mission for a long time."

She said her husband served in the Pacific during the last war. She met and married him while he was taking special training in Washington.

"We were married only a few months ago," she said. "Howard was always proud—very proud—to serve his country. And he wanted to serve it well."

Mrs. Seeschaf believed her husband was alive, either on an island in the Baltic, or as a Russian prisoner.

"Howard is very resourceful," she said. "If there is a way for him to communicate with the United States, not too far from where he is, you may be sure that he will find it."

No Signs of Life Are Noted Aboard; Discovery Revives Hunt Nearing End

BULLETIN

Copenhagen, Denmark, Sunday, April 16 (UP)—American rescue planes took off at 6:44 a.m. today (12:44 a.m. E.S.T) for the area where two oil slicks and a possible life raft gave search officers "the hottest lead yet" in the search for 10 missing crew members of a U. S. Navy patrol bomber.

Wiesbaden, Germany, April 15 (AP).—Air searchers for a missing United States Navy patrol bomber in the Baltic Sea reported sighting a life raft late today, just as the search was about to be abandoned. The search crew said, however, no sign of life was seen.

The plane has been missing since last Saturday with 10 crewmen and may have been the target of a Russian fighter aircraft's bullets. The location of the raft was given as 48 miles northwest of the Danish Island of Bornholm and 23 miles south of the Swedish coast.

Darkness prevented further aerial search tonight, but the United States Air Force asked Danish and Swedish coast guard vessels to go to the scene immediately with flashlights. All available planes were readied to take off at dawn Sunday to follow up the new clew.

Reported by Lost Plane

Three times before, searchers had reported sighting objects they thought might have some connection with the missing plane, a PB4Y, but none of these leads panned out. Today's discovery was reported by the last plane to return to Kastrup Airport at Copenhagen, Denmark, where the United States Air Force has set up headquarters with the permission of the Danish government.

An Air Force spokesman at headquarters here said the search crew had made two low runs over the life raft. It was described as yellow and blue, the colors on the PB4Y's rafts.

"Visibility was excellent," the spokesman said.

The report was received only a few hours after Lieut. Gen. John K. Cannon, United States Air Force commander in Europe, had announced the search would be continued for only one more day.

The missing plane disappeared a week ago on a training flight from Weisbaden to Copenhagen. Three days later the Russian government protested that an American plane had flown over the Soviet frontier into Latvia and exchanged shots with Soviet fighters before disappearing over the Baltic.

U. S. officials said the Navy plane was unarmed and that Latvia lies more than 300 miles east of its course. They expressed the belief, however, that it might have been the aircraft involved, since no other U. S. planes were

Specialized Subcommittees

Senators Plan Closer Liaison On State Department Policies

By The Associated Press

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) yesterday disclosed a plan designed to bring the Senate and the State Department into a close working arrangement on foreign policy.

He will recommend that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee be divided into eight subcommittees to consult with the State Department on specific problems around the world. Connally is committee chairman.

"This plan," he told reporters, "is the first serious effort to set up a procedure in the Foreign Relations Committee to get the most efficient and careful study of international problems."

The Connally plan is one of recent Administration moves to rebuild bipartisan foreign policy and obtain close cooperation between Congress and the State Department.

Among Republicans there have been proposals that they be invited to sit in on policy making, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) has urged an "unpartisan" study of a cold war pattern to follow the Marshall Plan which ends in 1952.

Senate Republicans may speak out officially this week with a statement of their foreign policy views.

Connally's disclosure followed appointments of Republicans John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky and John Foster Dulles of New York

Lattimore Asks End of Aid to Chiang

Says Recognition Of Red Regime By U. S. Can Wait

Philadelphia, April 15 (AP).—Owen J. Lattimore said tonight the United States should "disavow approval and support of the old government of China" but "should not recognize the new government."

"This can be done," he said, "by allowing those members of the United Nations who wish to do so to vote to unseat the old Chinese delegatio to the United Nations and seat new one."

"Direct lations between Washington and the new government of China can wait," Lattimore said. "They should wait until the Chinese government is willing to make dignified and honorable relations possible."

Lattimore is director of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. His remarks were made in a speech prepared for the meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Senator Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.) has charged he is Russia's top spy in the United States. Lattimore replied that the Senator's charge is "pure moonshine" and denied that he has ever been a Communist or Communist agent.

Lattimore said that "if, in Chinese domestic politics, there is a foreign nation that deals with and favors one political party rather than the entire nation and people, let that nation be Russia. America should be willing to show friendliness not toward individuals and not toward any one party, but toward the nation and the people."

Brickmen Win Firm-Financed Welfare Fund

Area Contractors Sign Pact Providing No Wage Boosts

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Washington area contractors and AFL bricklayers have agreed to a long-term contract providing for an employer-financed welfare fund but no wage increases, it was learned yesterday.

Industry leaders hope the agreement, to be formally signed at a "love feast" Monday evening at the Mayflower, will set a pattern for peace in Metropolitan Washington's booming construction industry, which last year was plagued by half a dozen strikes.

The agreement, covering 2100 members of Locals 1 and 4, AFL Bricklayers Union, sets up a one percent of payroll welfare fund beginning May 30. The fund is raised to two percent on October 1, and 3 percent on July 1, 1951. The three percent welfare fund is equivalent to nine cents an hour on the bricklayers' pay of $3 an hour.

The contract is to run for three years, but is reopenable after the second year for further wage negotiations.

The long-term contract is a move on the part of the contractors to stabilize industry costs.

Seven other AFL construction crafts in this area already have welfare funds in operation; plasterers, short metal workers, plumbers, steamfitters, electricians, painters, and operating engineers.

First major collective bargaining hurdle in the construction industry was cleared several weeks ago when the contractors gave in to the demand of the AFL Lathers and granted a 25 cents an hour to the 400 members of this craft, raising their hourly pay to $3 an hour. Three dollars an hour is the highest basic pay in the construction trades, and had been attained by

10,000 See Pageant at Capitol Open City's Sesqui Celebration

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

The city envisioned by George Washington as the Nation's Capital began its Sesquicentennial celebration yesterday with a pageant filled with music and oratory.

A crowd of almost 10,000 people witnessed the first program of the capital's 150th anniversary celebration in the bannered Capitol Plaza under a chill wind and an inconstant sun.

Vice President Barkley, Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.), famous actors and singers and the bands of three services lifted their voices and their instruments to the theme of freedom.

Vice President Barkley, who was applauded as he arrived with his bride on the speaker's platform, said the insistence on freedom of every American generation has been responsible for the growth of this Nation as much as any other factors have.

For his theme, the Vice President harked back to a sentence from the 1924 platform of the Progressive Party, which he quoted: "Every generation must wage a new war for freedom against new forces which seek through new devices to enslave mankind."

Barkley, who followed Screen Actor Edward Arnold on the program, remarked as he doffed his hat in the cold wind to begin his speech that "If my good friend Edward Arnold can speak without his hat, I'll take my chances."

The speakers and artists performed at the foot of the Capitol steps. Behind them, on the steps, stood members of choral groups from six Washington universities, divided into three groups arrayed in red, white and blue gowns.

The choral groups, who remained standing throughout the two-hour program, were flanked by patriotic, cadet and veterans' units bearing the flags of the States and territories and other colorful banners. Against the colonnade above the steps was a replica of the Sesquicentennial seal with an 18-foot plastic and wood reproduction of the figure of Freedom on the Capitol dome.

The President's proclamation of the Sesquicentennial, read by Sergt. Roy N. Meachum jr. of the Army Band, opened the program

Detective's Wife Dies of Bullet Wound in Head

The wife of a First Precinct detective died at Casualty Hospital last night, two hours after she was found by her husband on their bedroom floor at 4108 19th st. ne., with a bullet wound in her forehead.

She was Mrs. Katherine H. Schelin, 37-year-old wife of Olaf (Bud) Schelin, and mother of four children.

Police said her husband was in the living room when he heard a shot upstairs and found his wife on the floor with his service revolver nearby. Their 13-year-old daughter, Gail, was in the room.

The detective told police he and Mrs. Schelin had a "family argument" a few minutes before.

People Don't Stay Home

National Census-Taking Lags; 100,000 Still Uncounted Here

At least 100,000 District residents have yet to receive their first call from the census taker although the entire city should have been enumerated by now for the big 1950 head count.

So don't worry if nobody has yet come to your door. Someone almost certainly will come this week—by midweek, census chiefs hope. The situation is about the same in Maryland and Virginia suburbs.

Washington and Detroit are dragging their feet the most but enumerators are having their troubles in other cities as well, chiefly New York and Chicago, a Census Bureau spokesman said last night. Census originally figured the urban centers should be enumerated in two weeks and the census began two weeks ago yesterday.

According to Walter Reynolds, assistant area supervisor in the District, the chief trouble is that people who live in small efficiency apartments just don't ever seem to be home.

He said Government girls and young childless couples are the hardest for the enumerators to catch. And many who have found "call back" cards at their door—left by frustrated enumerators—haven't phoned the enumerator to say when they would be home. Reynolds asked that all card-receivers phone at once.

About 50 of the 1400 districts, the bulk in the outer parts of northwest Washington, have not even been assigned to enumerators.

Reynolds said it was estimated these districts would be easy to enumerate and they were to be allocated to enumerators who finished up their first areas quickly. But the "call-back" situation has been so heavy census chiefs have decided to try to complete the bulk of the districts before assigning any new ones to enumerators.

Reynolds said of the enumerators, who get paid on a piecework basis and thus get nothing if they find no one at home:

"They're not all smiling, but they're sticking with us."

He said he knew of only one who had tossed in the sponge and simply walked off the job. A few others have run into citizens reluctant to answer the questions which all must answer under possible penalty of fine or imprisonment.

When enumerators get refusals, they notify crew chiefs. Usually the chief has been able to clear up the situation. But twice Reynolds has had to make a call before the citizen would answer the question. So far, no complaints

Planes, Ships Hunt Tug Adrift 5 Days Off California

San Francisco, April 15 (U.P.)—Six Coast Guard, Air Force and Navy search planes joined two Coast Guard cutters today in an "optimistic" search for the crippled tug Omar, adrift for the fifth day with a crew of six.

The last feeble radio message came two days ago, but the Coast Guard expressed confidence the men were "riding it out" with ample provisions and water on a relatively calm sea. The tug's silence may be due to empty fuel tanks, resulting in lack of power to turn the radio and electricity generators.

Drunken Horse Turns Out as Just Another Masher

Portsmouth, Va., April 15 (AP).—Cutting capers is generally regarded as being a privilege reserved for humans, but there's a horse in Norfolk County that believes in having his night out, too.

Shortly before noon today this radio message was sent out by Dispatcher A. B. Roane, jr., of Norfolk County police:

"Signal 11 on West rd.—drunk horse."

Dead silence for a minute or so. Then:

"What!" came from County Policeman Frank H. Wilson.

"That's right, a drunk horse."

"But what'll I do with him?"

"Take him into custody," the dispatcher ordered.

Wilson proceeded to the corn field where the horse was allegedly faring the worse for a bout with John Barleycorn.

Sure enough, there, passed out in the corn field, lay the horse—dead drunk.

Wilson was able to locate Dobbin's owner, who said the horse had wandered away from his stable last night. He had apparently found a still hidden in the woods and helped himself to fermenting mash.

Scotsman's Kilt On Way Here For President

Port Glasgow, Scotland, April 15 (AP).—President Truman is going to get a Scottish kilt fashioned from the colorful tartan of the Clan MacLeod.

The President isn't a member of the MacLeod clan, but an unidentified friend has ordered the kilt for him.

Mrs. A. MacDonald, who has made kilts for 25 years, said she has just finished the President's kilt and mailed it to the White House. The MacLeod tartan has a green ground with wide blue and black bands crossing red and yellow overchecks.

At Dunvegan Castle, on the Isle of Skye, Mrs. Flora MacLeod of MacLeod, twenty-eighth hereditary chief of the clan, said she was "thrilled to think so distinguished a man as Mr. Truman might wear the MacLeod tartan."

6000 DAR Members Arrive To Elect National Leader

By Nicha Soure
Post Reporter

Almost six thousand Daughters of the American Revolution are picking up their hotel reservations here today for the opening Monday of the fifty-ninth Continental Congress and possibly the closest election for a president general in their history.

A record crowd of 4000 delegates and alternates and more than 1750 DAR members are expected to attend the 5-day congress in Constitution Hall.

Chief interest at the congress will center around the triennial election with Mrs. Edwin Stanton Lammers of Texas and Mrs. James B. Patton of Ohio vying for the office of president general. Both are cabinet members of the present president general, Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne.

Although DAR elections are won by a combination of past DAR record and personality, each presidential general candidate has a "different twist" to her platform.

Mrs. Lammers promises that the daughters will start no new major projects until the present building projects are completed. The new administration building, the cost of which may exceed the million-dollar mark, will be used for the first time during the fifty-ninth congress. Two thirds of the money has been raised during the last two years and the daughters have high hopes of receiving pledges for the balance during the congress.

Mrs. Patton is for "a better public relations program." The Ohio candidate wants a program "to better publicize the DAR and to acquaint the public with the constructive elements in the society."

'Bachas' Get Rousing Reception

Bell-Ringing Ashok and Shanti Here for Presentation Today

Wearing royal robes and tinkling bells the two baby elephants arrived at the Zoo at 10:10 last night to one of the most rousing receptions ever given in Washington's animalland.

Formal presentation will be made at 4 p. m. today in back of the Elephant House.

Ashok and Shanti, gifts of Indian Prime Minister Nehru to the children of America, were greeted last night by a colorful honor party of Indians in flowing robes and Americans headed by Ambassador Madame Pandit's daughter.

The babies are comparably winsome and as the cages were unloaded from the truck which brought them from New York, the Indians and Americans pressed around them, crying:

"Bacha! . . . BABY!"

Madame Chandralekha Mehta, daughter of Madame Pandit, gave Shanti and Ashok their first American sugar cubes.

Zoo Director William M. Mann, wearing an Indian Kashmir fur cap, clasped the elephant boy mahout around the shoulders and spoke the Indian words he had so carefully learned. They were:

"Ham bahut mashkur. (We are very grateful.")

Baba Jan, the elephant boy, accompanied the elephants from the Mysore jungle to Bombay and across the waters to New York. The ship docked yesterday.

The elephants were not put immediately in their permanent home in the Elephant House for fear a pregnant giraffe, now abid-

Concern Over Farm Imports Mounting

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Experienced watchers of trends at the Agriculture Department say farmers are rapidly becoming more concerned about the steadily increasing imports of farm commodities than about domestic farm legislation.

Every mail brings complaints about competition from abroad. Farm leaders in Congress report similar experiences. Recent publicity about receipts of Danish butter, Polish hams, Chinese eggs, Canadian wheat, corn, barley, rye and, particularly, potatoes, have aroused farmers in all sections and of all political beliefs.

Some observers believe the matter may become the prime farm issue in the fall campaign.

As if in answer to such complaints, the Canadian Embassy yesterday put out a comparison of shipments to and from Canada in 1949.

"The United States earned from fruit and vegetable sales in Canada more than twice as much as Canada earned from corresponding sales, including potatoes, in the United States," the statement says.

$39,900,000 Exports

"The United States sold Canada fresh fruits valued at $25,300,000 and fresh vegetables valued at $14,600,000, a total of $39,900,000.

"Canada exported to the United States fresh fruits valued at $7,600,000, fresh vegetables valued at $3,900,000 and seed potatoes valued at $7,800,000, a total of $19,300,000."

Last week's announcement by the State Department of negotiations that may lead to a reduction in duties on wool, meats, milk products, fruits and other commodittitetts is expected to add to the torrent of criticism. American exports of farm products are steadily going down, and are expected to continue that way. This adds to rural uneasiness.

Stanley Andrews, director of the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, last week reported that his office was getting "plenty of heat." Much of it was coming from growers of commodites that are not generally considered when agricultural imports are concerned.

Among the commodities up for study are mushrooms. The duty on preserved or canned mushrooms has been reduced since 1930 from 10 cents a pound, plus 40 percent ad valorem, to 5 cents a pound, plus 15 percent ad valorem—more than half. It is now suggested that this be reduced still further, perhaps to 4 cents a pound and 12½ percent ad valorem.

Growers in 25 States.

Mushroom growers have a tremendous influence for their size. They come from 25 States. The mushroom industry employes 14,000 persons. It is a 43-million-dollar industry, with a "farm value" for the crop of more than 20 million a year. There are 41 canneries in 12 States processing mushrooms.

Lemons from Italy and almonds from Spain are two other imports that are creating complaints. Last year the United States produced 39,000 short ton of almonds, worth more than 15 million dollars. Virtually all come from California, where 109,000 acres of almond trees flourish. Yet last year we imported about 17,000 tons—almost half as many as we produced. These were able to pay $110 a ton duty and still compete with American-grown nuts, at an average sale price of about $400 a ton. It is proposed to cut the duty to one third the present rate.

Last year the Agriculture Department bought almonds for the school lunch program to support a sagging market. Domestic growers are limiting production under strictly enforced marketing agreements.

Congress is expected to adopt the Magnuson amendment to the bill granting the Commodity Credit Corporation an additional two billion dollars for price supports. This amendment would halt imports of commodities on which price supports are in effect. Although opposed by the State Department, it reportedly got support from Administration leaders in the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Truman Vetoes Kerr Gas Bill

White House Approved Bill, Newspaper Says

Oklahoma City, April 15 (AP).—The Daily Oklahoman said the Kerr natural gas bill vetoed by President Truman today "was in the identical form and language prepared at the White House and approved by the President some weeks ago."

"An exceptionally reliable source said it was delivered after Mr. Truman's approval, to Senator Robert S. Kerr (D., Okla.), by Charles Murphy, the President's chief counsel," the paper's Washington bureau reported.

"It also was learned that Mr. Truman twice instructed the 'Big Four'—Vice President Barkley, Speaker Rayburn, Senate Majority Leader Lucas and House Majority Leader McCormick—that he had approved the bill and would accept it if passed by Congress.

The Oklahoman said "the President, however, was unable to withstand the great pressure brought against it after its passage."

ture clearly should not be dissipated." Mr. Truman said he based his action on these factors:

1. Owners of pipelines, through which gas is distributed to consumers, are fixed to certain producers by the physical immobility of their lines and cannot move about seeking competitive sources and better prices.

2. Competition is further restricted by concentration of a large portion of natural gas reserves in a small number of owners.

3. The increasing demand for natural gas, coupled with its present price advantage, indicates that demand soon may approach supply.

The President took notice of claims that regulation would discourage costly exploration and development of new wells. This argument, he declared, rested primarily upon the assumption that the FPC would not give reasonable consideration to this expense, an assumption which he held to be not well founded.

Mr. Truman said some improvement in existing law might prove to be desirable, in which case he would have no objection to "reasonable" amendments.

Fire Damages House Of Longfellow's Birth

Portland, Me., April 15 (AP).—Fire today damaged the debris-littered house where poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born. It started in an ell and spread to a second-floor bedroom of the 165-year-old structure at 161 Fore st.

The dilapidated, three-story building has long been a center of stormy controversy. Longfellow admirers have asked that it be renovated because of its historical significance. Other citizens have insisted that the "eyesore" in Portland's waterfront district be torn down.

UNESCO Tells Of Education Aid From U. S.

The United States National Commission for UNESCO reported yesterday that 118 national organizations in this country contributed almost 24 million dollars in 1949 for educational reconstruction in war-devastated and other needy areas abroad.

The commission emphasized that its report covered only those organizations most closely associated with UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization) and did not include contributions made by many other schools, groups and communities in the United States.

European countries received more than eight million dollars of the American funds contributed through UNESCO. Of other sums thus far distributed, the Near East got more than five million dollars, most of which went to Israel. Asia and the Pacific countries received $5,176,000, and Latin America got about $350,000.

Mueller Sentenced To 5 Years in Prison

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
CORPL. GUSTAV MUELLER
Sentenced to five years

Garmisch - Partenkirchen, Germany, April 15—(AP).—A U. S. Air Force court martial convicted Corp. Gustav Mueller today of attempting to give American military secrets to Soviet Russia and sentenced him to five years in prison. He had denied the charge in tearful testimony.

Described in a report by Army doctors as "immature and emotionally unstable," the young airman from St. Paul, Minn., insisted he was only trying to trap some Russian spies with the melodramatic activities that led to his arrest last fall.

He repudiated stories he told United States Army agents who posed as Russian operatives and obtained documents from him after he sent a telegram to the Soviet consulate in Bern, Switzerland, last September, asking for contact. They testified he told them he believed in communism and wished to help out the party cause.

Mueller was the only defense witness in the two-day trial. His attorney, Elmo Gower of Cumberland, Md., used a light touch in questioning and chose not to deliver a closing argument.

Capt. Carl Felth of Biloxi, Miss., the trial judge advocate (prosecutor), ridiculed as "incredible" Mueller's declaration that he was only trying to trap Russian spies and attacked the defense efforts to make light of the case.

The court of seven officers deliberated 90 minutes.

In addition to the prison sentence, it ordered Mueller be dishonorably discharged from the Air Force, in which he enlisted in 1948 for a three-year term. The findings of such tribunals are subject to review by higher authorities.

Italians Held Set to Ignore Vote in Trieste

Rome, April 15 (NYHT).—An authorized government source tonight said Italy will not recognize the results of Sunday's elections in the Yugoslav-controlled area of Trieste.

The elections are nominally only local in character, but Italian newspapers have charged they are political in nature and intended as a forerunner of eventual Yugoslav annexation of the area.

The government spokesman made his comment after visits to Count Carlo Sforza, Italian Foreign Minister, by the Ambassadors of the United States, Britain and France.

The ambassadors were understood to have told Sforza the Allied representatives at Belgrade urged Yugoslavia to "take no rash steps" in Trieste, to make no moves toward annexation and to begin direct negotiations with Italy to settle their feud.

The ambassadors, it is understood, told Sforza they approved his speech suggesting that Italy and Yugoslavia negotiate in direct talks.

[The United Press reported from Trieste that Italians there were charging that Yugoslav troops are using bullets and bombs to terrorize pro-Italians in the Yugoslav zone. I said no injuries had been reported.

[Supporters of Marshal Tito are expected to win overwhelming majorities in the elections.]

Refugee Fund Goal Topped

Admiral Richard E. Byrd, chairman of the Iron Curtain Refugee Campaign of the International Reccue Committee, announced yesterday that funds for sending surplus foods to West Berliners had been oversubscribed within three weeks.

Byrd said the first appeal for food to help Berliners fight communism had resulted in subscription of more than $40,000 to the fund. This, he said, was more than sufficient to purchase the original minimum of two million pounds of powdered milk and eggs. He added that the minimum goal "has been so heavily oversubscribed that we are planning a large additional shipment."

PRINCESS FATIMA
Married without permission

VINCENT HILLYER

Tehran, Iran, April 15 (U.P.).—The Imperial Court today stripped beautiful Princess Fatima of all royal privileges because she married an American without permission of her brother, the Shah of Iran.

The 21-year-old Princess Fatima Pahlevi married Vincent Lee Hillyer, 25, a Harvard University medical student, Thursday in Civitavecchia, near Rome, after a whirlwind courtship.

The couple was reported to have met only three and a half months ago, when Hillyer crashed a New Year's Eve party given by the Shah, Fatima and their three sisters at Rome's exclusive Excelsior Hotel. The party followed the Shah's return from a tour of the United States.

Hillyer, whose parents live in Los Banos, Calif., is a close friend of Prince Mehmoud, Fatima's second brother, whom he met at the University of California.

The princess and her husband were reported planning a flight to New York for their honeymoon.

The couple was accompanied to the Civitavecchia town hall by Gino Scotis, Roberto Rosselini's lawyer. They had hoped for a quiet wedding, but word spread quickly

U. S. Halves Military Staff At Prague

Prague, April 15 (U.P.). — The United States Embassy today announced that Washington has ordered transfer of four officers on duty here, cutting military and air attache staffs in half.

It said they would leave "in the near future," leaving only four military officers at the Embassy.

The men being transferred are Lieut. Col. James E. Mrazek, Capt. John S. Childs, Capt. Donald G. MacNamara and Capt. Robert Beek.

The Embassy refused to confirm or deny the action was related to demands by other East European countries for removal of American military observers.

The decision was made within two days of the espionage trial of two Czech employes of the United States Information Service in which the United States military attache's office was described as the center of a black market operation.

Plastiras Premier

Greek King Swears in New Cabinet

Athens, April 15 (U.P.).—Premier Nicholas Plastiras and his 18-man coalition cabinet were sworn into office tonight by King Paul.

The cabinet includes six members of Plastiras' own National Progressive Party, five of George Papandreou's Democratic Socialists and seven members of Sophocles Venizelos' Liberals.

Plastiras gave the two most important posts, next to his own, to his political colleagues and sometime rivals. Venizelos, preceding premier, was named deputy premier and minister of foreign affairs.

The broad political coalition is certain to meet American desires for a government representative of the people.

(A State Department spokesman, expressing approval of the Plastras coalition, said that reforms demanded by United States Ambassador Henry F. Grady March 31 now can be carried out more readily.—Editor's Note.)

The new coalition can muster a total of 136 votes and, with the three Agrarians and three Nationalists who probably will support the government, should be able to win a vote of confidence.

Leopold Offers to Surrender Powers to Son Temporarily

Brussels, Belgium, April 15 (AP).—Exiled King Leopold III sought to end Belgium's political crisis today by offering to surrender his powers temporarily to his 19-year-old son, Prince Baudouin.

There were indications, however, the proposal would satisfy neither the anti-Leopold Socialists nor the pro-Leopold Social Christians. Spokesmen of the divided Liberals, Belgium's third major party, said "certain clarifications" will be necessary.

Leopold spoke in Flemish and French in a transcribed broadcast that lasted six minutes and 55 seconds. The records were made in Switzerland, where he has made his home since liberation from the Germans in 1945, and flown to Brussels.

It was the first time the people had heard the King's voice since he addressed the nation in May, 1940, when the Germans invaded Belgium. His surrender after only 18 days of fighting and refusal to join his ministers in exile split loyalties of the Belgians.

Leaders of the Social Christian Party are to meet Sunday for a discussion of the message. Socialist Party committees will meet Monday and Liberal leaders Tuesday.

Speaking slowly, the 48-year-old King made it clear that he would not surrender his powers to his son until Parliament invited him to return to the throne.

Leopold also stressed that he would retain the right to take the powers back from his son at any moment that he and the government decided this was in the interest of the nation.

In two earlier declarations, March 16 and April 7, the King said it was up to Parliament to decide whether he should be returned to the throne or abdicate.

His first statement said the March 12 national referendum had shown an indisputable majority in favor of his return. The vote was 57.68 percent in his favor.

Earlier this week, however, former Premier Paul-Henri Spaak told his Socialist Party that he could not accept the King's statements and the party must prepare to fight for years, if necessary.

Democrats Attack 'Sniping' by GOP

Three Democratic leaders yesterday charged certain unnamed Republicans with playing Russia's game in their search for "spies and devils" in the State Department.

Without identifying Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) and others who have attacked the loyalty of some State Department employes and advisers, they said "sniping" Republicans were encouraging partisan bickering. This, they declared, could lead to another Pearl Harbor.

Vice President Barkley, opening Washington's sesquicentennial celebration with a speech from the Capitol steps, assailed those who "sow rumors and suspicions." These individuals, he said, would consider Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Tom Paine "revolutionary" and "subversive" if those patriots were alive today.

Enemies "Encouraged"

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), according to the United Press, told a Democratic rally at Carbondale, Ill., that now was the time to end "partisan" tactics which he said had "dismayed our allies and encouraged our enemies."

At Indiana, Pa., Senate Democratic Whip Francis J. Myers (Pa.) told a Democratic meeting some Republican leaders were attempting "to destroy the bipartisan foreign policy." He challenged them to offer an alternative of their own.

Myers praised the bipartisan efforts of Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and of former Secretary of State and Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, a Republican who has strongly denounced McCarthy's attacks.

And Democratic Chairman William M. Boyle, jr., warned that a series of "purges and persecutions" would mean a resort to police state methods to combat communism, which is being resisted because "it is a police state government." Writing in "Capital Comment," a publication of the Democratic National Committee, he warned against permitting "irresponsible charges by some Republicans lead you into retaliating with the same kind of dangerous partisanship on foreign issues." He said charges against the State Department and Secretary of State Acheson should be denied but that denials should be dignified and factual."

On the other side of the fence, Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) unsuccessfully tried to have former Communist Louis F. Budenz submit his list of an alleged 400 "concealed Communists" to a Senate committee. Budenz, former editor of the Communist Daily Worker and now an instructor at Fordham University, charged recently that there were 400 Communists concealed in positions of influence in the United States. He is scheduled to testify Tuesday before a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigating McCarthy's charges of communism in the State Department.

However, Subcommittee Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) declined to go along with Ferguson's suggestion. He said his subcommittee was restricted to investigation solely of alleged Communists in the State Department.

Barkley declared that those who cast suspicion on the State Department were as dangerous to the Nation as those who threaten agression from without. Without naming the objects of his denunciation, he said:

"The sharpest threats to the freedoms which we enjoy here in America have come, up to now, not from outside sources, but from within.

"We hear voices among us demanding that we cede away some of our freedom here at home in order to protect ourselves from the outside. And these same forces which would abridge our freedoms sow rumors and suspicion among us."

In his speech at Carbondale, Lucas said Americans "have been bewildered and astounded by a series of savage attacks upon the men who must bear the burden of guiding our foreign policy."

"It is time," he declared, "for true Americans to ask their Senators to compose their differences, to close ranks with their leaders, and to join in the great effort which must be made to save our civilization from the hordes of communism.

"It is time for good Americans to stop sniping at one another, to grant the sincerity and honesty of all decent men whether they happen to be Republicans or Democrats or independents, and to give our best energies to the constructive programs which we have launched for the salvation of the free world."

Rep. Martin Urges End Of 'Red Ink, Herring'

Pittsburgh, April 15 (AP).—Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.), tonight called on people of all parties to join in a "crusade fo end the era of red ink and red herring."

The Republican House minority leader said in a talk prepared for the Amen Corner Club:

"Our crusade today is to save constitutional government. We must preserve the freedom of the American people. We must fight off a new threat of slavery—slavery to government and to crushing, crippling debt."

Martin offered a five-point program for "American revival, security and progress." His proposals:

1. Riddance of the wartime excise taxes and other punitive taxation.

2. Creation of tax incentive for small business.

3. Balancing of the budget and reduction of taxes.

4. Careful administration of the tariff program to protect American jobs.

5. Removal of the "threat of socialization which hangs like a pall over the spirit of American thrift and industry."

The Massachusetts congressman flayed Government spending and said:

"Sickening to the patriot's heart is the orgy of waste, extravagance and plain bad management encountered on every hand in Washington today — shocking waste, sinful waste—demoralizing waste of the people's substance."

Martin termed Federal aid a "myth," saying:

"Every dollar sent back to the States from Washington comes from the States in the first place. Every State except one is taxed more for these services than it gets back."

Another Martin, Senator Edward Martin (R., Pa.), also spoke at the dinner meeting. His subject, too, was Government spending. He declared:

"The greatest threat to American freedom is the atomic bomb of national bankruptcy caused by excessive taxation and reckless, extravagant Government spending."

McCarthy Charges 'Too Wild' At Start, Sen. Bridges Says

By Edwin R. Bayley

Milwaukee, April 15 (Spl.).—Wisconsin's Senator Joe McCarthy "went too far" in charging there are 57 card-carrying Communists in the State Department, Senator H. Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) said here last night.

McCarthy is a "real American" and was sincere in bringing his charges, but he was "too wild" at the start of his campaign, Bridges said. Bridges also implied that McCarthy's methods of attempting to rid the Government of Communists were not those he would have chosen.

Bridges spoke before about 200 members of the Executives Club here, but most of his remarks about McCarthy were made to reporters after the speech. He seemed less enthusiastic about the Wisconsin Senator's campaign than his audience. He said he knew he would be asked about McCarthy in Milwaukee and that he wanted to leave the impression that McCarthy meant well without being specific about his charges.

"McCarthy will never prove that there are 57 card-carrying Communists in the State Department," Bridges said. "I've been investigating around Washington for a long time, and even I would find it difficult to prove that there was one card-carrying Communist in the State Department."

Bridges said he thought McCarthy would not be damaged politically if he were able to bring forth evidence that there are just one or two Communists in the Government. He said McCarthy, in his opinion, should have talked only of "bad security risks" rather than of Communists, however.

In his talk, Bridges defended McCarthy on the ground of "where there's smoke there's fire." On the other hand there are "a lot of loyal people" in the State Department.

Bridges mentioned twice in the speech that a Senate investigating committee which he had headed in 1947 had accomplished what McCarthy was striving for—"but quietly, almost secretly, without publicity—and we got results."

Bridges has been a vociferous critic of the New Deal, the Fair Deal and United States foreign policy. On March 28 he charged that a "master spy" was working for Russia within our Government.

He took his own advice and talked chiefly about "bad security risks" rather than Communists in Government.

"When they admit discharging 91 homosexuals it doesn't look good," he said. "A man doesn't have to be a spy or a Communist to be a bad security risk. He can be a drunkard or a criminal or a homosexual. We can't have this country loaded with such bad security risks at this time."

The audience, however, wanted blood, and when Bridges criticized Judge Dorothy Kenyon, one of those named by McCarthy, there was prolonged cheering.

"Judge Kenyon is a woman who joined 28 subversive organizations," he said, "whether she's a Communist or not, I don't know, but I don't want anyone that fudgy-mixed representing me.

"I don't know if Owen Lattimore is a Communist or not. But when it takes 14 typewritten pages to summarize the FBI report on him—I say that man is no man to represent my country."

Bridges said he didn't want to speak for McCarthy—"he can speak for himself"—but that there had been "wild propaganda in the counter charges" directed at the Wisconsin Senator.

"If there is any doubt about these security risks," he said, "the doubt should be resolved in favor of the country rather than the individual. Our original investigation was conducted quietly, with no lead to the public. We can rid ourselves of bad security risks without a lot of trouble."

The 1947 investigations resulted in the formation of the loyalty boards, which "by and large have operated effectively," Bridges said. In some cases the boards have become too closely identified with the departments with which they are concerned, however, he said.

4 More Refuse Answers In House Hawaii Hearing

Honolulu, April 15 (AP). — The parade of witnesses refusing to answer questions of the House Committee on Un-American Activities rose to 15 today.

Acting Chairman Walter (D., Pa.) said all would face action for contempt of the House of Representatives.

Fourteen of them — 11 since the Hawaii hearings began Monday and three more today—refused to say whether they are or have been Communist Party members.

The fifteenth, Mrs. Esther M. Bristow, refused to admit affiliation with the Hawaii Civil Liberties Committee, although committee investigators produced documents identifying her as treasurer. She was not asked if she were a Communist.

On Baltic Flight

U. S. to Reply Soon to Note From Soviet

By The Associated Press

The United States probably will reply early this week to Russia's protest that an American B-29 airplane crossed the Soviet Baltic Sea coast April 8 and fired on Russian fighter planes that sought to force it to land.

Indications yesterday were that the Russian version of the alleged incident will be rejected outright. But State Department officials are still working on the American reply, and the exact line to be taken in the finished note remains to be finally decided.

Among other questions, Secretary of State Dean Acheson and his top advisers apparently still have to determine whether evidence supplied by the Defense Department adds up to a conclusion that Russian fighters actually shot down an unarmed Navy patrol craft somewhere over the international waters of the Baltic sea.

There is considerable speculation among officials here that this may have been what happened. The Russian note said that a Russian fighter fired on the "B-29" but claimed that it took this action only after the American plane "opened fire." It added that the "B-29" turned and disappeared.

Acheson received a formal report yesterday from the Defense Department covering issues raised by the Russian protest, made last Tuesday, and also results of the Baltic Sea search for the Navy patrol plane, which disappeared last Saturday on a flight from Wiesbaden, Germany, to Copenhagen, Denmark.

Responsible officials said the report from the Defense Department was not final.

State Department Press Officer Michael McDermott said "we are working on the Russian matter and the investigation is still on."

Baltic Plane Sights Life Raft As Bomber Hunt Nears End

flying over the Baltic at that time. This belief also was indicated in Soviet press reports, although the official Russian protest said the American plane was a B-29 type bomber.

[The Soviet newspapers Pravda and Izvestia today charged the American press with a "complete distortion of facts" in reporting the disappearance of the Navy plane, the United Press reports from Moscow.]

[The newspapers carried three columns of foreign press reaction to the plane incident along with Russian Tass news agency dispatches from New York and London attacking the coverage by American newspapers.

["The American press plays down or completely ignores the real goals of the activity of American aircraft in the Baltic," it said.

[The dispatches said the American newspapers "try to disregard" the part of the Soviet note that said the "American plane crudely violated the Soviet border and first opened fire on Soviet planes."]

The missing plane, a four-engined Navy Privateer, disappeared last Saturday on a training flight from Wiesbaden to Copenhagen. Three days later, the Russian government protested that an American plane had flown over the Soviet frontier of Latvia and exchanged shots with Soviet fighters and disappeared toward the Baltic.

United States officials said the Navy plane was unarmed and Latvia lies more than 300 miles east of its course, but they expressed belief it may have been the aircraft involved, since no other United States planes were flying in the Baltic Area at the time.

(The Defense Department here yesterday gave Secretary of State Dean Acheson its version of what may have happened in the Moscow-reported United States-Russian air scrap over the Baltic.

(The report, which will form the basis of the American reply to the Soviet protest over the incident, was not made public.)

Missing Man's Father Hurt in 5-Story Plunge

New York, April 15 (AP).—William Seeschaf, 62, despondent since receiving word that his son was aboard the Navy plane missing over the Baltic, plunged five floors down a dumbwaiter shaft today and was injured seriously.

At Fordham Hospital, doctors said Seeschaf suffered a possible spine fracture and a broken leg.

Seeschaf's wife said the Navy notified them Monday that their son, Lieut. Howard William Seeschaf, formerly of Arlington, Va., was aboard the Navy Privateer missing a week. She said her husband had been despondent since.

After he plunged to the bottom of the shaft, Seeschaf crawled into the back yard, where he was found by the building superintendent, Felix Herbst.

Ives Backs Truman On NLRB Change

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 12 — abolishing the post of general counsel to the National Labor Relations Board and transferring its functions to the board and its chairman—yesterday won the important support of Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.).

Ives charged that most of the argument about Reorganization Plan No. 12 was based on politics and partisanship, and that the disputants had lost sight of the fact that it would lessen confusion over authority within the NLRB and thereby help the Taft-Hartley Management-Labor Relations Act operate more smoothly and fairly.

Considered Expert

Although he is not a member of the Senate Labor Committee, Ives is regarded as one of Congress' experts on management-labor legislation.

Reorganization Plan No. 12, proposed by President Truman, automatically goes into effect late next month, unless either chamber of Congress specifically rejects the law by a constitutional majority. The House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments has given the plan a green light; the Senate Expenditures Committee, of which Ives is a member, has the issue under consideration, and will vote on it this week.

Opponents of Plan No. 12, led by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), hope to block the proposal in the Senate, after an anticipated vote for rejection by the Senate committee.

Senator Ives said yesterday he deplored the comment and editorializing about Plan No. 12.

"One might gather that this plan, if allowed to become effective, would destroy the Taft-Hartley Act and constitute a great victory for labor over management," Ives said. "These implications . . . are unjust and unfounded . . . They reflect a state of mind and attitude which can never produce a sound and equitable labor relations statute in this country."

"What is at stake in this particular controversy over Plan No. 12," Ives said, " is not the reduction or the elimination or the abolition of functions. Neither is it a question of the separation of powers by statute.

"This plan is aimed to correct a very unfortunate condition occasioned by the very poor draftsmanship in the Taft-Hartley Act, which due to its ambiguity and inadequacy, has caused a great deal of confusion and conflict between the Labor Relations Board and the general counsel and—most unfortunate of all—in the minds of the parties coming before the board or the general counsel."

Ives observed that much of the opposition to Plan No. 12 was due to the circumstance that Robert N. Denham, the general counsel to NLRB, "has appeared to be more friendly to management than to labor."

The New York Senator denounced those who insist that the Government should "wield an even bigger stick" in management-labor relations.

180 Go Out

Bookbinders Strike; Seek Hourly Raise

Local 4, AFL Brotherhood of Bookbinders, yesterday called out its 180 members in 22 plants here in a strike for a shorter workweek but without reduction in take-home pay.

The walkout began at 10:30 a. m., but the full effect of the strike will not be felt until Monday morning, because only 20 or so bookbinders ordinarily work over the weekend.

According to Robert Munson, union business agent, the local voted unanimously last Friday night to strike in order to obtain a 37½-hour workweek with the present 40-hour pay of $85, which would amount to an hourly pay increase of 13 cents.

The bookbinders originally asked for 27½ cents and hour pay increase in a move to attain parity with the printers in the same shops, who now get $2.40 an hour, Munson said. The union shop employers division of the Graphic Arts Association here first suggested a $19 a week cut in pay and in their last offer, on Friday, proposed a renewal of the present contract, according to Munson.

Union officials said this is the first authorized strike by the 100-year-old local in recent years. Two years ago the local held an unauthorized 24-hour continuous meeting, and won a 30-cent-an hour raise in pay.

The strike, Munson said, would tie up publications of the National Geographic Magazine and a number of labor periodicals.

High School Orators To Speak Tuesday

Four Washington-Lee orators will speak at a meeting of the Arlington High School's Parent-Teachers Association, scheduled for 8 p. m. Tuesday at the school, 4035 N. 13th st. Arlington.

Speakers will be Henry Renz, who placed second in the American Legion State Oratorical Contest and "Red" Grunderman, Diane Henderson, and Marilyn King, all of whom will represent the school at the coming State Public Speaking Contest in Charlottesville.

The Washington Post

after a concert by the Marine, Army and Air Force bands.

Several flights of 12 jet fighters of the District Air National Guard roared in formation over the Capitol. A salute of 35 guns — similar to the salute given to the then 35 States of the Union when the Freedom statue was raised on the Capitol — was fired by four 75-millimeter field artillery pieces in front of the Capitol building, but went unheard in the Capitol Plaza.

Representative Horan, a member of the Sesquicentennial Commission, pointed out that Washington was the only capital in the world built to shelter a Government which was first created on paper.

"Hub of Civilized World"

"In 150 years the city has become the capital of the greatest nation in the civilized world and the hub of the civilized world," said Representative Horan. "It is the world's symbol of the hope of humanity for freedom."

He said he hoped every man, woman and child in the United States would participate in the Sesquicentennial celebration, which continues for seven months.

"Let each and every one of us be impressed with what it means to be Americans," he concluded.

". . . One and Inseparable"

Particularly stirring was Edward Arnold's recitation of an excerpt from Daniel Webster's speech on Union, containing the famous words, ". . . Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable."

Arnold and George Murphy, who gave a passage from Thomas Jefferson, were thanked by the narrator, William A. Wood of the State Department, for "those echoes of voices of freedom that have resounded around the world from the very ground on which we stand."

In the invocation, Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle prayed that the name of Washington be a by-word for freedom among the peoples of the earth. Bishop Angus Dun of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese prayed that we be set at liberty from fear and prejudice, and from "whatsoever threatens to enslave us from within and from around us."

Several Singers

Singers included Irra Petina, who sang "Life"; William Warfield, "Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair"; Muriel Rahn, "Through the Years;" Lucille Manners, "God Bless America"; Ann Crowley, "Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor"; and Gladys Swarthout, dressed as the Goddess of Freedom, "Bless This House."

A dramatic profile, "This Broad Land," was the finale. Patricia Hall, Harriet Hullfish, George Foley, and Harvey Shipman represented the East, South, North and West of the Nation.

Another 10,000 persons braved the chill last night on the Monument Grounds to watch a spectacular display of fireworks capping the day's activities. Highlights was the fiery outlining of the Capitol dome and the familiar "Spirit of Seventy-Six" in red, blue, green and orange pyrotechnics.

4 Bottle Clubs Ignore Suits

collector's office informed him the total amount due is $4377.31.

Further, there is a tax lien on file in District Court against the club for $319.26 in District unemployment compensation taxes.

And Municipal Court records show a total of 24 lawsuits have been filed against the club since 1948, mostly for supplies. Two were for less than $50, 18 for amounts from $50 to $500 and four for $500 to $3000.

Meserole said yesterday that a part of his Federal tax difficulties arose from his refusal to pay the 20 per cent cabaret tax. He said if he signs the tax statement the levy is on a public performance for profit, then he would play directly into the hands of Fay's staff by providing evidence on which to obtain revocation of his charter.

Schwartz said he will confer again with representatives of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in an attempt to work out a solution of the tax cases, but said he is not handling any of the club's other legal actions. James Laughlin is Meserole's attorney in resisting the revocation, the secretary-manager said. Mark Friedlander is his attorney in a landlord-tenant suit over a lease. Maurice A. Guervitz and John T. Bonner have, or still are, representing him in some of the other actions.

Meserole has been a campaigner here for a law to license the after-hours bottle clubs and subject them to District regulation, the same as other licensed places.

Brickmen Win Welfare Fund

only three unions: bricklayers, plasterers, and stone cutters.

Had Industry 'Over Barrel'

According to the lathe employers, this union had the industry over a barrel since its contract expired at a time when the local builders' were in need of twice as many lathers as available.

Negotiations for a new contract are underway between the employers and the AFL carpenters, whose demands this year are limited to a 3 percent non-contributory welfare fund. Since the 4500 AFL carpenters are now getting $2.50 an hour, the request amounts to 7½ cents an hour increase in benefits.

Employers have thus far offered a welfare fund amounting to 5 cents an hour for a two year contract. For the time being, the negatiations are stymied.

The carpenters, who led the strike parade last year and conducted a seven weeks' walkout to win a 10 cents an hour pay hike, are expected to reach a settlement with the employers before the May 1 contract termination date.

Chrysler Strike Talks Go On

Detroit, April 15 (AP).—Company and union negotiators tried again today to settle the 81-day-old Chrysler strike.

But they and Federal and State mediators agreed there would be no settlement this weekend.

There were reports Chrysler might yield on one important point in the troublesome pension issue—key to the entire dispute. But there were indications such a concession might depend upon the CIO United Auto Workers giving some ground, too.

One source said the company had hinted it was willing to make some provision for back credits in the latest pension plan it offered the union. This would mean paying into a trust fund enough money to cover years already worked by employes. That money would be credited toward $100-a-month pensions at age 65.

UAW President Walter Reuther said Friday that Chrysler already had agreed to cover future service credits by paying into the fund as workers earned their pensions.

Rail Union Leaders Hold 3-Hour Strike, Call Parley

Chicago, April 15 (U.P.)—Union leaders held a three-hour meeting today to discuss whether to call 110,000 firement and enginemen out on strike against the Nation's railroads.

Officials of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen adjourned their secret strategy session late today and said they would meet again Sunday. They declined to comment on their discussions.

Pepco to Ask Rate Boost in Near Future

HELEN M. MARTELL
First Pepco officer

The Potomac Electric Power Co. will ask the Public Utilities Commission for a rate increase "in the near future," it was revealed yesterday.

Announcement was mdae by Alfred G. Neal, president and chairman of the Pepco board, at its annual meeting.

Just how much increase will be asked for has not been decided, Neal said.

Two Uncertain Factors

It will depend on two presently uncertain factors, he told The Washington Post: Outcome of current negotiations with labor, and "what Congress might do in the way of the Federal corporation tax."

Grounds for the increase, Neal said, will be that company earnings in the first quarter of this year were below the 5.5 per cent return authorized on the present rate.

Constantly mounting costs of operation make the increase necessary, the Pepco president claimed. He said the company will file for the increase the latter part of May or early June.

The utility company's last increase took effect July 21, 1948. This amounted to an increase of 30 cents a month for power to the average family.

Expansion Necessary

The PUC granted that increase after Pepco officials said it was needed to offset increased costs of operation, as well as to permit needed expansion. The increase was calculated to give the Pepco some $2,748,000 more in annual revenue.

Pepco's plan to sell 30 million dollars in bonds this year was also announced by Neal. But 20 million dollars of this will be for refinancing, meaning the company will get only 10 million dollars in new money.

The money is needed for expansion, Neal said. A year ago the company outlined a 66 million dollar expansion program.

New Common Stock

Common stock holders will have the opportunity, the Pepco chief said, to subscribe for new common stock on a basis of one share for each five shares now held.

In the annual election of officers a woman was named to a company office for the first time in the 54-year-history of the company.

She is Miss Helen M. Martell, who becomes an assistant secretary.

Born In Boston

Miss Martell, who lives at 2500 Q st. nw., has been with the company since 1934. Boston-born, she was graduated from Western High School here and George Washington University. She received an LL. B. degree from the G. W. law school in 1939 and has been admitted to practice before the District Court and Court of Appeals.

The board of 12 directors was reelected, as were all other officers, including Neal.

Two recent appointments were announced: George Bisset, who began with Pepco since 1919, to be chief operating engineer; and Archie V. Hawkins, who started with the company as a messenger in 1902 at the age of 14, to be director of purchasing and stores.

Garden Items Mostly Exempt From Sales Tax

Most items needed to plant a garden are exempt from the District sales tax, Administrator Allan F. Brooke announced yesterday.

Not taxable are:

Seeds and bulbs, fertilizer (except soil conditioners or correctives), food producing plants, roots and trees, lime and land plaster when used for gardening or farming, livestock and poultry (except dogs, canaries, etc.) and their feed.

However, the following items are taxable:

Plants, trees, etc., to be used for ornamental purposes, insect and weed killers, hormone sprays and powders, tools and equipment, lime for non-agricultural uses, feed for animals other than those on the nontaxable list.

Rossellini Lawyer Sees Early Wedding

Rome, April 15 (AP).—An attorney for Roberto Rossellini said tonight the film director will marry Ingrid Bergman soon, "probably outside Italy."

It appeared doubtful, however, that the long-delayed marriage will take place in London, as had been reported in the United States. Commenting earlier today on this report, Rossellini himself said: "That's one I hadn't heard."

Argument Spices Md. Zone Hearing

Heated words between the attorney for a rezoning applicant and an official of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission over the commission's policies and procedures climaxed a day-long zoning hearing by the Montgomery County Council yesterday at the Bethesda County Building.

The flare-up was touched off by Attorney John R. Reeves when he concluded his appeal for apartment zoning of a 45-acre tract at Wisconsin ave. and Cedar lane, Bethesda, for a 10 million dollar development.

Reeves, counsel for Mrs. Irene W. Parker and the Congress Construction Co., accused the commission of "making its recommendations according to whim—depending on which way the wind blows." He charged the planning body with having no "sincere planning program."

No Ruling Yet

He compared contradicting language from two opinions prepared by the MNCPPC on separate applications for rezoning of the Casey Tract off Connecticut ave. at the rear of the Naval Medical Center. The council has not ruled on this application.

One stated that a proposed apartment development there would be served by "an adequate network of roads," he quoted, while a later one contended that Connecticut ave. "is completely inadequate for the present traffic load." The first was contained in a favorable recommendation and the latter in an unfavorable one.

Commission Vice Chairman Blair Lee 3d expressed amazement at "the attacks being made on the commission today for being responsize to the people." He asked why public hearings on zoning plans should be held "if no consideration is to be given to testimony received" with regard to altering proposals.

He added that the first opinion was written by Col. E. Brooke Lee, his father whom he succeeded in office, and "does not represent the views of the present commission."

Social Bliss Offered

Lee reminded Reeves that "several bills have been introduced in the Legislature for the purpose of eliminating many functions on the grounds that the commission was not responsive "to the people."

"And you were the sponsor of these bills," he reminded Reeves, a member of the county's all-Republican legislative delegation.

Reeves, however, had the last say, asking Lee "why, if the commission is so responsive to public opinion now, it is not so at times other than in election years."

The council deferred action on the Parker petition and another by Andrew Saul for similar rezoning of 71.5 acres adjoining Rock Creek Park and the Parkwood subdivision. Th planning body recommended denial of both. Some 75 citizens opposed the Parker application, with 35 others appearing against the Saul petition.

Grant and Lee Meet in Washington...

McLean House Dedication Today At Appomattox

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Headline of the week: Grant meets Lee near 12th and E.

Whereupon they laid aside past family differences, shook hands in a spirit of amity and made plans for today's dedication of the reconstructed McLean House at Appomattox, Va., where their forefathers met 85 years ago.

There was a one-generation gap yesterday as Maj. Gen. Usysses S. Grant, 30, 68-year-old grandson of the former President, met at the Raleigh Hotel with Robert E. Lee, 4th, 25-year-old great grandson of the pride of the South.

Lee in the House

But that discrepancy was corrected by the presence of a United Press reporter, Robert E. Lee of East Orange, N. J., who was assigned to cover the event by sheer coincidence.

General Lee's great-grandson arrived by air from San Francisco, where he sells duplicating machines for a printing firm. His family home, however, is in Annandale, Va., and he graduated last year from Washington and Lee University in Lexington.

Young Lee drove down to Lynchburg last night, where he attended a W. & L. dance. General Grant will motor to Appomattox today for the ceremony, which is expected to attract 8000 persons to the courthouse town of 2000 population.

The red brick house where Lee surrendered the Southern armies to Grant in April of 1865 was torn down in 1893. But an exact copy has been built on the same spot by the National Park Service, and the descendants of the two generals will officiate at its dedication at 1:15 p. m.

Abbitt to Preside

Representative Watkins M. Abbitt (D., Va.) will act as presiding officer, while Mayor George Buchanan of Appomattox—who was here yesterday to greet the guests of honor—will be host for the occasion.

The Marine Corps School band will approach the McLean House from the Union Army's last positions of the Civil War, led by General Grant III. The Virginia Military Institute band, led by Lee IV, will approach from the South's last line.

Judge Joel Flood of Appomattox will introduce Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, biographer of Lee and Washington. The Richmond historian will describe Lee's retreat from the Richmond-Petersburg line and the surrender at Appomattox.

The McLean House dedication will be directed by Newton B. Drury, director of National Park Service.

Chapman to Follow

Senator Virgil M. Chapman (D., Ky.) will follow Virginia's Gov. John S. Battle on the speaker's platform.

Mrs. William Haggard, president-general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and Mrs. Roy E. Kyle, president of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs, will also speak.

Congressman Abbitt and State Senator Charles T. Moses will introduce three granddaughters of Wilmer McLean, who owned the original house, and other guests.

McLean's descendants are Mrs. Leonidas Triplett of Arlington; Mrs. John Quynn of Frederick, Md., and Mrs. Bruce Campbell of Lutherville, Md.

Sen. Lehman Sees Welfare State as Insecurity Cure

New York, April 15 (U.P.)—Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.), said today the welfare state is the cure for insecurity that "still haunts millions."

"To my mind," the Senator said, "the welfare state is simply a state in which people are free to develop their individual capacities, to receive just rewards for their talents and to engage in the pursuit of happiness, unburdened by fear of actual hunger, actual homelessness, or oppression by reason of race, creed or color."

Lehman spoke at the fourth anniversary meeting of the League for Industrial Democracy after he was awarded the league's citation for public service.

"The measures which would provide for the welfare of the people are the surest weapons against totalitarianism," he said.

Senate Group Weighs D. C. Bills Monday

The Senate District Committee on Monday will take up a number of minor bills.

Scheduled for consideration at a 10 a. m. session are bills to regulate optometry (already passed by the House), to amend the child labor law to permit boys over 12 to sell newspapers after school, to admit paying patients to the Home for the Aged and to set up a surplus property office to purchase ground for school use.

A District Judiciary subcommittee, at an afternoon session, will consider a bill to permit a retired police officer to serve on the Boxing Commission and several other minor matters.

Medical Facilities There Inadequate, Md. Paper Says

Emergency medical facilities at the University of Maryland campus here are inadequate, says the Diamondback, student newspaper.

An editorial in the current issue suggests the infirmary staff should be enlarged and a home should be provided on the campus for a doctor so he can be reached quickly.

The newspaper cited the collapse of Harold Kelso while lecturing here March 23. It took 45 minutes for an ambulance to arrive, said the Diamondback, and no doctor could be found at College Park to treat Kelso. He died of a cerebral hemorrhage in a Washington hospital the next day.

have been turned over to the United States Attorney, Reynolds said.

Nationally, officials said they expect the 100th million American will be enumerated on Monday out of the estimated 151 million population. Much of the difference, however, is accounted for by rural areas where the census has given enumerators until April 29 to finish up.

Bad weather—floods, snow and dust storms—impeded census takers in many parts of the Nation. Many cities reported trouble finding people at home, though census takers have been working practically every evening. It may take two weeks more to finish the urban count.

Too Much for Boss

"Never again for me," said Cleveland's census boss, Joseph P. Mull, who complained people just won't stay home and be counted.

A United Press roundup showed big lags in many cities—Chicago, San Francisco, New York, Denver and New Orleans among them.

At least four New York enumerators broke legs. One was hurt when he stepped in a hole in a sidewalk. Another suffered a heart attack from climbing too many stairs.

In Seattle, Wash., an enumerator was bitten by a dog. In New Orleans a woman enumerator was chased from a yard by five belligerent geese.

Mountains Are Obstacles

In Los Angeles the area supervisor reported it would take until mid-May to count residents of mountain areas and Indian reservations. Residents of tiny islands in the St. Lawrence River, in upstate New York, won't be reachable until the thaw sets in in a week or 10 days.

Shortly before the census finally comes to an end, the Census Bureau plans to have newspapers run forms to be filled out by persons who may have been missed. These forms then will be checked against names already gathered.

Heidt Band Off Today On AF Tour in Europe

Horace Heidt and his orchestra will take off from the Military Air Transport terminal at National Airport at 10 this morning for a 24-day entertainment tour of the occupied zones of Germany and Austria.

The four, sponsored by the Air Force, will include a special show for the German Youth Association in Berlin on April 25 to help counteract Communist plans for a May Day demonstration. Benefits also will be played by the group in Paris and London.

Miss Simpson to Speak

Maryland's first woman secretary of state, Miss Vivian V. Simpson, Rockville attorney and president of the Montgomery County Bar Association, will speak at a breakfast of the D. C. Democratic Club at 11 a. m. today at the Women's National Democratic Club house, 1527 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Marriages, Divorces Show Decline in U.S.

For the third consecutive year, both marriages and divorces in the Nation declined in 1949, preliminary figures complied by the Public Health Service and released yesterday disclosed.

But marriages were off more, down to their lowest rate since 1939.

The figures showed 1,585,440 marriages and an estimated 386,000 divorces last year. This compares with 1,811,155 marriages in 1948 and 408,000 divorces. It represents a 12.5 and 5.4 percent drop respectively.

Compared with the Nation as a whole, the District shows up favorably: A higher marriage rate and lower divorce rate, that is.

Nation-wide crude marriage rate for 1949 was 10.7 marriages per 1000 population and 2.6 divorces.

But for the District it was 11.5 marriages and 1.8 divorces. This represents 9991 marriages and 1586 divorces. In 1948 the figures were 11,591 marriages and 1955 divorces.

Maryland was even a better hitching-land, being one of the Nation's leaders: 47,842 marriages, a rate of 22. Divorces: 4919, rate of 2.3.

For Virginia it was 33,273 marriages, a rate of 10.7, and 6169 divorces, a rate of 2.

Marriages have dropped 30.8 percent and divorces 36.7 percent since 1946, year of the all-time high for both marriages and divorces in the United States.

Legislation On AEC Pay Boosts Due

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Amendments to the Atomic Energy Act designed to pay a Cabinet-level salary to the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission and lift the pay of the AEC general manager and four commissioners will be introduced in the Senate Monday.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, who will sponsor the pay increases, termed them "badly needed corrections."

He said he hoped his proposed $22,500 salary for the top AEC post "may assist the President somewhat in securing the services of a fully qualified man for the now vacant post of AEC chairman."

Now Gets $17,500

The commission chairman now receives $17,500. That was higher than the Cabinet rate when the act was passed in 1946, and was deliberately set higher, McMahon said. Salaries of the general manager and four commissioners were then fixed at the Cabinet level of $15,000.

Subsequently Congress raised Cabinet salaries to $22,500—$5000 higher than the AEC chairman's pay and $7500 above the rate paid the other top commission officials. The amendments would raise the pay of the general manager and commissioners to $20,000.

McMahon said Congress originally set a high scale for the commission "because it believed—and rightly — that the commission would bear a weight of responsibility unsurpassed throughout our Government."

That responsibility hasn't changed, even though AEC salaries are now proportionately lower, the Connecticut Democrat stressed.

$4-Billion Project

"The Atomic Energy Commission has charge of a four-billion-dollar project, upon whose success or failure may hinge the destiny of the United States and the entire free world," he said in a statement.

"The AEC commissioners are the only high Federal officers expressly forbidden by law to 'engage in any other business, vocation or employment'—and therefore an adequate salary is particularly indicated."

McMahon's hint that his bill was designed to help the President find a qualified AEC chairman recalled the President's frequent complaint that Government pay scales make it difficult to persuade top-caliber men to serve in Washington.

The focal AEC chairmanship has been vacant since Davis Lilienthal resigned February 15. Sumner T. Pike, Maine Republican, is now serving as acting chairman. At Key West, Mr. Truman indicated he would name a permanent chairman when he filled the next AEC vacancy, after Commissioner Lewis L. Strauss' resignation became effective. Strauss stepped out yesterday.

"More Pay Than Bosses"

In urging the upward AEC pay adjustment, McMahon noted that the AEC deputy general manager and the AEC manager of Hanford operations now receive $18,000, or more pay than either the AEC commissioners or the AEC general manager, Carroll L. Wilson. In this "curious" instance, he said, "subordinates receive more pay than

In addition, McMahon's bill sets a definite term of three years for the general manager, who now serves for no fixed period. McMahon said the three-year stipulation "lends a reasonable element of stability to the office and yet does not mean that a general manager would 'outlive' the commissioners, whose terms are eventually to be five years."

Senators Plan State Liaison

—both former Senators—to advisory posts in the State Department.

Connally said he would place his reorganization plan before the full Senate Foreign Relations Committee probably Tuesday. He said there was a "good reaction" from Senators who have seen the plan.

It would divide the committee into eight sub-groups to handle: United Nations affairs, European affairs, Far Eastern affairs, American Republics affairs, Near Eastern and African affairs, economic and social policy affairs, public affairs, and State Department organization.

"In view of the constantly increasing complexity of world affairs," Connally said, "it seems highly desirable to organize the committee in such a way as to foster more extensive consultations between committee members and responsible officers in the State Department than has been possible heretofore."

He said the Subcommittee on State Department Organization would study the department with a view toward recommending some reorganization. "Nothing violent is anticipated," Connally said, but he added the department has grown so in recent years that some changes might be helpful.

The committee's membership includes Democratic Senators Connally, Thomas (Utah), George (Ga.), Green (R. I.), Tydings (Md.), McMahon (Conn.), Pepper (Fla.), and Fulbright (Ark.). On the Republican side are Senators Vandenberg (Mich.), Wiley (Wis.), Lodge (Mass.), Smith (N. J.), and Hickenlooper (Iowa).

'Welcome Home, Ashok and Shanti!'

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

AFTER LONG JOURNEY—The two baby elephants, gifts of the Indian Prime Minister Nehru to the children of America, arrived by truck last night from New York. They were met at the Zoo by a large official gathering. Mme. Chandralekha Mehta, daughter of Mme. Pandit, India's Ambassador, greets Ashok with his first cube of American sugar

ing there, might be disturbed at being awakened in the dark of the night.

Instead they were placed temporarily in the comfortable machine shop.

Baba Jan immediately turned to giving the elephants water, oats and hay. He postponed until today rationing out any of their favorite food, molasses.

"Dhutt! . . . Go Back!" Baba Jan's command rang through the Zoo.

"Mutt! Come Forward!"

And the elephants instantly obeyed him.

Dorothy Paquette, a Canadian born secretary of the Indian Embas . , was permitted to feed some beets and vegetables to Ashok.

The greeting party had come directly from a cocktail party given to honor the elephants at 5619 Western ave. nw. Host was Col. M. K. Unni Nayar, director of information for the Indian Embassy.

Ashok is the first male elephant to take up residence in the zoo in 50 years.

Baba Jan through an interpreter gave this description of his charges:

"Ashok is a little naughty but Shanti is a good girl. Ashok is teething. That's why he's a little naughty."

It is the first time the 23-year-old elephant boy has ever been out of India. With his wide, white grin set in a deep brown face and wearing mahout uniform he looked like a figure out of Kipling.

Three months ago the elephants were roaming the jungles of Mysore in middle India.

Ashok is 2 years old and weighs in at 980 pounds. Shanti is 2½ and 1043 pounds.

Baba Jan said the only trouble he really had was from the elephants putting on airs, now that so much fuss is being made over them.

The truck which bore the elephants from New York was decorated with huge signs: "Welcome to America."

The bells around their necks tinkled as they were unloaded. They were fitted out in custom-made elephant blankets, emblazoned with their names.

Presentation of the elephants today will be made by Madame Pandit.

George C. McGhee, Assistant Secretary, will represent the State Department.

Alexandria Clinic Set For Doctors

Alexandria physicians will be the hosts today for the first annual Northern Virginia Clinical Assembly.

The assembly, to be held in Ficklin Elementary School Auditorium, Alexandria, was designed to give busy Virginia doctors the chance to brush up on the newest medical and scientific developments.

Its speakers include leading medical authorities from such centers of research and clinical investigation as Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Their topics range from broken bones to broken minds.

GWU Professor to Talk

The first paper scheduled for presentation, at 9:30 a. m., is on "The Immediate Treatment of Fractures," by Dr. Custis Lee Hall, clinical professor of surgery at George Washington University.

Dr. J. Mason Hundley, jr., professor of gynecology at the University of Maryland, will talk at 10:10 a. m., on "Vaginal Bleeding." He will be followed, at 10:50 a. m., by a discussion on the antibiotics by Dr. Theodore E. Woodward, assistant professor of medicine at the University of Maryland.

Psychiatrist on Program

The afternoon session is scheduled to begin at 1:20 p. m. with a presentation on "Pediatric Emergencies," by Dr. Alexander J. Schaffer, assistant professor of pediatrics at Johns Hopkins University, and a discussion at 2 p. m. on "Acute Surgery of the Abdomen" by Dr. Robert J. Coffey, professor of surgery at Georgetown University.

Dr. Harvey J. Tompkins, chief of the psychiatry and neurology division of Veterans' Administration, will talk at 2:50 p. m. on "Psychiatric Emergencies and What the Medical Man Can Do."

Man Arrested on Theft Charge

Arlington police yesterday arrested Ollien Cox, 38, of 2127 S. Pollard st., Arlington, on a charge of robbery, minutes after they received a complaint that he had taken $189 from a companion.

Complainant in the case was Calvin Miller, 36, of 2148 S. Oxford st., Arlington. He told police Cox struck him on the head with a milk bottle at his home about 2 p. m., then made off with his cash. Miller's injuries apparently were not serious, according to police reports.

Officers William Shilling, Jesse Berry, and Lieut. Joseph Marcey picked up Cox in a cab as he headed along Columbia Pike for Baltimore, police said. About $190 in cash was found on him, according to police.

Six Women Receive Press Group Honors

Six outstanding American women—an actress, an educator, a dancer, a designer, a scientist, and a Government official—were presented with Certificates of Achievement by President Truman last night.

The occasion was the Women's National Press Club's annual dinner and stunt party at Hotel Statler and the awards were those of the club for distinguished achievement.

Screen actress Olivia de Havilland received one for her "distinctive contributions to adult American drama" and dancer Martha Graham was cited for her pioneer work in the modern American dance.

Fashions, Science Share Honors

Designer Claire McCardell was honored for achievement in the fashion field and Dr. Mildred Rebstock for her work in synthesizing chloromycetin, dramatic curative for typhus and typhoid fevers.

Pearl Wanamaker, Washington State superintendent of public instruction, received her award for educational work. Dorothy Fosdick, first and only woman member of the State Department's policy planning board, was honored for her achievement in government.

Beside President and Mrs. Truman and Miss Margaret Truman, dozens of Washington notables—Cabinet members, Supreme Court justices, Ambassadors, and Congressmen—were guests for the dinner, award ceremony, and the hilarious skits that followed.

Jane Stafford Presides

Miss Jane Stafford, president of the club, presided. She introduced, among others, seven outstanding newspaper and radio women who were the club's special guests this year. They were:

Rebecca F. Gross, editor of the Lock Haven Express, Lock Haven, Pa.; Edith C. Johnson, editorial columnist with the Daily Oklahoman-Oklahoma City Times; Susan Myrick, associate editor, the Macon Telegraph, Macon, Ga.; Nell Snead, women's editor, the Kansas City Star; Edith O'Keefe Susong, publisher, Greenville Daily Sun, Greeneville, Tenn.; Agnes Underwood, city editor, Los Angeles Herald and Express, and Judith Waller, public service director, central division, NBC.

Third Award for Actress

Actress de Havilland, thrilled over her first meeting with the President and receiving the certificate from him, was getting her third acting award of the year last night.

Previously she was presented with a Motion Picture Academy "Oscar" for her role in "The Heiress" and a Brazilian government award for "The Snake Pit."

She hopes her next role will be in a serious, modern love story, Miss de Havilland said last night. She is now reading scripts, says there is a dearth of good story material in Hollywood. Accompanied to Washington by her husband, Novelist Marcus Goodrich, her conversation centered largely around their 6-month-old son, Benjamin.

Accent on Youth

The accent was also on youth among other award winners at last night's dinner. Dancer Martha Graham has just returned from an 8-week tour through the South and Midwest, including many college towns. She says young people now understand and accept modern dance interpretation to an extent in sharp contrast with her first audience of some 20 years ago. In January, Miss Graham performed the first dance work ever commissioned by an orchestra—"Judith," commissioned by the Louisville Symphony.

Mrs. Wanamaker, Washington State school superintendent since 1941, has centered her interest on young people as a teacher for almost 30 years. She thinks the current crop a decided improvement over her own generation in breadth of information and interests, but feels education will face a crisis in 1953 when so many "war babies" come of school age. Recently, Mrs. Wanamaker was elected first woman president of the National Council of State School Officers.

Claire McCardell, who received the award for fashion designing, also has a particular interest in youth inasmuch as most of her clothes are of the "casual" type for typically American young women. Dorothy Fosdick, daughter of the noted New York clergyman, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, is one of the youngest women in a strategic Government position. And Dr. Mildred Rebstock, member of the Parke, Davis research staff in Detroit since 1945, is rated among the most outstanding younger scientists in this country.

Robin Tires of Pecking Image, Gets Wife to Do the Pecking

Ponca City, Okla., April 15 (AP).—Wilbur the wacky robin today gave up his three-day fight with his own reflection—he found a lady robin more interesting.

The bird-brained battler Thursday started attacking his own image in a shiny hubcap on Earl Wright's car.

From morning to dusk, he attacked the strange thing he thought was invading his worm-hunting territory.

Wilbur turned out at 7:50 a. m. today to continue the fight. His feathers were bedraggled, his wingtips hung to the ground and his beak was blunted and bloodstained.

That didn't stop him. He flew up at the image, and pecked at it.

Then the lady robin came along. She chirped, "Cheer-ree, cheer-ree."

Wilbur looked up. He liked what he saw better than his own beat-up image. Immediately he started the courtship.

With his admiring girl friend looking on, Wilbur turned to more prosaic and robinly tasks such as gathering twigs and grass for housekeeping.

As his hunt took him near Wright's car, Wilbur hurled an insult or two at his enemy and occasionally took a swipe.

The bird also took time out for bug hunting. However, he had a hard time trying to get worms because his blunted beak couldn't search into the ground.

Wright said that in view of Wilbur's new interest, he would park his car in the garage.

"I don't want that hubcap to come between them," Wright said.

Astronomy Lectures To Start Tonight at G.U.

The first of a new series of public lectures on astronomy, sponsored by the institution's graduate school, will take place at 8 p. m. today at Gaston Hall, Georgetown University.

The course of lectures will be named in honor of Angelo Secchi, S.J., an outstanding Jesuit astronomer. First speaker will be Carl F. von Weizacker of the University of Chicago who will speak on "The Evolution of Galaxies and Stars."

GOP Primary Fight Likely In Maryland

Baltimore, April 15 (AP).—Maryland Republican leaders today abandoned hope of avoiding a fight in the September primaries.

The State central committee arrived at that conclusion in a meeting here which got under way only after the forceful ejection of Paul Robertson, dissident pretender to the chairmanship of the GOP Baltimore City committee.

Robertson invaded the meeting room, uninvited, and spoke for more than 30 minutes. Most of his speech was an attack on the leadership of Jacob France, national committeeman, and State Chairman Stanford Hoff.

Robertson was finally forced out of the room by hotel officers.

Hoff said it was obviously the opinion of the committee "that there is going to be a primary fight and that there will be no state central committee candidate for the nomination for governor."

He said he and France had agreed that the committee will be impartial as far as the four "approved gubernatorial candidates are concerned."

The four are State Senator Roy Tasco Davis of Montgomery County; Thomas B. R. Mudd, Charles County businessman; Royden A. Blunt of Howard County, a Baltimore industrialist, and D. John Markey of Frederick County.

They were on a list of 15 acceptable candidates issued by the committee earlier this year.

Attempts have been made to get the four potential candidates to pool their resources behind one man, but they did not work out.

Interstate Crime Hearings Set For Monday by Senate Group

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Interstate crime takes the Senate stage this week against a backdrop of crime developments in various parts of the Nation.

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath is expected to outline to a Senate Commerce subcommittee on Monday the story of big-time horserace betting syndicates and their use of interstate telephone, telegraph and radio facilities.

And the Senate, sometime during the week, is expected to approve a crime investigation, probably by a special five-man committee.

Meanwhile, yesterday's crime developments around the country included:

1. In Kentucky, Bell County deputy sheriffs at Middlesboro began serving warrants on 176 persons, including Police Chief Guy Harrell and his entire force, who were indicted by a special grand jury after a gambling probe.

2. In Kansas City, Mo., Governor Forrest Smith said he has no plans to change personnel of the Kansas City police (which he has no power to do under State law). He said charges of laxity leveled at the police were "not verified by the facts."

3. In St. Louis, Mo., a multi-million-dollar lottery in which tickets were sold on the basis of future weather conditions was smashed with the arrest of nine men. Included were a deputy sheriff and a printing shop proprietor.

4. In Miami, former Secret Service Chief Frank J. Wilson said establishment of a national crime commission would be a vital step toward smashing what he called the "giant conspiracy" between crminals and politicians. He said the conspiracy has existed since the war years.

5. Also in Kansas City, a one-time North Side minor political boss, Charles Carrollo, and three others seized with him Friday in a liquor raid, are expected to be formally charged tomorrow. They were seized about a mile from the political club where Charles Binaggio and Charles Gargotta were found slain a week ago.

Carrollo and his three associates failed to raise bond and faced the weekend in jail. The raid by Treasury agents which nabbed them turned up 1135 cases of liquor, much of it wrapped with brown paper, apparently for shipment into dry Oklahoma.

The Kentucky indictments accused the chief of police and his entire force of misfeasance in office, charging they failed to suppress gambling and permitted slot machines to operate.

Together with 18 police indictments, 28 others were charged with unlawfully permitting an exposed ballot to be placed in a ballot box, three persons with illegal voting, 55 with unlawfully showing ballots to others and 40 with applying for ballots when not entitled to them.

Seven Middlesboro tavern operators were charged with possessing illegal liquor, nine persons with bootlegging and five with keeping disorderly houses. Another 10 persons were charged with setting up and operating gambling devices.

Chief Harrell defended his conduct of the police force, the United Press reported. He said:

"Our police force is the best, I think. I have every confidence in them. They are very efficient."

The chief said he was glad to have an investigation but he was resentful of the "bad publicity" given the city.

The grand jury sat at the request of Kentucky Commonwealth Attorey Garfield L. Drinnon but City Attorney Arthur Rohrer commented that "there has been less gambling in this city in the past year than at any time in the last 60 years."

The grand jury found conditions in the city "closely akin to gangsterism" and "a tendency among many people to wink at the law, to ignore serious crimes and to intimidate those who want to clear up the mess."

The jury concluded that the city would have to be cleaned up or "we will be afflicted with the same sort of thing that recently transpired in Kansas City."

The jurors were referring to the Binaggio-Gargotta killings, so far unsolved, which have, in turn, given a boost to the proposed Senate crime investigation. Republicans are calling for a Federal probe of Kansas City, now in Democratic hands, and Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), who is expected to run the investigation, has said he won't "shy away" from that city.

As soon as the rivers and harbors bill now under Senate debate is disposed of, perhaps on Monday, Majority Leader Lucas is expected to bring up the proposed special Senate crime investigation resolution.

Republicans are planning to fight substitution of the special unit for one from the Judiciary Committee because the change would eliminate two top GOP probers—Senators Ferguson (Mich.) and Donnell (Mo.). A flood of Republican oratory is expected but some sort of probe unit is almost certain to be approved. Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) would be chairman in any case.

Kefauver said yesterday he has been assured that the Department of Justice will throw its full support behind a contemplated $150,000 Senate crime investigation.

"I've talked to the Justice Department about the investigation," Kefauver said, "and I have been promised full support."

Suicide by Poison Coroner's Verdict In Woman's Death

Corrine Cox, 29, who tossed off a drink of carbolic acid and died, was declared a suicide yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Police said the woman left her quarters, at 216 E st. nw., Monday night after a quarrel with her common-law husband, Stanley Mezzanotte, and went to the home of her stepsister, Mrs. Gertie Lee Cox Bane, of 414 2d st. nw.

Mrs. Bane told police she entered her kitchen Friday afternoon and saw her stepsister forcing down a glass of colorless liquid.

When she emptied the glass, she said, "Goodby, Gertie," and began to froth at the mouth. She died three hours later at Casualty Hospital. Police said they found an empty bottle that had contained carbolic acid.

Mrs. Turner Heads Alex. Women Voters

Mrs. Warren H. Turner, jr., was elected president of the Alexandria League of Women Voters at the annual meeting yesterday at the Commonwealth Club.

Others chosen: Mrs. Edward Denison, vice president; Mrs. Richard Seggel, secretary; Mrs. Ely Maurer, treasurer; Mrs. William Hitchcock, Mrs. Frank Katz and Mrs. Willard Van Valkenburgh, directors.

The league voted to adopt two subjects for study and work. One is continued research into Alexandria tax problems and the other the question of children's services in the community with special references to juvenile delinquency.

REFRIGERATOR

It's Here! The Only Refrigerator That Automatically Defrosts Itself... Automatically Disposes of Defrost Water... Does It So Fast Even Ice Cream Stays Hard

This is it! The greatest refrigerator development in the last 20 years. Now, for the first time, you can truly forget all about defrosting. With the revolutionary new Westinghouse "FROST-FREE" Refrigerator you can wipe the word . . . and the work . . . right out of your mind.

Think what that means: No more frost to scrape . . . no more water to carry and empty, and no more floors to mop when it spills . . . no more melting and refreezing of ice cream and frozen foods, they never get a chance to thaw . . . no more food to remove and replace again . . . no dials to set or clocks to turn.

In fact, with this great "FROST-FREE" Refrigerator, all you have to do is put it in your kitchen . . . and use it!

The new, fully automatic "FROST-FREE" Refrigerator is simplicity itself in operation. You see, every time your Refrigerator door is opened, warm, moist air flows in. This warm, moist air is what causes frost. When the door has been opened 60 times, the first thin layer of frost starts to form. So, the "FROST-FREE" system automatically counts the door openings. After the 60th door opening, it swiftly and automatically wipes out every trace of frost. Does it so fast . . . that the temperature of your foods changes practically not at all. Since the Freeze Chest normally operates at zero, your frozen foods, ice cubes, and even your ice cream, stay brick hard always.

The Amazing Story of Two Identical Bricks of Ice Cream

Ice cream on right went through a defrosting cycle in the new "FROST-FREE" Westinghouse. It came out as you see it here . . . still hard, the two flavors still separate and rich.

The ice cream on the left went through so-called "automatic" defrosting in a refrigerator equipped with a defroster. The camera tells what happened. The ice cream had melted, flavors ran together. The ice cream lost its shape, flavor, richness and appetite appeal.

What happens to the frost water? There's very little of it, and that little is automatically evaporated . . . quickly. As far as you're concerned, the defrost water does not exist.

This "FROST-FREE" Refrigerator works less . . . and so does your budget! Since frost never really forms in this amazing new Refrigerator, there's no accumulated frost-resistance to combat. As a result, the Westinghouse Economizer Mechanism operates at peak efficiency . . . and costs less to run.

Fully automatic defrosting is only part of the story. You get all these marvelous features, too, in the great new "FROST-FREE" Refrigerator:

- An Automatic Butter Keeper that keeps a half pound of butter just right for spreading.
- A Meat Keeper that automatically keeps meat at just the right temperature . . . and keeps it that way for days if you don't want to freeze it in the Freeze Chest.
- Two Humidrawers that automatically maintain the right temperature and humidity to keep fruits and vegetables fresh and crisp.
- It even has an automatic door closer, in case you forget to close it yourself.
- And a Sterilamp® germicidal light guards against transfer of food odors, protects health and insures cleanliness.

In every way, this new "FROST-FREE" Westinghouse is today's last word in modern refrigeration.

All Westinghouse Refrigerators Have

COLDER COLD

For Safer, Surer, Food Keeping

COLDER COLD means lower temperatures in the Freeze Chest to freeze foods faster . . . to make ice cubes quicker . . . to keep frozen foods safely frozen. At the same time, you get safe, steady cold in the Main Food Compartment, even with zero cold in the Freeze Chest . . . and sure, moist cold in the Humidrawers.

Morgenthau Stresses Jewish Appeal's Need

The new Republic of Israel, though eminently successful thus far in providing a homeland for Jews throughout the world, is in imminent need of help to fulfill its mission.

This was the declaration last night of Henry Morgenthau, jr., general chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, at the first annual conference of the National Christian Committee of the Appeal. He presided at a dinner at the Hotel Statler.

Results of the drive thus far are "highly encouraging," Morgenthau said, a total of 32 million dollars having been contributed. But requirements this year are $272,455,800.

More Than Her Share

"When the independence of Israel was proclaimed (two years ago), we pledged ourselves to help realize the dream of the return of the homeless and oppressed Jews of the world," he said. "Israel is doing more than her share. Her people are achieving the impossible in developing a new democracy in the face of the most difficult problems."

But a tremendous effort still is needed, Morgenthau said, not alone to move into Israel all the Jews who should be taken there, but also to combat foes of the new republic. He referred to recent meetings of the Arab League at Cairo, Egypt.

"There are various ways of making war," he said. "The Arab states are intensifying their economic war against Israel. They are counting on us to get tired. They are hoping the United Jewish Appeal will fail. And they are waiting and hoping the world and the Jews of the United States will turn to other things and cut down their support of the Jewish state."

Other Causes to Benefit

The ottal funds sought by United Jewish Appeal go, not only for support of immigration to Israel and rehabilitation and economic integration there, but also to a number of other causes. These include:

Relief and rehabilitation in Europe and North Africa.

Adjustment and integration of refugees who come to the United States.

"The government of Iraq has voted to permit Jews of that country to emigrate to Israel. There are about 130,000. Most want to go to Israel. But there is a deadline attached. They have only one year to move out. That means we must provide for transfer and absorbtion of 90,000 Iraqui Jews before the end of 1950."

Morgenthau also stressed needs for 4000 "hard core" old and sick cases in Europe where transfer to Israel seems a solution. But along with them are some 5000 dependents and the cases require substantial funds.

Other speakers yesterday included Dr. George Josephthal of Tel Aviv, Israel, director of the absorbtion agency for the Jewish Agency for Palestine; Moses A. Leavitt, New York, executive vice chairman, Joint Distribution Committee; Walter H. Bieringer, president, United Service for New Americans, and Mrs. S. A. Brallove, chairman, national women's division, United Jewish Appeal.

Let 'Em Eat Bread, Free, Say Stores In Price War

Cherokee, Iowa, April 15 (U.P.).—Crowds of eager customers jammed E. L. Swanson's grocery store today to get free bread after he announced he would give away "between 5000 and 10,000" loaves to climax a month-long price war.

And his competitor, a new supermarket, put up a sign reading, "Free bread to our regular customers."

The war began when the supermarket cut the price from 17 to 15 cents a loaf. Swanson promptly cut his price to 15 cents. From there it dropped to 10.

Finally, both stores were selling two loaves for 15 cents before Swanson made his offer of free bread.

Legislators Cautioned Against Excessive Federal Staff Cuts

It's open season on Federal workers when Congress debates the annual budget. The employes must count on being shot at from Capitol Hill around this time of the year; they consider it part of their jobs.

But in blasting away at Government workers, members of Congress should keep these facts in mind: (1) that Federal employment has declined around 1,800,000, or more than 40 percent, from its wartime high; (2) that only about 12 percent of all Federal workers are located in this city; (3) that employes here work as hard, if not harder, than their colleagues in the field offices, and (4) that it is Congress itself that directs the agencies to assume new duties, not the employes who do the work.

Along this latter line, Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee estimates that it will cost $2,350,700,000 during the next fiscal year alone to carry out laws passed by Congress in 1949. The budget can't be balanced by piling new activities on the agencies.

These are a few examples of the current campaign in Congress to reduce Federal personnel:

REPRESENTATIVE VINSON (D., Ga.): "Here in Washington and vicinity, the number of civilian employes in the Defense agencies has declined from 29,758 to 28,421, a reduction of 1337. This means that while there was an over-all reduction of 17.4 percent in civilian personnel—from 905,000 to 748,000 as of January 31—the Washington reduction was only 4.5 percent.

"This over-all civilian personnel reduction is a great achievement. I fail to understand why the field employes can be reduced by four times the ratio of the reduction in Washington. If it can be done in the field, surely it can be done here. I am utterly convinced that this phase of the economy drive has not received the attention it is due. As usual we are reducing Federal employment in outlying areas but have shied away from applying the pressure to the Nation's Capital where, in my opinion, it should be first applied. There are entirely too many people in the city of Washington on the Federal payroll."

REPRESENTATIVE HARRISON (D., Va.), "Thousands of Government employes could be discharged without loss of essential services. No Federal worker has a vested right in a lifetime job. The people of the Nation are under no obligation, legal or moral, to continue indefinitely paying the salaries of a horde of paper shufflers in Washington. In any business operation, including Government, the efficient worker who provides a useful service never needs to fear for his own security. But, for too many years, we have been supporting employes who are excess baggage—who have no function meriting public financing."

REPRESENTATIVE VURSELL (R., Ill.): "I believe most members of Congress realize how loose and expensive great overgrown politically controlled departments of Government have become here in Washington. There is no question but that thousands and thousands of men and women, most of them in what might be termed middle or higher classifications of Government, could be spared from public service and greater efficiency would result. A reduction of 100,000 at a salary of $6000 each would save 600 million dollars."

REPRESENTATIVE WIGGLESWORTH (R., Mass.): "The President could easily control the size of the Federal payroll.

"We have today over two million people on that payroll. All impartial opinion seems to be agreed that the payroll is grossly overstaffed. The Hoover Commission has pointed out that there is a turnover in that payroll of about 25 percent in each and every year. In other words, some 500,000 people on the payroll in any given year leave their positions for one reason or another.

"All that is necessary is to let nature take its course and to rigorously control reappointments when vacancies occur. If that policy were pursued, if vacancies were filled only when absolutely necessary, it would not be long before the swollen payroll would be down to the size it ought to be, in terms of efficiency and economy, and no one would be removed against his will from the payroll."

REPRESENTATIVE TABER (R., N. Y.): "The total personnel cost in this budget is right around seven billion dollars. In my opinion we could come very close to a billion dollar reduction in personnel without in the slightest degree impairing the efficiency of the Government."

Citizens Back Bill to Save Stone House

Conversion of Relic To Museum Sought; Freeway Express Bus Service Asked

Acquisition by the Department of the Interior of the Old Stone House at 3051 M st. nw., a relic of early Georgetown, was indorsed by the Federation of Citizens Associations last night.

The federation voted to indorse a House bill which would make the House, an example of Eighthteenth Century architecture, a museum to be maintained by the National Capital Parks. The House Committee on Public Lands will hold a hearing on the bill April 27.

Built in 1764

Mrs. Elizabeth T. Sullivan of the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown said the old house, built in 1764, may have been the place where George Washington and Maj. Pierre L'Enfant planned the City of Washington.

The federation referred to its public utilities committee a request from the Palisades Citizens Association for help in getting the Capital Transit Co. to run rush-hour express buses over the Whitehurst Freeway.

The Palisades group also wants to have the American University bus line rerouted over Foxhall rd. nw. when that road is widened.

Traffic Light Wanted

Also referred to the same committee was a request from the Michigan Park Citizens Association for aid in having traffic lights installed at Taylor st. and Michigan ave. ne.

Jesse Suter, past president, spoke in memory of William S. Torbert, longtime delegate of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, who died recently. Resolutions memorialized Mr. Torbert and Dr. Joseph Kelly, who also had died since the previous meeting.

The annual federation boat ride will be held at 8:30 p. m. May 10 on the S. S. Mount Vernon.

Alexandria Man Dies After Car Hits Truck

Mason Ford, 42, Victim of Accident On Route 1; D. C. Man Injured

A 42-year-old Alexandria man died at Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg yesterday after his car collided head-on with a tractor-trailer truck near that city.

Victim of the accident was Mason William Ford, of 6 Ashby st., Alexandria. Hospital authorities said he was an installation man and inspector for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.

The collision took place at 8 p. m. on Route 1, about 3 miles north of Fredericksburg, according to State Trooper H. L. Powers.

Swerved Across Line

Powers said Ford's car swerved across the dividing line of the 4-lane highway, into the northbound lane occupied by the truck. However, he said, the truck driver, James A. Sistare, 22, of Lancaster, S. C., is being held on a technical charge of manslaughter, for a hearing May 2 in Stafford County Trial Justice Court. Sistare was uninjured.

According to hospital officials, Ford suffered an amputated left leg, compound fracture of the right leg, chest injuries and possible head injuries. He died 5 hours after the accident.

Wesley Evans Buchanan, 32, local real estate man suffered undetermined injuries at noon yesterday when his car was in collision with an auto at Delaware ave. and N st. sw.

Car Overturns

Buchanan's car was overturned. Buchanan, who lives at 5806 McKinley st., Bethesda, Md., complained of pains in his head and back and was admitted to George Washington University Hospital for X-rays and observation.

Police charged the other driver, Ollie J. Harrison, 49, a mechanic, of 2201 Rand pl. ne., with colliding. Harrison was not injured.

Two persons were injured in a two-car crash at 1:30 a. m. at 1st and D sts. se. Police said the drivers, James A. Boyd, 22, of Canonsburg, Pa., and George L. Cassman, 25, a sailor attached to Quarters K, Arlington, Va., were not hurt.

However, a passenger in Cassman's car, Elene Moyer, 23, of 2321 1st st. nw., received a possible fractured pelvis. After treatment at Casualty Hospital she was transferred to Bethesda Naval Hospital where her condition was described as good.

Boyd Charged

Robert Iskey, 20, of Canonsburg, was treated at Casualty Hospital for a cut nose. Police charged Boyd with failing to yield the right of way to a vehicle.

A bicyle accident sent 6-year-old Bernard Peterson, of 3402 15th st. se., to Children's Hospital with head injuries. Police said the boy was riding his bike at 10 a. m. on the pavement in the 3400 block of 15th st. se., and ran into Wilbur Wells, 13, of 3409 15th st. se.

The older boy escaped with scratches, but Bernard fell from the bike and struck his head on the pavement. The hospital said his condition is fair.

Logan Circle Jam Reported Improving

District Traffic Director George E. Keneipp yesterday declared there is not now sufficient congestion at Logan Circle to justify cutting it up.

He released a report to Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young which stated that changes made last month in traffic signal timing have speeded traffic flow so that no physical changes should be required for "several years."

However, the situation will be restudied later this year to determine the effect on circle traffic of the widening of 13th st., he said. Highway Director J. N. Robertson said a project to widen 13th st. for half a mile north of the circle from three lanes to four will start about July 1.

Highway officials have been considering plans to speed up circle traffic either by (1) cutting 13th st. through the circle, or (2) trimming the edges of the circle to widen the road around it.

The change in traffic light timing was made to see if there was a simpler solution to the problem. The only difference under the change is that P st. traffic, instead of that from more heavily traveled Vermont ave., now moves with 13th st. traffic.

Keneipp's recommendation — which has not been acted on—was based on time trials made at the circle and on straight stretches of roads leading into it.

In only one case—eastbound on Rhode Island ave. between 12th and 6th sts. during the afternoon rush—did it take longer to move in a straight line than around the circle, Keneipp said. But he reported only slight differences in most other cases.

Robertson said 13th st. will be widened from the circle north to U st. at a cost of about $80,000. The project will necessitate cutting down 85 trees along the street, he said. But they aren't good shade trees, Robertson said, and they will be replaced.

Roeway Towers

Widow Wins Cash Seized In Raid

An 86-year-old widow who didn't know she was living over a gambling joint until Maryland State Police raided it yesterday won her claim to $12,000 seized by the raiders.

The Maryland Court of Appeals at Annapolis ruled that Anastacia Maddock is entitled o the return of the cash which she claimed was her life savings.

The money was seized on the night of June 5, 1948, when they raided Roeway Towers, Howard County gambling casino on Baltimore blvd. near Laurel.

Police picked up $32,000, which included a packet of soiled $100 bills, wrapped in green oilcloth, found in a cupboard at the head of the back stairs to Mrs. Maddock's apartment.

In a 5-0 decision, the State's highest court reversed a decision by Circuit Judge James Clark of Howard County who turned over the money to the State police pension fund.

"We think it was sufficient" for Mrs. Maddock to "prove she was rightfully (at least without apparent wrong) in possession of the money," Judge Charles Markell wrote for the court.

Mrs. Maddock lived eight years in an upstairs apartment at Roeway Towers and said she had no idea there was gambling downstairs.

The State contended the $12,000 represented gamblers' funds which could have been hoisted upstairs on a dumb waiter inside the cupboard near Mrs. Maddock's apartment.

The raid resulted in the conviction on gambling charges of 19 men, all of whom were sentenced to jail. One of those convicted, Walter Novak, of 1205 Jackson ave., Takoma Park, Md., successfully sued to recover the remaining $20,000 seized by police.

Czech D. P. Fined 1 Cent For Parking

M. J. Svestka, a Czechoslovakian DP, in this country less than four months tangled with the laws of nature and the laws of Washington yesterday.

In Municipal Court he was fined one penny for illegal parking by Judge Nadine Gallagher.

And on his way to court he said he had to race his expectant wife to a hospital.

Svestka told reporters he was just as interested in the fine as the new arrival. It seems he works overtime at obeying the laws of his new country and was dismayed at finding a parking ticket on his car in the 1700 block of 17th st. nw., two days ago.

He went to No. 3 Precinct station to find out what law he had broken. He said he was told he would have to put up $3 collateral and go to court to get his answer.

Shaking a well-thumbed and heavily underlined set of traffic regulations at reporters yesterday, Svestka said he wanted to find out the answer.

In court he told Judge Gallagher, he had seen a "no parking" sign, but the sign had an arrow pointing in one direction and he parked just ahead of the sign—away from the arrow.

"What law did I violate?" asked the man, who refused to give reporters his address or occupation.

Judge Gallagher first set the fine at $1, then reduced it to $.50, and finally to one penny. Svestka got his three bucks back, and paid the penny with a smile.

"But I still don't know what law I violated," he said, shrugging his shoulders.

Police Baffled, Continue Quiz On Slayings

For the ninth consecutive day, police continued to question employes and former employes of the Lansburgh department store yesterday in connection with the store's Good Friday murders.

About two dozen persons were questioned at police headquarters during the day but none was detained.

The mystery of who fatally stabbed two night watchmen at Lansburgh's early on the morning of April 7 remained as clouded as ever.

Rewards totaling $1300 have been offered for information leading to arrest and conviction of the slayer or slayers.

"The reward money hasn't produced a single call yet," said Lieut. Richard Felber, acting head of the homicide squad.

Coroner's Verdict

Edgerton's Daughter A Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday in the death of Miss Ann Edgerton, 29, who died Friday after an 85-foot leap from the Massachusetts ave. bridge.

Miss Edgerton was the daughter of Judge Henry W. Edgerton of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here, and Mrs. Edgerton.

Following an autopsy, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said death was caused by a crushed abdomen, ruptured viscera, hemorrhage and shock.

Funeral services will be private, the Edgerton family announced.

Miss Edgerton had been under psychiatric treatment. She was employed as a stenographer with the National Labor Relations Board.

Police disclosed that Miss Edgerton's apartment at 2512 Q st. nw. was ransacked last Monday after a lock had been forced. A portable radio valued at $10 and a new coral cloth coat valued at $30 were stolen, police said.

D. C. Builders Buy 150-Acre Corby Tract

The 120-acre Corby tract on Rockville pike near Georgetown Preparatory School has been purchased from the heirs of the late Charles I. Corby, Washington baker, by two local builders.

The purchasers were identified as Frank Vitale and Thomas D. Zhibelli, by G. Calvert Bowie, who represented the heirs in the transaction.

Purchase price was not disclosed, but the terms of the contract call for construction of single-family homes costing at least $11,000.

Once sold as the site of a proposed 20 million dollar hotel, the tract was reclaimed last fall by the Corby heirs when the Diplomat Properties, Inc., failed to keep up with mortgage payments.

One member of the New York firm which secured the property five years ago but was unable to realize its dream hotel plans was Benjamin F. Fields, a figure in the congressional investigation of former Representative Andrew J. May, Howard Hughes and Murray Garsson. The land was bought then for about $200,000.

Plans announced for the hotel project included a 1000-room structure, golf course, tennis courts and swimming pool.

The land was rezoned in 1946 to permit erection of the hotel, with a proviso that it would revert to Residential A listing after 30 months if no construction had begun. It is now zoned for single family dwellings.

$216 Cash Cache Dropped In Trash; It's Recovered

Edward B. Moore, restaurant proprietor, qualified yesterday for the title of most absent-minded man of the week.

Before closing his M. & S. lunchroom, at 1713 Pennsylvania ave. nw. Friday night, Moore put $216 in a cloth moneybag and then placed the bag in a wastebasket, one of his favorite hiding places.

But before he left the store, Moore absent-mindedly carried the basket outside the rear of the store and dumped its contents in the large trash receptacle.

When Moore opened his store at 7 a. m. yesterday he reached confidently in the wastebasket for his cache. It wasn't there—and then the horrible truth dawned on him.

The trash, of course, had already been collected. Moore notified police of his loss and then got on the telephone to make inquiries of the Phillips Trash Co. which collects the waste matter.

Moore finally tracked down the truck that had picked up his trash at 13th and I sts. nw. The driver and his two helpers obligingly dug into the trash and finally came up with Moore's moneybag. The cash was intact.

70 Youngsters Claim Bikes at Police 'Lineup'

Yesterday was a second Christmas for about 70 Washington youngsters as they claimed lost, strayed or stolen bicycles at police headquarters.

The bicycle "lineup" was arranged to clear out some of the 100 unclaimed bikes. Bikes not claimed will be auctioned off after a year.

Quantico High School Debaters Reach Finals

The debate team of the Quantico Post High School will participate in the State debate finals at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, the last week in April, it was announced yesterday.

D. C. Notre Dame Alumni to Hold Dinner Monday

More than 200 local alumni of Notre Dame University will attend the Universal Notre Dame Night dinner at 6:30 p. m. Monday at the Touchdown Club, 1414 I st. nw.

At the same time, 25,000 other Notre Dame alumni will similarly observe the twenty-seventh annual Universal Notre Dame Night throughout the Nation.

The local dinner is sponsored by the Notre Dame Club of Washington.

Woman Fatally Burned In Bedroom Blaze

Mrs. Lillie M. Jennings, 69, died at Freedmen's Hospital last night from burns suffered earlier in the day in her room at 1718 5th st. nw.

Police said her bathrobe caught fire from an electric hot plate next to her bed. Friends said she was arthritic and confined to her room.

Seven Marooned Lads Taken Off Potomac Island

Seven young Izaak Waltons were marooned on Theodore Roosevelt Island yesterday near the Virginia shore of the Potomac just below Key Bridge.

The boys waded across to the island at low tide, fished a few hours and then could not get back. Harbor police put the lads back on the Virginia shore.

Rescued: Harvey Davis, 14, 4818 N. 18th st.; Graham McNammee, 14, 2232 N. Birch st..; Buddy Giles, 15, 5005 N. 13th st.; John Palmer, 14, 1105 N. Huntington st.; William Wheatley, 14, 2313 N. Stewart st.; Ray Fontaine, 14, 1700 N. Greenbrier st., all of Arlington, and Ronny Daniels, 14, 1834 C st. se.

Commission Cool To Zoning Plan

The District Zoning Commission yesterday announced almost total rejection of its staff's proposal to rezone from commercial to residential use 40 acres along 7th, 8th and 15th sts. near E. Capitol st.

Executive Officer Robert O. Clouser said the commission rezoned only about six acres spotted along cross streets. He called it a setback for staff officials who wanted a mass rezoning of frontage on the north-south streets.

The rezoning requests, heard by the board at hearings last July and October, were part of a continuous effort to reduce the amount of commercially zoned land in the District, Clouser stated.

There has been a slight net gain of residential land over the past 30 years, Clouser said. But there is still too much commercial land by about 300 acres, he said.

Land for which rezoning had been sought lay on 15th st. between G st., ne. and Pennsylvania ave., se.; on 8th st. from E. Capitol st. north to H st.; on 7th st. generally between B st., ne. and L st., se.; and on adjacent blocks of cross streets.

Zoning officials had pointed out that less than 15 percent of the land was used commercially. But property owners were almost unanimous in protesting that rezoning would lower land values. Clouser said the commission felt land owners had acquired certain vested rights after 30 years of commercial zoning.

The largest parcel rezoned was on the south side of G st., se., between 6th and 7th sts., Clouser said. This had been supported by the Yardville neighborhood cleanup project. It was the only portion of the plan to receive public support.

Rezoning of the commercial land means businesses located there are now non-conforming, Clouser said. But they may continue to operate, he said, as long as existing buildings are maintained without structural change.

Six Ordained

Priests Say 1st Masses On Monday

Six young men who will be ordained Catholic priests this morning in centuries-old rites by Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle of Washington, will say their first masses Monday, in various churches of the city.

The ordinations will take place at 9 a. m. today in the Notre Dame chapel of Trinity College. Those to be ordained, all for the archdiocese of Washington, are: The Rev. Francis X. Walsh and the Rev. Charles W. Davis, both of Washington; the Rev. Charles E. Cornell of Manassas, Va.; the Rev. Ramon A. Di Nardo of Hopedale, Mass.; the Rev. Arnold J. Snyder of Yonkers, N. Y., and the Rev. James H. MacMurren of Jersey City, N. J.

Son of Late D. C. Realtor

Father Walsh, who is a member of an old Washington family, will say his first mass at 9 a. m. at St. Anthony's Church, 12th and Monroe sts. ne. His mother, Mrs. Annie M. Walsh of 1222 Allison st. ne.; sister, Mrs. Bernard E. Norton of Staten Island, N. Y., and four brothers, Thomas M., Daniel F., John F. and Edward J. Walsh, all of Washington, will attend, with other relatives and a large group of friends. Father Walsh is a son of the late Thomas D. Walsh, local realtor.

Another Washington-born priest, Father Davis, will say his first mass at 8:15 a. m. at Holy Comforter Church, 14th and E. Capitol sts. ne., in the presence of his mother, Mrs. Nora B. Davis, and other relatives and friends. The children of Holy Comforter School also will attend this mass. Father Davis attended the school some years ago.

The parents of Father Cornell—Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Cornell, will be among those attending his first mass at 9 a. m. at St. Peter's Church, 2d and C sts. se. Father Walsh was born in Washington and attended St. Peter's School. His mother and father moved to Virginia a few years ago.

Notre Dame Graduate

Father Di Nardo will say his first mass at 8 a. m. at St. Matthews Cathedral, 1725 Rhode Island ave. nw. Members of his immediate family who will attend will be his mother, Mrs. Filomena Di Nardo of Hopedale, Mass.; his sister, Mrs. Joseph Breen of Worcester, Mass., and three brothers, William Di Nardo of Washington, D. C., and John and Victor Di Nardo of Hopedale, Mass. Father Di Nardo is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame, so a large delegation from the Notre Dame Club of Washington will attend his first mass. He also will be guest of honor Monday evening at the club's twenty-seventh annual observance of Universlay Notre Dame Night at the Touchdown Club, 1414 I st. nw.

Father Snyder and Father MacMurren were not scheduled to arrive in Washington until early this morning and have not yet announced where they will say their first masses here. All six of the newly ordained priests will sing their first solemn high masses next Sunday.

War Buddies To Be Reburied Together Here

Joint reburial services for two buddies who trained, went overseas, flew, fought and died together will take place at 11:30 a. m. Monday at Arlington National Cemetery.

The two were Sergt. Robert J. Gleason, formerly of Washington, and Lieut. James L. King, formerly of Benton, Ky.

They were reported missing over Germany on February 24, 1945, and officially declared dead on April 11, that year.

Relatives of Sergeant Gleason said that the two met after they were inducted and assigned to training in Kansas. King received a commission, and Gleason was made a tail gunner in the same Flying Fortress in which King was copilot. Their first ship overseas, in which they received their baptism of fire in a 2000-bomber raid on Germany in February, 1944, was named "Heaven Can Wait."

Sergeant Gleason is survived by his father, Thomas A. Gleason of Passe Grille, Fla., and three brothers, all veterans, James T., Thomas P., and John M. Gleason, all of Washington. A native of Scranton, Pa., he was a graduate of Roosevelt High School, and was employed by the Department of Justice before his Army Air Force service.

Sergt. Gleason

Lieut. King

Lieutenant King is survived by his mother, Mrs. Alzada King; two brothers, Edward and Simon King, and a sister, Mrs. Della Phelps, all of Benton, Ky.

Mr. Schultz, a resident of the Washington area for more than 50 years, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mildred M. Stewart, 9 Woodmoor dr., Silver Spring.

A native of Tennessee, Mr. Schultz had been a painting contractor for more than 30 years, when he retired 10 years ago.

In addition to Mrs. Stewart, Mr. Schultz is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Evelyn A. Walton, 105 Cockerville ave., Takoma Park, Md.; a son, John J. Schultz, 811 Quincy st. nw.; six grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Karen Vest, 3, Wins Pony at Rodeo Show

Three-year-old Karen Vest, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Vest, was winner of a gift pony yesterday afternoon at the Variety Club's rodeo and thrill show at the National Guard Armory.

The family lives at RFD 5, Alexandria. Mr. Vest, who is a plumber, said he will build a stable for the new pet on their ¾ acre place.

Heart Ill Fatal To R. L. Norris; Rites Tuesday

Robert L. Norris, 43, parts manager for the Williams Nash Motors firm of Bethesda, died yesterday at his home, 5607 Lincoln st., Bethesda.

Mr. Norris had suffered a heart attack earlier in the day and had been revived by members of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase rescue squad. A second and fatal attack followed.

A native of Brunswick, Md., Mr. Norris came to the Washington area in 1937 and had lived in that area ever since.

He is survived by his widow, the former Mary Louise Kain; his father, William Norris; a twin sister, Mrs. Gertrude L. Funk, all of the Lincoln st. address; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Jane Plunkett of Metuchen, N. J., and a brother, Franklin Norris of Clinton, Md.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Tuesday at the Pumphrey funeral home in Bethesda. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Bond Is Set For Nine Men On Riot Charge

Ten men were arrested on riot charges in the 1500 block of 14th st. nw. early yesterday morning, and—battered, bruised and bandaged—were arraigned in Municipal Court 10 hours later.

The riot started, police said, when a whisky bottle sailed through a cafe window, and a 15-minute melee followed.

Eight of the men were charged with affray and Judge Thomas D. Quinn set bail at $300 each.

One man, Rudolph M. Butts, 24, 940 French st. nw., was charged with affray and carrying a deadly weapon, and was held under $1500 bond. Their cases were continued until April 21.

Judge Quinn ordered three of the defendants hospitalized after the arraignment: Butts, whose left eye was swollen shut. Lee Condolon, 21, 4605 Blue Plains dr., sw., whose head was swathed in bandages covering a 6-inch cut from his nose to his ear, and Joseph P. Casbarian, 22, 1105 New Hampshire ave. nw., who was cut from his left ear to his chin.

The others arrested and arraigned are Edward E. Cook, 22, 1324 14th st. nw., who had six stitches taken in his scalp; Roy C. Smith, 21, 1740 Euclid st. nw.; John E. Smith, 22, 5204 T st. se.; Richard B. Riggin, 23, 1225 K st. nw; Henry L. Johnson, 21, 212 Indiana ave. nw., and Chester A. Dozier, 35, 1251 Half st. sw.

Mass Meeting Set to Push Park Tract

A citizens mass meeting to push State acquisition of the Lake Barcroft tract in Fairfax County as a public recreation area will be sponsored May 8 by the Arlington County Civic Federation.

The federation voted to initiate plans for the open meeting at a special session Friday night. Citizens of Arlington, Alexandria, Fairfax and Falls Church will be invited to attend the meeting at the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School, 816 S. Fillmore st.

The 680-acre Barcroft tract was recently purchased by a group of New Englanders, but boosters of its conversion to a State park have urged the State to condemn the land. Both Falls Church and Arlington have appointed representatives to a working committee to investigate this possibility.

In another action Friday the federation voted to endorse the proposed new county zoning ordinance, "with the understanding that it is a stop-gap measure, subject to modification when a comprehensive community plan has been developed."

The federation urged the County Planning Commission to go ahead "as rapidly as possible" with studies of population, housing demands and trading, needed for such a plan.

It also approved resolutions:

1. Asking the county not to add a proposed new apartment zoning classification

2. Opening the rezoning of land from residential to apartment use, under the proposed ordinance.

3. Stating it felt there is "too much" rezoning from residential to commercial use under the suggested ordinance.

C. L. Henley To Be Buried On Tuesday

Charles Lewis Henley, 51, former local barbershop owner, died yesterday at his home, 2218 39th pl. nw., from coronary thrombosis after an illness of several years.

A former traveling barber for the New York Central Railroad, Mr. Henley came here 21 years ago, and first owned the Dupont Circle barbershop. Before retiring two years ago, he ran Henley's barbershop at 4220 Fessenden st. nw. for 16 years.

A native of Wythe, Va., Mr. Henley attended Emory and Henry College in Emory, Va. He was a Scottish Rite Mason and a member of the Bethesda Baptist Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Adah E. Henley, and two sisters, Mrs. Etta Stansbury of Cleveland, Tenn., and Mrs. Ovella Biggs of Maryville, Tenn.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 1 p. m. in the Chevy Chase Funeral Home, 5103 Wisconsin ave. nw. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

World Looks to U. S., Catholic Council Told

America, the great hopeful repository of Western Christian civilization, thirsts for a chance to sacrifice to save the world from communism, two outstanding Catholic churchmen said here last night.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, and the Most Rev. Robert E. Lucey, of San Antonio, Texas, addressing a dinner of the National Council of Catholic Men, at the Hotel Carlton, warned against "phony politicians" and urged maintenance of this country as the "last barrier against the Soviets."

Greatest Repository

"America," Archbishop Lucey said, "has the greatest repository of western civilization, handed down from our founding fathers and also has the great protection of force of arms.

"I am convinced our Nation is the last barrier between our civilization and the Soviets."

Monsignor Sheen emphasized that United States citizens thirst for a chance to sacrifice, warned that "if a phony politicians arose in America today and preached the false idea of sacrifice to the state as Hitler and Mussolini did, he could win five million of our youth."

The speaker said, "Catholic men have a glorious opportunity now to bring into the American way of life, the way of life which is embodied in the spirit of sacrifice taught by Christ from the Cross."

Doctrine of Sacrifice

He warned his hearers to go back to their member national organizations and spread the doctrine of sacrifice that the American way of life may endure.

A call for Catholic men in the United States to work for "mutual trust, understanding, and cooperation in labor-management relations," was sounded yesterday.

The speaker was Robert J. Dixson, director of overseas operations for Johnson and Johnson, medical and surgical supplies corporation of New Brunswick, N. J. He addressed one of the sessions of the council at its headquarters at 1312 Massachusetts ave. nw.

The meetings will continue through today.

"A first responsibility of Catholic laymen, whatever their calling may be, is to become informed what their responsibilities are," Dixson said. "Since it now appears obvious that the American economic system is the bulwark of Christianity and offers the means of a secure future, it is clear we must begin now to discharge our duties in economic life.

"It is a matter of duty, which cannot be shirked, for every employer, for every labor leader, and for every worker, so far as his individual capacity will permit, to find the way to bring about mutual trust, understanding, and cooperation in labor-management relations."

Emmet A. Blaes, Wichita, Kans., president of the group, called in his opening statement for Catholic men to "shed their cloak of complacency and self-satisfaction and begin to fight for the preservation of the American way of life and the Catholic principles which support that way of life."

Film Showing Set

The March of Time film, "The Fight for Better Schools," will be shown at a meeting of the Fairlington Parent-Teachers Association at 8 p. m. Monday. The P-TA will meet at the school, 3300 S. Stafford st., Arlington.

MARJORIE KENEIPP,

Immaculata Seminary senior, daughter of District Traffic Director George E. Keneipp, will represent the Junior Chamber of Commerce at the week long National Azalea Festival beginning today in Charleston, S. C. Miss Keneipp, 18, lives at 4801 Brandywine st. nw.

Catholic Veterans Honor Daly, Virginia Editor

John J. Daly, editor of the Catholic Virginian, Richmond diocesan newspaper, yesterday was awarded the Catholic Action Medal of the Catholic War Veterans for distinguished service.

The presentation was made at the opening luncheon of a two-day State convention of the Department of Virginia, CWV, being held at the Blessed Sacrament Church and school in Alexandria.

Daly, cited for fostering "understanding, good will, tolerance and brotherhood" in the field of journalism, civic welfare and community leadership, was named Virginia's Catholic layman of the year.

"Prayer for Peace"

Daly urged the CWV members to carry their Christian philosophy with them into their offices.

Herve L'Heureux, chief of the visa division of the State Department, urged the veterans to adopt the "Prayer for Peace" movement to counteract Soviet propaganda. The "Prayer for Peace" plan consists of one minute of silent prayer daily at noon.

The convention adopted a resolution calling on the national CWV to approve the movement.

Other resolutions asked the Veterans' Administration and Congress to be diligent in maintaining an adequate staff in veterans' hospitals; condemned the sale of obscene literature and pictures and asked action by Catholic Action chairmen, and urged all employers to provide additional opportunities for disabled veterans and handicapped workers.

Capt. Jackson Elected

Officers reelected included Capt. Arthur L. Jackson, USMC, aide to the Secretary of the Navy, as State commander; Gus Thomas of Arlington, treasurer, and James K. Hall of Arlington, State welfare officer.

New officers include Thomas E. Daniels of Arlington, officer of the day; Dr. Robert Hunt of Falls Church, medical officer, and Albert Carretta of Arlington, judge advocate.

Trustees elected included J. E. Lawlor of Falls Church and James Colangelo of Alexandria.

The schedule today includes mass at 10 a. m. at the Blessed Sacrament Church, and installation of department officers.

Busy Week

7000 Attend 9 Conventions This Week

Nine national conventions, including those of the Daughters of the American Revolution and its affiliate, the Children of the American Revolution, will bring more than 7000 delegates to Washington this week.

About 400 are expected for the annual meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, to be held from Thursday through Saturday at the Hotel Statler.

President Truman will address a Thursday luncheon of the ASNE. A banquet address on Saturday night will be given by Secretary of State Dean Acheson. Panel subjects will include Washington coverage, comics and a congressional discussion.

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan and Herbert Emmerich, director of the Public Administration Clearing House in Chicago, will be featured speakers at the spring conference of the Society for the Advancement of Management. The sessions are scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday at the General Services Administration Auditorium, 19th and F sts. nw.

The national legislative committee of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will meet from Monday through Wednesday at the Hotel Statler. Among the issues to be discussed are rotation of Joint Chiefs of Staff chairmanship, inclusion of the Marine Corps commandant as a member of the Joint Chiefs, veterans' housing proposals and rent control extension.

The South Atlantic region, American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, convening at the Willard Hotel Saturday and Sunday, will hear Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, at a luncheon meeting at 1 p. m. Saturday. The Venture Club, junior Soroptimist organization, will meet at the same time.

Dr. Clifford W. Patton, reconstruction liaison officer for UNESCO, will speak in the afternoon session Saturday. Speaker for a 7:30 p. m. banquet will be Miss Grace Nichols of Toronto, first vice president of the Federation.

A meeting of the National Society of the United States Daughters of 1812 next Sunday and Monday will be preceded by a national board reception on Saturday at the national headquarters.

The Daughters of 1812, headed by Mrs. Frederick Brewster Ingram of Dallas, will hear Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) at a 7 p. m. reception and banquet Monday at the Shoreham Hotel.

The National Society of Sons and Daughters of the Pilgrims, headed by Mrs. John G. Chappell of 10016 Dallas ave., Silver Spring, will meet Thursday and Friday at the Shoreham Hotel.

morial service, State reports and evening entertainment on Thursday, the society will hold business meetings on Friday and hear Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) at a 1 p. m. luncheon.

Engineers of various State public utility commissions, including several attached to Canadian provincial commissions, will meet from Tuesday through Thursday at the Raleigh Hotel, with one session on Wednesday to be held at the National Bureau of Standards.

Paul H. Robbins, president of the National Society of Professional Engineers, will address the group's banquet, set for 7 p.m. Wednesday. The opening session Tuesday morning will be addressed by Walter MacDonald, solicitor of the National Association of Railroad and Utility Commissioners.

Sigma Delta Chi, Journalist Society, To Hold Dinner

The Washington professional chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism fraternity, will meet for its annual founders day dinner at 6:30 p. m., Wednesday, April 19, at the National Press Club.

Editors visiting Washington for the American Society of Newspaper Editors convention are expected to be among more than 100 persons present.

The chapter will install these new officers for the next year: President, Sol Taishoff, Broadcasting magazine; vice president, Howard L. Kany, Associated Press; secretary, Dick Fitzpatrick, Quill magazine; treasurer, Wallace Werble, F-D-C Reports; and board member, James Werner, Washington bureau of New York Herald-Tribune.

Clown and His Dog

IN SHRINE CIRCUS—Georgette, one of the two dozen clowns with the Ninth Annual Shrine Circus, rehearses his act with his educated dog, Prince. The pair will be seen in the show scheduled to open Monday night for a week's engagement at Uline's Arena for the Almas Temple Charities and Activities Fund

A parade of floats, bands, members of the Almas Temple shrine and 25 other Washington organizations will stage a parade at noon Saturday to herald the arrival of the ninth annual Shrine Circus.

The 38-act show with an international flavor will open a week's engagement Monday night, April 24, at Uline Arena.

The parade, of which Col. Edward S. Bettelheim, jr., will be grand marshal, will begin at 5th and F sts. nw., and proceed to 15th and K sts. nw., ending at Almas Temple, 13th and K sts. nw.

Many of the performers are Europeans appearing in Washington for the first time. They include Myriam France, star of the Circus Medrano in Paris; La Paloma, Dutch trapeze artist; Elena Garcia, steel cable daredevil from Spain; the Great Smetona, Norwegian slack wire artist; the five Amandis-Ricardis, Danish teeterboard performers; the Triska Troupe, tightwire artists from Czechoslovakia and the Zoppe Troupe, an acrobatic team from Austria.

Guests of the Shrine during the week will be several thousand crippled and underprivileged children from 30 institutions in Greater Washington.

Tickets are available at the Almas Temple; Stabler's, 1322 F st. nw.; and Uline's, 3d and M sts. ne.

Survey May Put Falls Church Water Tower in Arlington

Falls Church's brand new water tower, which city fathers thought was going up in Fairfax County, may turn out to be in Arlington.

It's all the result of a current re-survey of part of the 159-year-old boundary line, set up on orders of George Washington.

The line is part of the original District boundary, laid out in 1791 and marked by 40 sandstone monuments in a "perfect" 10-mile square. In 1846 the land south of the Potomac was ceded back to Virginia by the District.

The Falls Church water tower "looks like its going to be in Arlington," according to John R. Wigglesworth, chief engineer of Arlington's survey division.

The Arlington line apparently lies 40 feet further southwest than both jurisdictions have assumed, according to Wigglesworth, who hastens to add he won't be certain until final statistics are in next week.

The water tower, going up near Leon Corners, isn't the only property that may be affected by the check. Though most of the boundary line lies in wooded land, a few Arlington and/or Fairfax householders may discover their backyards are lying across the county line when survey results are in, Wigglesworth admits.

Arlington's current re-survey affects a 2-mile stretch of the southwest Arlington boundary, running from N. Van Buren and 18th sts. south to about 5th and Carlyn Springs rd.

Here's record-breaking proof of Chevrolet Truck Value...

Chevrolet dealers are selling more than 1350 CHEVROLET TRUCKS A DAY!*

Performance Leaders

The most-powerful trucks and finest performers Chevrolet ever built. The great new Load-Master 105-h.p. Valve-in-Head engine provides higher pulling power and faster acceleration for heavy-duty hauling. Improved, more powerful Thrift-Master engine, too!

Price Leaders

From start to finish, you're money ahead with Chevrolet trucks. Chevrolet's rock-bottom initial cost—outstandingly low cost of operation and upkeep—and high trade-in value, all add up to the lowest price for you.

No other truck ever came close to this record...Proof again that Chevrolet trucks are Popularity Leaders because they're Value Leaders!

America's truck buyers are careful buyers. They compare features, compare performance, compare value. They buy on facts, not claims. And that's why they are buying new Chevrolet trucks at this record-breaking rate—buying more Chevrolet trucks by far than any other make. What greater proof could there be that Chevrolet is the truck for you, too! Come in and look over the Advance-Design models. Big, rugged, heavy-duty trucks with more power than ever. Trucks for every trade and every need. Come in today!

*We and other Chevrolet dealers throughout the nation have just completed the greatest truck-selling month in our history—delivering new Chevrolet trucks at the record-breaking rate of more than 1350 a day.

Popularity Leaders

Final and official 1949 registrations show that in every State in the Union more people bought Chevrolet trucks than any other make. In total, Chevrolet trucks were preferred over the next two makes combined—convincing proof of greater value.

Payload Leaders

You can haul more goods more miles—at lower costs per ton mile—in Chevrolet trucks. Advance-Design and rugged construction bring you important savings in operating and repair costs. Greater hill-climbing power and faster getaway reduce total trip time.

China 'Policy' a Sad Rip in Our Pattern for Asia

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

ALMOST a year has passed since Chinese Communist armies crossed the Yangtze, captured Shanghai and knocked the last shaky props from under American policy in China.

The resultant crash kicked up a huge cloud of dust which has begun to subside in China, but not yet in Washington. The dust of controversy over China is still so thick on Capitol Hill that policy-makers still cannot see their course clearly.

There has been unending argument over what President Roosevelt did at Yalta, or what General Marshall did in China, or what minor "architects of policy" were up to in years gone by. It has been an inquest rather than a national debate, with the single exception, perhaps, of the flare-up over Formosa a few weeks ago.

The uproar over past events has made it impossible to formulate a China policy for the future, although officials are making headway toward an intelligent American policy, or series of policies, toward the rest of Asia.

Thanks to the partisan tug-of-war over the body of non-Communist China, the United States is following two Chinese policies at once, following each of them hesitantly, and getting precisely nowhere.

We continue to help Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalists on their last remaining refuges on the islands of Formosa and Hainan. We do not give enough help to enable them to reconquer the mainland, or even to try. President Truman decided last January that Chiang could have no official American military advisers, and no additional American credits or cash for military supplies.

But Chiang already has enough armaments to blockade the ports of Communist China, and enough American-made planes to bombard the coastal cities. In addition, he is free to buy whatever American arms he can pay for, so long as those arms are not already committed to others.

Economic Aid to Continue

CHIANG CAN also count on a continuance of modest economic help which the United States has been giving Formosa at a rate of about two million dollars a month. This help, largely for rural rehabilitation, comes from funds originally appropriated for all of non-Communist China.

The House has already passed a bill, with Administration approval, to continue spending on Formosa at about the present rate until June 30 of next year, and the Senate is expected to concur.

There is a certain logic in this continuing help, for the United States still recognizes Chiang and his government as the lawful rulers of China. It maintains a big embassy at Taipeh, the Formosan capital, and it continues to deal with Chiang's delegations at the United Nations.

Even if the Administration wanted to cut off this help and this recognition and to recognize Communist China—which the Communists show no sign of wanting—it could not do so because of the intense political loyalties and pressures on Capitol Hill.

It could not even vote to unseat the Nationalist delegates to the U. N., whose presence has led the Russians and their satellites to walk out of every U. N. agency by way of protest. The United States has said firmly that since it recognizes Chiang's government it will vote against unseating his U. N. delegates.

If a majority of the 11 members of the Security Council vote to seat Chinese Communists, the United States will abide by the result. But there is nothing like a majority in sight; and meanwhile the U. N. is gripped by a paralysis that endangers its very existence.

Taking Neither Side

TOWARD Communist China itself, present American policy is likewise hogtied both by the pressures here and by the Communists' contemptuous treatment of American officials and private citizens.

The United States has not boycotted Communist China or helped in the Nationalist blockade, as some members of the Senate were demanding a few weeks ago. On the other hand, it is not challenging the Nationalist blockade except by formal statements calling it "illegal."

After long soul-searching, the Administration decided that trade by private Americans with Communist China could go on, for cash and under strict controls. The policy is that goods of potential military value may not go from here or from American-occupied Japan unless those goods are clearly needed for normal civilian consumption.

Even on this ruling there is some dispute within the Administration. The defense departments are trying to have steel rails added to the so-called 1-A list of outright

The 350 marooned Americans aren't the only actors in the tragi-comedy of Shanghai. Here is a street scene under the new regime: A Chinese Communist tank, pausing in its patrol of the downtown section, is surrounded by curious residents. Airplane 'Prop' Making a Comeback

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A CONTERREVOLUTION is under way in the aviation field which promises to produce some entirely different type airplanes for the Nation's armed forces and airlines than were in prospect only a short time ago.

The aircraft propeller—which appeared on its way out as far as warplanes and crack transports were concerned—is very much back in the picture. Modified materially and turned by a different kind of power plant, the Wright Brothers' whirling blades seem here to stay.

Those spectacular jet aircraft—pushed along at dazzling speeds by the back thrust of burning exhaust gases—still have an important place in American plane building plans. But at least for the immediate future they appear to be in for some stiff competition from another type of aerial propulsion.

Mates Two Systems

THIS is the turbine propeller engine, which mates jet power with the traditional propeller.

Most of the energy generated by a conventional turbojet engine simply is harnessed to a propeller shaft instead of driving the plane by "thrust." Some of the power escaping from the tail-pipe gives added propulsion.

While the "turboprop" engine is not yet flight-tested in this country and considerable development work is still ahead, many responsible military officials, aircraft manufacturers and airline chiefs are flatly predicting that it—rather than the turbojet power plant—will replace existing piston engines in many key air roles within two to four years.

The new engine—it is clear from actual British flight tests and our own work in the field—fills a highly important gap between the comparatively slow but long range piston engine craft and the fast but shorter range jets.

In fact, the turboprop promises to give large aircraft like the Air Force's B-36 and the Navy's patrol planes all the range they need, plus much greater speeds and high-altitude performance.

A Supersonic Propeller

THAT'S with turboprop engines now in existence or nearing completion. In addition, the Department of Defense has a project under way which is expected to produce even higher speed.

This is a flight test research project launched jointly by the Navy, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics and the Air Force to develop a supersonic propeller.

Conventional propellers lose efficiency if revolved at speeds above the speed of sound. The joint project aims at redesigning the blades so they will pass the "sound barrier" successfully, just as airplanes have been streamlined to operate at supersonic speeds.

It is unlikely that the new "props" will be "swept-back" on the order of those on the new fighter planes, however. Curtiss-Wright built and tested such a propeller—which the Germans were working on at VE-Day—but it was not successful. Instead, the supersonic propeller probably will have anywhere from 6 to 14 short, wide, very thin, square tipped steel blades, counter-rotating on two shafts, engineers predict.

Rear Admiral C. M. Bolster, assistant Navy air research chief, says such a supersonic propeller should give turboprop aircraft speeds closely approaching the speed of sound.

Propellers with many of these characteristics are used with the Allison XT-40 turboprop engine—the only American power plant of its type yet announced. The Navy's giant Convair XP5Y flying boat, propelled by four of these engines, has completed its taxi tests and is due to fly any day now.

While the Navy won't say anything about it, the aviation trade press has reported that a Douglas carrier plane, the XA2D, is equipped with the engine and likewise is nearly ready for flight tests.

The Navy has been championing the turboprop engine; but, in the face of general lack of interest elsewhere in American aviation, it was not able to push the type as fast as has been done in Britain. Britain has a carrier-type turboprop airplane and several transports flying. One of the latter, the Vickers Viscount, is due to go into airline service next year.

In fact, it was the unveiling of these English planes at the Farnsborough air show last September which started the "counter-revolution" in American aircraft design. Many United States airmen, both military and civilians, present at the show were won over to the idea that the turboprop has a definite and important place in tomorrow's air.

Ready in a Year

TOP Navy airmen, like Rear Admiral A. M. Pride, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, are convinced that at least for the immediate future, the turbine propeller plane is the best suited for such key naval roles as carrier attack craft, large seaplanes and land-based patrol planes, and probably Marine Corps close-support attack craft.

Pride predicted that turboprop planes will be ready in a year and will be operating with the Fleet in another 12 months.

The Air Force has shown no interest in building such a plane for tactical support of ground troops, holding that jet fighters are best for such work. But USAF chiefs

50 Million More Americans by 2000

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

A KEY fact to be found in the 1950 decennial census now being taken is that the United States is still a "vigorously growing Nation." And there is every reason to believe that "the strength of this Nation 30-50 years hence promises to be far greater than had seemed likely."

These are among the points of a new study of "The Population Upsurge in the United States" by Joseph S. Davis, director of Stanford University's Food Research Institute. An article, "Fifty Million More Americans," in the April issue of Foreign Affairs, is based on the longer pamphlet, and the two quotations above are from the latter.

Davis inquires into the failure of most census forecasters, public and private (they're called "demographers" professionally), to see the "momentous upsurge of the 1940s" in which the Nation's population rose almost 20 million to around 151 million, the largest increase in any decade since the first census in 1790.

More Stable Ally

HAZARDING a forecast, Davis sees an increase of "at least" 50 million more by the century's end. Only "catastrophes greater than World War II" will prevent such a rise, he says.

Even this guess, far higher than predictions generally made a few years ago, is based on increases in the next five decades much smaller than that in the phenomenal '40s. If the rate of the '40s were to continue—which Davis feels is "highly improbable"—our population by the year 2000 would exceed 300 million.

As Davis points out, the revelation of the continued growth of our Nation, instead of the "settling down" so long predicted, has consequences abroad as well as at home. For the world, he says, one important consequence is "that the American economy will display greater stability than could be expected with a slowly growing, stationary or declining population." Hence fears among our allies abroad of another American depression are not likely to be borne out.

For at home, says Davis, the backlog of urgent needs now has been shown to be "far beyond limits envisaged a decade ago." He says there should be no necessity for big public expenditures to bolster up our private economy because of an expected decline in consumer demand, and less of a threat, therefore, of "increasing displacement of private enterprise by state action."

Enough to Eat?

OF THE domestic problems posed by his population forecast, Davis has this to say:

"One question, of course, will be asked: Can Americans produce enough to feed, clothe, house and provide health, recreation and other services for a population growing at some such rate as is now in prospect?

"'Viewing with alarm' is so popular in some quarters that dire prophecies of coming disasters find almost as good a market as 'whodunits.' Among these are prophecies of exhaustion of soils and other natural resources. One must not minimize such dangers for many peoples who multiply better than they produce and conserve, or dismiss the threats as gross exaggerations or pure figments of the imagination even in the United States.

"But our economic history has repeatedly answered former alarmists, and we are justified in expecting these problems of ours to be solved 'in our stride.'

"Certainly our productive powers are now far greater than we realized only a decade ago. Our potentials are so great that, in some fields, the pressing problem has seemed, and may again seem to be, how to consume or economically dispose of what we can produce so that our economy may function with continuous efficiency. The resurgence of population increase here bids fair to ease the solution of this problem."

A Dietary Compulsion

DAVIS FEELS that soil and water conservation, for example, will go forward because of the tendency in the population to enlarge markets for such products as milk, eggs, poultry, meat, fruit and vegetables, with declines in grains, potatoes, dried beans and peas. This shift will call for new agricultural techniques closely allied to conservation.

For years, along with the fears of land depletion, we have been hearing about the drop in the number of children among our higher income and better educated families. In this field, too, Davis has a cheering thought.

Urbanization (or what Davis says should more properly be called "suburbanization"), higher incomes, education and living standards have in the past brought, with few exceptions, lower birth rates. But what Davis calls "the most astounding change" in the 1940-50 decade was the increase in births—more than 32 million, or some eight million more than the 24 million expected.

Davis says that there are indications that this rise in fertility has been "relatively

The past decade's 32 million babies mean another baby boom in the 1970s, says Joseph S. Davis

Ore-Starved U.S. Finds Latin 'Mountain of Iron'

The following is a condensation of an article published in the Journal of Metals and Mining Engineering, publication of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

By T. W. Lippert
Manager of Publications, American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

THE sparsely settled, Spanish-speaking United States of Venezuela is leaping from the donkey to the airplane under the impact of its natural wonders.

Angel Falls, dwarfing Niagara, is hidden in the unexplored Guiana highlands along the southeast border. A few hundred miles northwest are the torrid coastal plains from which gush unlimited streams of oil. About midway are the llanos—low-lying grass lands—beneath which large deposits of bauxite are as yet barely touched by the explorer's diamond drill. And jutting upward 2000 feet from the savanna is a small mountain, 11 miles long and 1 mile wide. It is, or was, La Parida, now renamed Cerro Bolivar.

This is the first disclosure that over half of La Parida is solid iron ore of almost unbelievable purity—by all sober estimate the richest and greatest iron deposit in the history of the world! The United States Steel Corp. has La Parida under denouncement for 100 years, and its discovery was the terminal point of the greatest of all ore searches, and also the quietest.

Within a few years this little mountain will be exerting a profound influence on the American steel industry and the entire American economy. Its existence certainly brightens the long-term military potential of the United States.

Beads on a String

THESE last few years the steel industry has occasionally twisted around to stare uneasily at the six great Superior ore ranges. Like Alice in Wonderland, these ranges seemed to shrink and grow with disconcerting rapidity, depending on whether the reserves were being estimated by Mr. Barloon of Western Reserve University or Mr. Randall of Inland Steel Co.

From out of the blue have come fitful showers of statements regarding Taconite, for the most part statements barren of any real substance. There were reports of Bethlehem opening a new ore pit in Chile, of Bethlehem and United States Steel in Venezuela and of Republic in Liberia.

Up in Labrador, Hanna-Hollinger have mixed a succession of ore discoveries and dramatic press relations with exemplary skill. And down near Trenton, N. J., United States Steel a few weeks ago announced acquisition of 3800 acres of farm land—quite possibly for a 2-million-ton steel mill within a few years.

These individual events may seem only casually related, but, like beads on a string, they all fit together. And by far the biggest bead is Cerro Bolivar.

Within four years, shipments to Birmingham, Youngstown, Pittsburgh and Trenton could be coming out at the rate of 10 million tons annually, to be stepped up later to 15 million tons, all the richest type of blast-furnace grade. And hard open-hearth charge ore, a really scarce grade already 800,000 tons a year in short supply in the Pittsburgh area alone, is scattered in very generous lenses over United States Steel's 10 denouncements and 6 concessions.

Sheet of Taconite

THIS article tells for the first time the story of Cerro Bolivar, a story of men and events which sometimes reaches into the suburbs of improbability. It also tells of the other beads on the string, all components of the future iron ore supply of the United States—Taconite, Labrador, the various ore deposits around the periphery of the Atlantic Ocean, and of course the historic ore ranges of the Lake Superior area.

Stretching across northern Minnesota, in a sheet 100 miles long and several miles wide, lies a primitive iron formation, Taconite, of which the Lake Superior iron ranges were formed. There is not one Taconite, but many types of complex mixtures of hematite, magnetite and waste. At best it is one third iron and two thirds waste.

Sprinkled here and there in the Taconites, like rich raisins in a poor cake, are the high-grade ore pockets, the fabulously rich (at one time) Cuyuna, Mesabi and Vermillion Ranges. The sheet of Taconite rises again in southern Ontario and a few more not-so-very-rich raisins stick out (Mcihipicoten, Gunflint, Atikokan Ranges, et al., with Goulais the most recent finding in the area.)

Another short jump and there is a small rich outcrop at Steep Rock, after which the Taconite falls away only to rise again along the far distant boundary line between Labrador and Quebec, which represents the last remaining large-size explorable iron range in North America.

Here the raisins pop out all over the place, relatively small pockets of rich ore outcropping over an area some 85 miles long and 15 miles wide. The best raisins are on the Hanna-Hollinger concession, and their exploration has generated successive waves of publicity.

Superior Built Country

SINCE the early 1900s, over 80 percent of the Nation's iron ore has come from the few pits in the Lake Superior district. The country has been built and two world wars fought and won on the rich, easily mined ore from these ranges.

The Second World War chopped 340 million tons of the highest quality reserves out of the pits, and a couple of years ago C. M. White, president of Republic, gloomily announced that no more wars were ever going to be fought off Superior's natural ores. He might just as gloomily have announced that there weren't many more years of peacetime prosperity left in the Superior pits.

The usable iron ores in the Lake Superior district, at present rate of consumption, will be totally exhausted in about 1963 for independent companies and about 1970 for United States Steel.

The only two ore options available have been, first, to devise some technically and economically practicable method of exploiting the huge Taconite deposits of the Superior region and, second, to go to foreign sources for ore. And, quite obviously, the Taconite challenge must be met, for a nation with the world's largest steel industry can hardly risk drifting into a position of complete dependence on foreign ore sources.

There's iron from which to make steel in the Taconites of Lake Superior—billions of tons of it. But the winning of usable iron from Taconite involves technical problems of such complexity that until very recently the huge sums of money required made a very large increase in the price of steel seem inevitable. It would be questionable whether the country's economy could stand such an added load, for industrial health over the past half century has been based in great part on the availability of large quantities of cheap steel.

'Manufacturing' Process

TACONITE is a mixture of hematite and magnetite crystals held in a matrix of rock. In most instances the waste accounts for about two thirds of the total bulk; and since all the iron is usually not recoverable, it is necessary to mine close to 4 tons of material to get 1 ton of iron.

The Taconite is ground to a fineness dictated by the crystal size of the magnetite, and the magnetite is separated from the powder by passing over a drum or belt-type magnetic separator. The hematite goes along with the waste in the tailing. Then this powder must be reconstituted or agglomerated in some manner to get a lump suitable for blast furnace charging containing about 63 percent iron.

Up on the ranges, it is said that Taconite will be "manufactured" rather than mined.

Even though the whole burden of future ore supply will not be thrown on Taconite, a number of companies have attacked the problem with a zeal that mounts in direct proportion to the depletion of their natural ores.

In the next 20 years, it is expected that independent steel and ore companies must get into production some 17 million tons of Taconite ores. In the same period, United States Steel might well develop about 10 million tons of beneficiated Taconites.

Lake Superior Taconite concentrates will show up best competitively vis a vis foreign ores in the Lake Michigan and Erie consuming centers.

While the sharp-pencil experts worry the technology and economics of Taconite, however, a number of steel companies are reaching out into foreign countries to locate and acquire rich direct-shipping ores.

Bethlehem an Importer

FOR many years some iron ore has entered the United States from foreign countries—Bethlehem's large shipments from Chile and smaller deliveries from Cuba are the most conspicuous examples. During the 1930s, foreign ores and foreign finished steel were readily available at low prices, and some filtered throughout the Eastern areas of the country. But they never not into the great Midwest industrial areas, primarily through inability to enter the Great Lakes without transshipment.

Certain industrialists in the Great Lakes area based their opposition to the St. Lawrence Seaway on their desire to minimize foreign competition. Of late this opposition has ceased as a reflection of the imperative need to bring in foreign ores, particularly Labrador ores, as cheaply as possible.

The Labrador deposits have attracted a great deal of publicity. There is considerable ore of high quality up there, but there are some rather formidable obstacles facing open-pit mining operations and delivery of the ore over 400-500 miles of tundra to a St. Lawrence River port. Without the St. Lawrence Seaway, the Labrador ore will likely not be competitive with either other foreign ores or Superior Taconite concentrate.

United States Steel's spectacular good fortune in Venezuela is the terminal point of a whole chain of encouraging and discouraging events leading back to Pittsburgh early in 1945. At that time, J. G. Munson, vice president in charge of raw materials of the Delaware Corp., along with B. H. Lawrence, then chief engineer, and R. E. Zimmerman, the vice president in charge of research, became convinced that the corporation would soon have to earmark extremely large sums of money for Taconite plants if the future ore supply were to be assured. It occurred particularly to Mr. Munson that at least one more look should be taken at all the possible foreign ore sources around the entire periphery of the North and South Atlantic Oceans.

This was a momentous decision, particularly so since the corporation's files were crammed with tons of reports on the known deposits, some dating back to 1908. Even though the projected search would be the most detailed ever carried out and involve the expenditure of many millions of dollars, Board Chairman Irving Olds and President B. F. Fairless likewise okayed the gamble.

By early 1946, field forces were in Brazil, Venezuela, Honduras, Guatemala, Puerto Rico, Cuba, Mexico and Sweden. Hundreds of men were beating far back in the hinterland, following up every known showing of ore and tracing down every rumor of red earth.

There were some interesting findings in various countries, but, from the very first, the Orinoco iron ore district in Venezuela seemed to offer interesting possibilities for the discovery of commercial iron ore deposits reasonably accessible to river transportation and of sufficient size to justify utilization. Late in 1945, air observers started to work over the area adjacent to and south of the Orinoco River extending from Ciudad Bolivar toward the Atlantic Ocean, a distance of about 160 miles.

The Venezuelan government had all this territory listed as a federal reserve zone on which concessions of only 40 years were possible, and even they had a number of restrictions. Venezuela considered this area the only possible iron ore area, and for that matter so did Bethlehem and M. A. Hanna, both of whom had been over the ground pretty thoroughly. Some of the United States Steel men were discouraged, some resigned, and the whole Venezuelan exploration began to sag.

At this point Mack C. Lake, a longtime M. A. Hanna geologist, was borrowed by the corporation to take charge of the field work. Mr. Lake and two young geologists on the field team, K. Burrell and F. Kilstead, conceived the idea of aerially photographing the area south of the Orinoco and west of the Caroni, an area open to denouncement, not particularly remote and generally considered of no promise by both the Venezuelan government and the other steel companies.

Record Responses

EXAMINATION of the photographs got the geologists interested in two small hills, known locally as La Parida and Arimagua. La Parida was located about 50 miles due south of Ciudad Bolivar and Arimagua is about 30 miles east of La Parida, nearer the Caroni River. Early in the year a field crew started in to look them over, with S. G. Sargis (a magnetometer expert brought in from Geneva Steel) in charge of the geophysical work.

In April of 1947, the field party found huge outcrops of iron ore all over La Parida and slides exposing large expanses or iron ore at Arimagua. As Mr. Sargis worked over the deposits with the magnetometer, he recorded the highest responses ever recorded in the world! There was no doubt that a really enormous tonnage of iron ore was there and it appeared of a grade in excess of 60 percent iron.

When the word got back to the headquarters town of Ciudad Bolivar, Mr. Lake decided to pull in diamond drills from everywhere. The important thing was to determine as quickly as possible whether the high surface grade extended down to any reasonable depth.

It was also imperative to survey the area well by magnetometer to lay out the boundaries of denouncements. And quietly, too. For the area was outside the federal reserve zone and open to anyone who filed first.

Everything went well, however, and the corporation quietly filed its Carla, Arimagua and Rondon (other ore showings in same general area) denouncements, which were published in the government gazette.

Drilling at La Parida actually got under way in July, 1947. By late 1947 reports coming from the field indicated iron ore outcrops on La Parida every few hundred feet for a distance of at least 3 miles. It was exposed in slides for a height of 200 feet.

By early 1948, La Parida had its name changed to Cerro Bolivar, and drillings had proven some 165 million tons of reserves. Other ore showings in the Cerro Bolivar area—Arimagua, Rondon and Altamira—were given a quick look and estimates made that they also were large deposits.

In early 1949, over half a billion tons were proved at Cerro Bolivar by drilling.

Mack C. Lake is in full charge of the Venezuelan operation for the corporation, and has been made the first president of the newly formed subsidiary, Orinoco Mining Co.

Some idea of the Cerro Bolivar deposit can be obtained by comparing it with the world-famous Hull-Rust-Mahoning open pit at Hibbing, Minn., now scraped almost down to Taconite bottom. Cerro Bolivar alone contains more tonnage of iron than Hull-Rust ever produced or ever can produce.

There are other probable deposits in the Cerro Bolivar area, but the Venezuelan government has closed the territory against further denouncements and only concessions of 40 years may now be obtained.

Stockpile for War

BY looking ahead to the late 1960s, it is possible to estimate that the steel companies other than United States Steel and Bethlehem most likely will be drawing ore from Labrador at the rate of 10 million tons annually, will have at least 17 million annual tons of Taconite-concentrate capacity in operation, be pulling half a million tons from Liberia, and be buying some 4 million tons of Venezuela ore. Dependence on Lake Superior natural ores will have practically disappeared. The capital investment to finance such a program will exceed 600 million dollars exclusive of the lake vessels required for Labrador ore.

The United States Steel Corp.'s ore balance sheet in the late 1960s will probably show at least 14 million annual tons coming from Venezuela and 10 million annual tons from beneficiated Lake Superior Taconites. This will cost that corporation in capital commitments a sum just about as much as for the other steel companies, 600 million dollars plus.

The American steel companies, therefore, must get their hands on 1.2 billion dollars to sink into new capital investment in the period up to 1965, and this staggering sum is in addition to the normal rebuilding of steel-producing facilities.

If the ore program is followed through, however, the drain on Superior natural ores will be lifted in time to retain possibly 500 million tons as a strategic stockpile. If there ever must be another war, just possibly it, too, will be fought in great part off that old standby—the Superior natural ores.

All Eyes on California

Politics Has a Stake in Census

THE BIG political story of the 1950 census will be the story of California and how she grew. Next will be the increasing urbanization of the United States in the past 10 years—almost two-thirds of us are urban rather than rural—and the effect this will have on efforts to break down rural control of the State Legislatures.

Take California first. She'll have eight, maybe nine, additional House members because of her almost 55 percent population increase in a decade, compared to a national average estimated at about 12 or 13 percent.

Los Angeles County alone will be entitled to at least two new members in the House, as many as any one State outside California.

As a whole, the State is expected to jump from fifth to second rank (next to New York) in total population and to jump from fifth position to tie with Pennsylvania, or even pass it, as second only to New York in number of House members.

California's Presidential electoral votes will increase just as its House membership does. Such a spectacular rise is certain to create loud demands within both major parties in California for a "place on the ticket" in the next Presidential election. Winners in this year's battle for the Governorship and for retiring Senator Downey's seat will be logical contenders for such a place.

Tail Wags Cities

NEXT, take the increased tendency of people to huddle together in cities and towns and the effect on the 48 State Legislatures. The census is likely to classify about 100 million of the total 150 million of us as urban, rather than rural. This would be 67 percent urban compared to just under 40 percent in 1900 and 60 percent 10 years ago.

Yet the representation in State Legislatures of these huge urban populations is exactly what it was half a century ago in many States. In 1947, according to the United States Conference of Mayors, areas with 59 percent of the population elected only 25 percent of the members of the State Legislatures.

A recent survey by the Associated Press showed that while 18 States have reapportioned their Legislatures in the past 10 years, Delaware has not done so since 1897, Tennessee since 1900, Illinois and Alabama since 1901, Iowa since 1904, Minnesota since 1913, Louisiana, Pennsylvania and Texas since 1921 and several others not since the early 1930s.

House seats in the Connecticut Legislature have never been reapportioned, the AP reported, and Senate seats remain unchanged since 1901.

The battles between up-State, predominantly rural-Republican New York and the Democratic city are famous. So are those between Chicago and the rest of Illinois. In New Jersey, eight big urban counties with 80 percent of the State's population have 8 members in the State Senate to 13 for the rest of the counties with only 20 percent of the population.

Many of these oddities resulted from imposing a miniature Federal system on the States. For instance, many States give each county one Senator, regardless of population.

This situation gives the farmers and other rural elements representation far out of line with their weight on a population, taxpaying or practically any other basis. Since many State constitutions give the State iron-clad control over its cities, the farmers in effect control the big cities. The mayors contend, with much justification, that this has been responsible for many of the urban financial problems in recent years of almost fantastic city growth.

In this area, there have been recent demonstrations of the problems of urban areas in both nearby Maryland and Virginia when they attempt to get help from the rural-dominated State Legislatures at Annapolis and Richmond.

Those who have struggled, almost in vain so far, to break down this unbalance at the State capitals can hardly wait until the 1950 census figures are in. The new figures should help provide a new set of maps to illustrate the absurdity of minority control.

British View

A Definition Of Verb, 'To McCarthy'

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy's charges of disloyalty in the State Department are the subject of a trenchant article in the March 25 issue of the Economist of London. Written by the authoritative journal's American staff, it attempts, among other things, to explain to its readers how the Wisconsin Republican "makes a case" against a "bad security risk." The following is an excerpt from the article:

THE SENATOR'S method of defining a bad security risk is a fascinating one and new to all but constant readers of the Chicago Tribune. It is something more tenuous than the normal theory of "guilt by association," since the only association needed to establish guilt is that of associating in the same story in the Tribune—or, in this case, in the same statement before a committee. (Judge Kenyon, one of his first exhibits, had never laid eyes on 28 of her "Communist associates.")

"Winston S. Churchill is a member of the Church of England," McCormick-McCarthy evidence would say, "one of whose high officials is an admitted fellow-traveller, the Dean of Canterbury. He was also a member of another organization, the British House of Commons, during a period of 15 years when a known Communist, William Gallagher, was a fellow-member."

During the war, Churchill joined another organization, "The Big Three," and attended all its meetings; one of the original members was a known Communist, Joseph Stalin. At that time also he offered the government of Soviet Russia "any technical or economic assistance which is in our power and which is likely to be of assistance to them."

He is also a member of the Conservative Party, another of whose members, called Maclean, served for some time on the staff of General Tito and wrote of him that "he possessed energy, determination and intelligence . . . a considerateness and generosity constantly manifesting themselves in a dozen small ways . . . a surprising readiness to see two sides of a question." Churchill, who is an escaped (Boer War) prisoner himself, wrote to this Tito, knowing him to be a Communist, a letter in which he "made it clear that he regarded him as an ally and as such promised him all possible help."

Kremlin Soft-Pedaling the Use of Force

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Reporter

A NEW kind of Bolshevik leadership is emerging in Soviet Europe as part of a growing emphasis on persuasion rather than force to keep the people in line.

This new leadership—young, subtle and politically wise—actually reflects the final bankruptcy of the previous rule by death or imprisonment. Severe punishment is still exercised, of course, but more effort is now exerted to win popular support by means short of wholesale "liquidations."

In making this shift from force to persuasion, the Kremlin undoubtedly realized the futility of trying to base any government on a restive, hating people. Then, too, the cold fact remained that past executions always left avengers.

Thus there is much fanfare about the "sincere" interest of the Communist Party in the welfare of the people. There are also "disclosures" of punishments being meted out to party leaders who defrauded or abused the people.

An Understatement

PARTY members themselves are being told that both "Communist and nonparty persons are one in their demand that the Communist leader be an alert, devout, loyal and modest worker of the party, his class and the working people as a whole."

Party reports and public speeches indicate, however, that there is far more involved than public demand for "modest" party workers. Old line Communist leaders have become so power-mad that the Kremlin fears desperate retaliation from the people.

The old-timers are being told that indiscriminate agitation, blood-letting and too hasty resort to arms now serve only to create dangerous hatreds for the party among the masses. In addition, the old-timers are being flatly informed that they just don't know their business in this more complex society.

Hard-Won 'Right'

ONE top Communist leader went so far as to say that many party posts were virtually usurped "by elderly comrades engaged in the resistance movement, who believed that because of past persecution they alone were entitled to manage the affairs of the commune, including all party economic and political functions."

To Western observers, such comments not only reveal political degeneration within the Soviet orbit, but also sound a warning against the new Soviet practitioners.

WITH this in mind, there is considerable meaning in a recent analysis of party shortcomings by Vice Premier Matyas Rakosi, Hungary's Communist boss. Speaking on the eve of nation-wide party elections, Rakosi directed most of his fire against party "bureaucrats." He said:

"Of the 13 leading members of the party in Mezoekovacshaza, 9 managed to be transferred to paid jobs. The president is farming 5 acres of land and is one of the village assessors. The secretary, too, is an individual farmer with 5 acres.

"The party propagandist is an employe of a dairy farm which is privately managed. . . . The head of the cadre is the cashier of the national credit cooperative. The head of the economic section is the chief officer of the National Association of Agricultural Workers. The head of the women's section is responsible for buying up poultry for the cooperative."

Exploit Machinery

WHILE deprecating these double-income tactics, Rakosi was even more denunciatory of outright corruption at state machine stations. Although station managers were charged with deploying machinery for the best development of agriculture, they exploited its use for personal profit.

Rakosi also revealed that many party leaders were "drifters," going from place to place seeking personal advantages. He said:

"Of the departmental heads at the country branches, there is only one who was in his post in 1945. Among the political organizers of the country branches, there is not one who has been in his post since 1945.

"To give an idea about the extent of this fluctuation, the party secretary post has changed hands four times since last July."

Rakosi disclosed that initial party successes in the "stormy" southeastern corner of Hungary had produced "an ever-increasing self-conceit in the leadership of our party organization."

"Our comrades," he said, "more and more underestimate the need for the enlightment and winning over of the masses and, which is a corollary to this, they also disparage the significance of the enemies' activity."

Anti-Horthy Diehards

MOST frequent note in Rakosi's analysis is the need to rid the party of "elderly comrades who are endeavoring to keep young people away from the party leadership under the pretext" that they had not fought the so-called Fascist Horthy regime.

While such an attitude may have been valid once, Rakosi indicates, the political times now are so precarious that every effort must be made to win over the masses whether they be party members or not.

On this point, Rakosi stresses that "nonparty people are not made to feel that their advice and suggestions are called for, expected and appreciated. Where party democracy and criticism is lacking, the party membership is passive and without initiative."

Big Baby Boom of 1940-50 Promises Another in '70s

greater in the higher levels of income and education than in the lower, and in the urban population than in the rural."

The forecasters, Davis reports, now believe that a large part of the unexpected births of the '40s were births "postponed" from the depression '30s, while others were "borrowed" from the '50s, though this is yet to be shown. Marriages were speeded up, we know because the average age at marriage dropped.

Baby Boom in '70s

A POINT of importance is just what influences the "choice between consumption goods and children"—why parents decide to have them, in other words. High employment and good economic conditions in general are major reasons, but there are too few helpful measures of the relationship, Davis notes.

Some forecasting can be done on the basis of the big baby crop in the past decade. Most of the girl babies born in 1938-49 (for which figures are available) will survive to motherhood, he notes.

"Even if a sharp fall in the birth rate should come," says Davis, "an unprecedented number of potential mothers will reach their childbearing peak in the early 1970s." And "just as the large number of births after World War I was in part responsible for the much larger flood of births in recent years, so will that flood tend to be followed by another in the 1970s."

These children and their children-to-come mean tremendous private and public expenditures for present and future years, basic to the continued economic growth of the Nation.

Oldsters in Balance

AS TO THE proportion of older people among us, Davis finds no abnormal number. It is true, of course, that the number of those 60 or 65 and over has risen much faster than the total population as man's life expectancy has risen.

In 1900-50, men and women over 60, Davis notes, have increased from under five million to nearly 18 million, or about 3½ times, while the total population has about doubled. Yet the flood of recent births has driven down the median age of our population (the age at which half of us are older, half younger) in the 1945-50 period.

The long-term trend, Davis feels, will continue upward, but at a lesser rate than had been forecast.

In conclusion, Davis feels that we must now be careful not to overestimate the future population increase as we underestimated it in the past decade. But he feels that the Nation's population figure is healthy, for it is being replenished "primarily by internal growth, not by conquest, domination or immigration." And there certainly is agreement that "our most basic resource is our people."

Slick Democratic Strategy On FEPC Is Wearing Thin

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

"Heavy, heavy hangs over thy poor head.
"What shall you do to redeem it?"

THAT mystic childhood couplet explains the no longer mysterious Administration strategy in repeatedly postponing a civil rights showdown.

So long as the fair employment practices bill just dangles like Damocles' sword, Senate Democrats have been able to work pretty much as a group on most issues.

But once the blow falls, they will split into two familiar factions, with Southern Democrats striking out blindly at anything bearing an Administration label.

As one Truman Democrat put it: "Of course we will have to call up FEPC, but once we do it may be a case of Molly-close-the-door on nearly everything else."

Since January, FEPC has always been scheduled as "the next bill up." Each time, another "important" bit of legislation has intervened. With each reprieve, Southern Democrats showed their gratitude by behaving like good little boys.

Catch is that the day of reckoning can't indefinitely be postponed. Last week's latest reprieve to make way for the really important Marshall Plan authorization, could be the last.

Democratic leaders took a calculated political risk in granting ECA priority, knowing it would provoke the temporary wrath of minority groups supporting FEPC. Their hope was to put through at least one key foreign policy measure while Democrats were still on speaking terms as a party.

Actually, they chanced very little politically. FEPC supporters, they figure, will forgive all the delay once the civil rights bill actually gets before the Senate and more than a token effort is made to put it across.

The "heavy, heavy hangs" method has been used once before on a controversial Administration issue, and with signal success. Last session the Administration dangled the threat of compulsory health insurance to divert attention from a long train of public health measures. While health insurance critics kept their eyes on the main ball, the lesser measures rolled through with comparatively little opposition.

The same strategy hasn't worked so well this session. Opponents know they have health insurance stymied, are concentrating now against related programs.

Besides, the health insurance bogey has never cleared as much as a committee in either House. In contrast, FEPC has already passed the House in compromise form, can be called forward on the Senate calendar at a moment's notice, and will be.

The Administration's "now you see it, now you don't" game with the bill has played hob with the nerves of the Southerners.

"It has ruined this session for me," said one Dixie leader. "I've been afraid to leave the Senate for more than a day at a time. Farthest from Washington I've traveled is Baltimore."

Arms for a Neighbor

WHEN President Gonzalez Videla of Chile addressed the Senate last week in clear Spanish, New Mexico's Dennis Chavez, of almost pure Spanish extraction, caught every word of his speech.

Only a few other Senators, like Arizona's Carl Hayden, North Dakota's William Langer and Maryland's Millard Tydings, could follow it. The rest had to wait for the interpreter.

Chavez speaks sixteenth century Spanish like some 42 percent of his New Mexico constituents. There, as in Chile, many of the old Spanish customs still persist.

When Gonzalez finished his speech, most Senators simply shook his hand. But Chavez threw his arms around him in the conventional Latin embrace.

"To us, that's like a fine handshake," said Chavez.

A Slap Is a Boost

THE anything-goes Florida Senate race between Senator Claude Pepper and Representative George Smathers is producing a sensation a day, most of them whispered.

But the latest got into print.

The Southern edition of the Communist Daily Worker came out flatly for Smathers' defeat. The Communist organ didn't exactly indorse Pepper, but its slap at Smathers was picked up by the Florida press, bannered all over the State.

Pepper promptly called it "trickery." Said Pepper: "Anyone with good sense would know that if the Communists really wanted to defeat my opponent or to favor me, they would not say so publicly."

Smathers, who is barring no holds, made the most of the break.

"Here's a publication that has been praising him for 10 years," he told Florida voters. "Now when he doesn't like their praise—now when he isn't popular—he cries 'trickery'."

Florida newsmen interviewed the man who wrote the Daily Worker article, Florida's Communist Party Chairman George Nelson. Nelson said it wasn't "trickery" and neither was it an indorsement of Pepper.

"We have lots of disagreements with the guy," he said.

Main Communist complaint with Pepper, according to Nelson, is that he has "surrendered to the Truman bipartisan cold war policy." It was just a case of being "more against Smathers than for Pepper," he insisted.

Nelson said representatives of both the Smathers and Pepper camps had approached him, each trying to get him to sign a statement indorsing the other candidate.

Communist campaign pamphlets distributed through the State meanwhile described Smathers as a "big business candidate" and a "duPont errand boy." Even this Communist abuse was a break for Smathers.

In the view of some Democratic politicians, Pepper now looks like the underdog in the race. Others think Smathers may have overplayed the "Red smear." These say Pepper always fights best when losing, may finish strong in the role of a "martyr."

The Acheson Show

FRIENDS of Secretary of State Dean Acheson are urging him to go on the radio every week in 15-minute broadcasts, designed to take America's foreign policy directly to the people.

If the broadcasts materialize, they will be of the intimate "fireside chat" variety, clearing high level policy in terms Joe Doakes can understand.

Friends say the broadcasts could serve the threefold purpose of popularizing the Secretary, answering his critics and keeping the public better informed.

Rent Control Compromise

AN ADMINISTRATION compromise is in the works in a last resort effort to save Federal rent controls, scheduled to expire June 30.

It's one of the reasons Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas confidently predicted that rent controls will be extended, when he left the White House last week.

Next day Senate Banking Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) announced that long-postponed hearings will be held the week of April 24. Officially, the hearings were called on the Lucas-Myers bill providing a one-year flat extension of present controls. Actually, the committee is working backstage on a compromise involving six months rather than one year's extension and substituting more positive local option features.

Under present law, local option is entirely a "decontrol" proposition. Any city can be decontrolled if the mayor and city council request it and the Governor approves. A State Legislature can decontrol an entire State.

Under the compromise, the voters themselves in the big cities would have the say. They would be given real local option—the right to vote to come out from under control or stay under.

As usual, separate legislation will be worked out for the District, but it won't be local option. Here, home rule is still just a bill.

The McMahon Plan

SENATOR BRIEN McMAHON (D., Conn.) will revive his fight for a United States-led world peace offensive, promising aid on a global scale to all nations, including Russia, which agree to cut armaments, submit to strict U. N. inspection.

The State Department turned thumbs down on the plan when McMahon unveiled it weeks ago in a Senate speech, but the public response was tremendous. Now McMahon's out to convince the department it made a mistake in not accepting his plan or at least producing something better.

"What the world needs more than anything else is some basis for hope that another war can be averted," he tells colleagues. "This plan bridges that gap in our present policy."

In his fight to supplement the "Marshall Plan" with the "McMahon Plan," he will have the support of Senators like Illinois' Paul Douglas, Connecticut's William Benton and Minnesota's Hubert Humphrey.

Cast of Characters

A UNIQUE party in honor of Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas' new book, "Of Men and Mountains," was staged in Yakima, Wash., last week.

Besides Douglas, guests included a Montana sheepherder and other characters in the rough, veteran mountain climbers, hunting and fishing guides.

In fact, the guest list was lifted right out of Douglas' book.

Popular Magazine to Have Broad Concept of History

PLANS for a popular magazine of history, to be published under the auspices of the Society of American Historians, Inc., will be described Wednesday night at the Library of Congress.

Speakers at the 8:30 p. m. meeting in the library's Whittall Pavilion will include Prof. Allan Nevins of Columbia University, president of the society; Dr. Henry Seidel Canby, authority on literary matters, and Henry Pringle, prominent Washington writer.

Sponsoring the meeting are Mrs. Clark Clifford, Dr. Louis Wright, Folger Shakespeare Library director, and Dr. Wood Gray, George Washington University history professor.

As projected, the magazine will be devoted wholly to historical material, and will be liberally illustrated with photographs, prints and maps.

Emphasis will be on readability, since the magazine is designed for the general reader. There will be no footnotes or other scholarly apparatus, but all articles will be carefully checked for accuracy.

The magazine's definition of history is a broad one: "The account of completed events, whether the events were completed yesterday or 5000 years ago. It includes biographies, battle scenes, economic struggles, political and ideological clashes, intrigues among the great and the life cycles of the lowly."

Translated into reading matter, that means articles on such topics as the origin of lawn tennis, German science in World War II, the history of socialized medicine, the history of the newspaper Stars and Stripes in both World Wars, food and drink in the American colonial period, and the ancient Sumerians' use of bricks as a writing material.

The plan has received the praise of such persons as Historians Foster Rhea Dulles and Harold C. Deutsch, Authors Ben Ames Williams and Struthers Burt, and Radio News Commentators Elmer Davis and Raymond Swing.

Currently the magazine, now on the drafting board, is engaged in a brief fund-raising campaign for $50,000 to finance it through a final preparation stage. The campaign for $500 contributions from 100 persons was launched with Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, Henry Luce and Roy Larsen, Marshall Field, Nicholas Roosevelt, Senator Clinton Anderson and Judge Learned Hand among the initial contributors.

School Aid Is Sought for 600 Areas 'Robbed' of Taxes by Uncle Sam

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A COMMUNITY depends upon its taxable industries for funds to support its schools. When the major industry of the area is a tax-free Federal installation, the community is in financial trouble.

In essence, that is the plight of 600 communities now appealing to the Federal Government for school aid.

A bill introduced by Representative Cleveland M. Bailey (D., W. Va.) would recognize Federal Government responsibility to help these communities educate their children. The bill, H. R. 7940, would give aid for school maintenance and operation in communities where military or civil activies of the Federal Government have created unusual school problems.

A companion bill that would help these same hard-hit communities finance school construction is under consideration.

A House Education and Labor Subcommittee recently completed hearings on H. R. 7940. Committee members traveled to 23 locations to hear witnesses from 42 States. A 1500-page report tells what the committee found.

In these communities, most of which expanded rapidly in the war and postwar period, the Federal Government has brought in thousands of workers with families while taking away taxable land that ordinarily might provide funds to educate the children.

These communities were sending youngsters to classes in basement rooms, crowding them into unsafe and inadequate buildings or giving them only half a day's schooling.

Twelve of these 600 "critical" areas were the nearby cities of Alexandria and Falls Church and the Maryland and Virginia counties closest to Washington.

The Maryland areas affected are Anne Arundel, Calvert, Charles, Harford, Montgomery, Prince Georges and St. Marys Counties.

The Virginia counties are Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William.

The District of Columbia was not considered and will receive no aid if the bill is passed. Ostensibly this was done because the Federal Government now makes a contribution to maintenance of the city. Federal aid to nearby communities, however, might give local officials a lever with which to pry loose additional school funds.

National Conference Here

A GROUP of civic leaders of these 12 areas and the District have banded together into the Metropolitan Area Citizens Committee for the Public Schools.

The committee will be host to a national conference of representatives from other critical areas across the country. The public meeting will be held at 8 p. m. Tuesday, April 25, in the auditorium of Western High School, 35th and R sts. nw. Object of the meeting is to gain support for the bill.

Speakers will include officials of the Government agencies which created the problem in some of the areas, and representatives of a few of the hardest hit communities.

The House bill would measure the extent of Federal responsibility in these "critical" areas and set a formula to determine payments. The first provision would take care of a community's loss of tax funds.

An area would be eligible for aid if land owned by the Federal Government were valued at one tenth or more of the total land wealth of the county. The community's tax rate would be applied and the area would receive aid equivalent to lost taxes.

A community also would be eligible for aid if 3 percent of school children lived on Federally owned property. The Federal Government would reimburse the community for the cost of educating each such child.

If 3 percent of the school enrollment consisted of children whose parents worked on Federal land, the community would receive one half of what it costs to educate each child.

Funds would be available for communities that expanded rapidly during the war. If a school district's enrollment had increased by 25 percent since 1940 and the increase resulted from Federal activity, the community would receive for three years a sum of money to be determined by the United States Commissioner of Education.

In the future, any community where enrollment increased in any one year by 10 percent above the average for the three previous years would receive for three years an allotment to be determined by the Commissioner of Education.

A Wartime Measure

FEDERAL school aid to distressed areas is not a new idea.

During the recent war, Congress through the Lanham Act appropriated funds to help areas affected by war installations and industries to provide community facilities, including public schools.

In the five years the act was in effect, 900 school districts received $43,600,000 in operating funds. An additional $101,498,003 was allocated to the overburdened districts for 1150 new school buildings.

Lanham Act funds were cut off shortly after the war when it was anticipated that demobilization of the armed forces, shutting down of war plants and readjustment to peacetime conditions would end the special need.

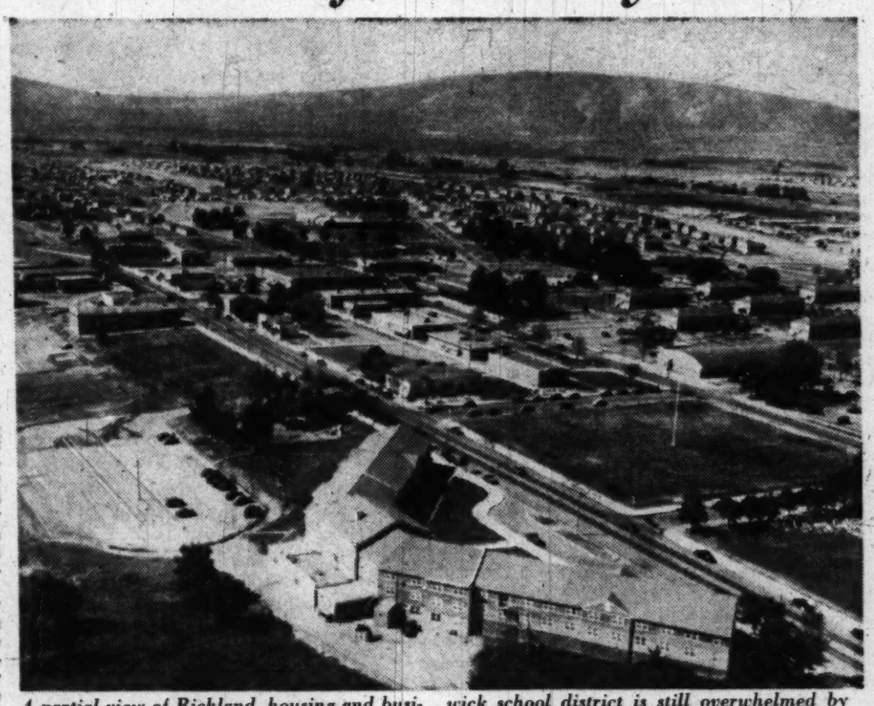
Federally owned war housing projects, however, remained filled to capacity. Families failed to move from war-swollen communities. National defense activities in many areas continued at near wartime strength. Postwar projects such as flood control, reclamation and reforestation created new problems or compounded old ones.

The war-inspired high birth rate further crowded already overburdened schools.

Congress in sporadic and piecemeal fashion continued some aid each year. School boards and superintendents could do little planning from one year to another, not knowing when aid would be shut off.

At present, more than a dozen Federal agencies are providing funds to help school districts. Assistance varies from a few dollars for each child to a complete education. Some agencies have no program at all.

Here are a few examples drawn from the committee hearings which show how Federal activity has created problems for school districts:



A partial view of Richland, housing and business development for the Hanford Engineer Works in Washington State, where the Kennewick school district is still overwhelmed by pupils who swarmed in with their war-worker parents and are still there

Jefferson Barracks, Mo., is a Federally owned area of 1000 acres and a population of 1700 families. Most of the families are those of veterans living in Public Housing Authority homes or of service personnel from Scott Field Air Base. Each family averages 2.8 children.

This year there are 900 school-age children in the area. Next year it is estimated there will be 1200 and by 1953 the number will grow to 2000.

The district has no public school and insufficient revenue to finance one.

The only two real property taxpayers are the Missouri Pacific Railroad and the Mississippi Fuel & Pipe Line Corp., which have installations running through the area. Total tax from this source and from personal property of the residents last year was $6000.

Jefferson Barracks, which has been sending its children into St. Louis and two other nearby areas where there are schools, now owes a tuition bill of more than $30,000.

Four Federal agencies controlling Jefferson Barracks lack authority to help the community provide schools.

From 108 to 3200

Midwest City, Oklahoma, is an example of a large Federally owned, tax-free industrial operation that has brought thousands of workers into an area while removing land from tax rolls.

Before the war, this predominantly rural area housed its 108 schoolchildren in a single school. With the war came the Douglas Aircraft Co. and Tinker Field. Both the plant and the field still are in operation and employ 15,000 workers.

School enrollment has jumped from the 108 pupils in 1941 to 3200 at the beginning of the current school year.

The only tax source is the homes in which the workers live. The source has proven insufficient.

More than a third of students are housed in temporary buildings. One such school is a temporary barracks located at the end of a runway for visiting aircraft and adjacent to a heavily traveled four-lane highway.

The Kennewick School district in Benton County, Washington, is the "bedroom and living room" for workers at the tax-exempt Pasco Navy Air Base, the Hanford Engineer Works, McNary Dam, the Kennewick Irrigation District and the Columbia Basin Reclamation Project.

Before the war, school enrollment was 849; currently it is 3500. School costs have soared 700 percent. Classes meet in improvised facilities and overcrowded rooms.

Testifying before the subcommittee, the Kennewick school superintendent declared:

"If further expansion in students comes to pass in Kennewick district, the only thing the district can do is enroll the youngsters and notify them when and if we have the facilities available to do the job of properly educating the children."

Nearby Arlington County is another example of the "bedroom and office" community lacking taxable industry.

In Arlington the Federal Government has removed from the tax rolls some of the county's most valuable land until now it owns one seventh of the property. Federal areas include Arlington National Cemetery, Navy Annex, Fort Myer, National Airport and the Pentagon.

Testifying before the subcommittee, Arlington School Superintendent William A. Early said the Federally owned land has a value of $302,000,000. If privately owned, it would bring the county $4,175,000 yearly in taxes.

While withdrawing land from the county, the Federal Government through its activities has increased the population from 57,040 in 1940 to an estimated 140,000. Apartment developments and homes for Federal workers employed in the county and in the District have sprung up on what 10 years ago was farmland.

Since 1940, school enrollment in the county has grown from 9000 students to 14,200 and at a rate of 12 to 14 percent a year.

Currently, the Federal Government is paying the county $20,000 annually in lieu of taxes toward the school expenses of 800 children living on the temporary housing developments of Shirley Homes, Pickett, Jeb Stuart and Jubal Early. The total cost of educating the 800 children is $136,000 a year, with the State of Virginia paying $34,800 of the bill.

Tax sources in Arlington must pay the remaining $90,200 to educate the children living in the Federally owned homes.

Superintendent Early told the subcommittee that parents of 6000 additional children are employed at nontaxable Federal installations.

It is estimated that under the Bailey bill, Arlington County would be eligible for $400,000 in aid through payments for children living on Federal land and for children of Federal employes. In addition, the county would qualify for aid under the provisions of increasing enrollments at a rate to be set by the Commissioner of Education.

'Turboprop' Attracting Airlines' Attention

are very much interested in the turboprop for their big B-36 bombers.

They want, however, considerably more power than is produced by the Allison T-40 engine and are surveying the later, as yet unannounced, turbojet models of all the engine builders, with a view to conversion to turboprop.

One is Pratt & Whitney's J-57, which started out two years ago to be a turboprop, but was developed as a pure jet when USAF chiefs decided the former had little promise for their needs. It is expected to produce something between 9000 and 11,000 horsepower, compared to the T-40's 5500 to 6000.

Many of the Nation's plane builders and airline operators also are coming around to the view that turboprop transports are the best bet for tomorrow's transports, rather than trying to build better piston engine craft or taking the longer step to jet airlines.

Convair has announced that it will have a new airliner flying this summer equipped with the Allison T-40. Decision to use this engine instead of piston propulsion will permit the craft to carry 10 extra passengers or 350 more gallons of gas.

Here are some of the advantages claimed for the turboprop over jet or piston engine craft:

Fuel consumption is close to half that of pure jet aircraft and compares favorably with piston type planes.

The engine gives good performance both at sea level and high altitude, whereas the jet is inefficient at low altitude but at its best "upstairs" and the piston engine is just the opposite.

Short take-offs and landing runs are possible with the turboprop, true also of the piston but not the jet.

Speeds of perhaps 550 mph, now are possible with the turboprop and probably another 100 miles will be added if the supersonic propeller pans out.

There is practically no vibration on either type jet craft and both produce less cabin noise than piston craft—an important factor in airline operations. The turboprop is less noisy than the pure jet.

Backers of the new type are not "claiming the moon." They concede jet power will prevail in the fighter field and piston engines in slower transport and auxiliary military types—for the immediate future. They concede that considerable development work lies ahead. Chief troubles now encountered are fuel, propeller and other controls. But that old veteran, the propeller, with its face lifted and a new drive, they are confident, will prove a dangerous rival for the youthful and glamorous jet thrust for the next five years.

Sesquicentennial

Washington's sesquicentennial is by no means a local event. The establishment of this Capital on the banks of the Potomac was an act of faith on the part of the founding fathers that symbolized their intention of building a great nation. In the century and a half that has elapsed since the Government moved to Washington the city has grown along with the country whose political nerve center it is. In observing the sesquicentennial of that incident, we are really celebrating the rise of the United States to its present position of world leadership.

The country that planned and began to build its Capital here was, as Chief Justice Taft once said, "a little hemmed-in Nation, boasting of a single seaboard, with a population of only five millions, and with a credit so bad that lot sales, lotteries, and borrowing upon personal security of individuals had to be resorted to in order to finance the new Capital . . ." But its leaders had both courage and vision. They laid the foundation for a magnificent city, fully aware of the fact that centuries would be required to complete their plans. There came a day when "little Americans" obliterated the Mall and closed off some of the vistas that L'Enfant had planned under Washington's direction. For three quarters of a century the idea of building a great Capital City was dimmed. Even today Washington is an unfinished city in the sense that it is marred by slums, temporary buildings, and many indications of poor planning. Yet much of its grand design has been restored, and it has acquired many of the aspects of a great capital. It has appropriately become a mecca for patriotic pilgrimages as well as the political nerve center of the Nation.

What is most impressive as the sesquicentennial celebration begins, however, is not the city of today but the vision of the men who laid its foundation under the adverse circumstances prevailing between 1791 and 1800. With their meager resources, they planned for greatness in the unfathomable future. This generation would be blind indeed if it saw only what has been accomplished in comparatively recent times and forgot the faith, determination and long-range perspective of the men who began the task of turning a wilderness into a capital and a much larger wilderness into a great nation.

Paying The Audience

Senator Aiken has raised a nice point of ethics as to whether the Department of Agriculture has used Government funds to influence legislation. On April 4, Secretary Brannan spoke to a meeting of Minnesota county committeemen of the Production and Marketing Administration called to develop a 1951 agricultural conservation program. Apparently to increase the size of the audience, a letter was sent out by the State PMA committee chairman inviting 5000 community committeemen to the meeting and offering to pay not only traveling expenses but up to two days' salary for farmers who traveled long distances. Presumably the money was to come from soil conservation funds. The letter stated:

> We feel it is extremely important for you community committeemen who represent agriculture at the grass roots to have this chance to hear your Secretary, who is making a terrific fight to maintain some measure of economic stability for farmers.

To be sure, Minnesota's Republican Senator, Edward J. Thye, was invited to the meeting but could not attend. In his absence this particular part of the session seems to have been a sounding board for Democratic politicking. According to the St. Paul Pioneer-Press, Secretary Brannan devoted most of his speech to plugging the Brannan Plan and the remainder to attacking the American Farm Bureau. The worst performance, however, was that of Senator Humphrey. He made a pathetic attempt at humor by referring to the "existing" Hope-Aiken Plan as having in it "little hope and a lot of achin'." The present farm law, of course—as Senator Humphrey should know—is the Anderson Act, passed last fall by a Democratic Congress. It superseded the Hope-Aiken law, and, incidentally, eliminated some of the features which Senator Humphrey criticized the present law for not having.

It is true that almost any statement on farm problems these days is political, and undoubtedly there have been abuses on the other side. Secretary Brannan has a perfect right to damn the Anderson law and to advance his own plan in all legitimate ways. But a division of the Department of Agriculture does not have the right to use Federal funds to buy an audience to listen to a one-sided story. As the Minneapolis Star observed:

> Minnesota has just seen how PMA can become a potent political pressure setup. Committeemen were brought into St. Paul at public expense and subjected to the salesmanship of Democratic Party leaders. Because it has grass roots access, PMA can become one of the most powerful of political arms.

Judging from reports, PMA already is just that. The St. Paul performance will confirm fears that, whatever its useful work, PMA is chiefly significant as a machine to purchase the farm vote.

Genocide

The recommendation of a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee that the United Nations genocide convention be ratified by the Senate will be accepted promptly, we hope, by the full committee and by the Senate itself. The subcommittee took into account some extremely tenuous and shadowy fears about the convention expressed in behalf of the American Bar Association. To avoid any possibility that racial discrimination in the United States might be characterized as a form of genocide—clearly defined in the convention itself as deliberate and systematic extermination of an ethnic group—the subcommittee set forth four "understandings" to make crystal clear the American position. With these "understandings," any fears about the convention must be considered, as Senator McMahon, chairman of the subcommittee, called them, "groundless."

The defect of the genocide convention is that it is too cautious. It cannot be reckoned in its present form a very formidable guarantee against the destruction of minorities on account of religion or race. Nevertheless it has great significance as an expression of the will of civilized men to establish a system of international law under which human rights will be respected. The term "genocide" was coined by Prof. Raphael Lemkin of the Yale Law School, and great credit is due him for his patient efforts to have the hideous crime which the term designates recognized and outlawed by the United Nations. This country assumed leadership in securing adoption of the genocide convention by the General Assembly; its ratification should help to bring the convention into actual operation.

Golf Course Control

There is good sense in the proposal of the District Recreation Board to buy out the concessionaire on the city's five public golf courses and take over control from the Department of the Interior. The anomaly of Federal control of local recreational activities has lasted far too long; moreover, dissatisfaction with the golf courses is running high. Persons who have played on them know that their condition compares unfavorably, to put it mildly, with public courses in other cities. The concessionaire, Severine G. Loeffler, has operated under an almost constant barrage of criticism, and his loose bookkeeping system has brought strenuous questioning in Congress—questioning which, unfortunately, has never been followed through to a conclusion. The criticism also has included the Department of the Interior.

Whether Loeffler's interest is worth anything near the $232,000 he quotes must, of course, be determined by independent audit. Not all the slipshod accounting of previous years can be corrected now, but fortunately a new Interior audit, and the forthcoming report of the General Accounting Office, will provide some standards for judgment. If a fair adjustment can be worked out, we hope Congress will grant the $275,000 extra appropriation, which in actuality would be a self-liquidating loan. With assurance from the Recreation Board that the present nonsegregated racial policy will be continued, a lot of the trouble with the golf courses can be cleared up by vesting responsibility for and management of the facilities in a single local body.

Science And Freedom

There has come to hand a sober discussion in the respected British scientific periodical, Nature, of the problem involved in maintaining freedom in contemporary science. The article, titled "Freedom and Responsibility in Science," faces the problem in terms of British apprehensions based upon American experience. It discerns cause for anxiety, alike in the action of Congress requiring loyalty and security investigation of all persons receiving Atomic Energy Commission fellowships, and in the repudiation of scientific methods revealed by the genetics conflict in Russia. This bracketing of what has happened in the United States with what has happened in the Soviet Union as twin warnings to scientists who remain outside both the iron and the golden curtains ought to give some pause to our own apostles of supersecrecy.

The editors of Nature see the freedom of science "as one facet of the wider problem of the preservation of a free society." They by no means dismiss the need for secrecy in certain areas nor ignore the requirements of national defense and security. "We must seek to formulate our conception of the freedom of science," they say, "in the context not only of responsibility for creative work, but also of responsibility for the well-being of a society in which scientific effort is an essential element." Accordingly they view the rights of scientists in relation to obligations—the only relationship in which rights can be said to hold any meaning.

Nature espouses, as did the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, the positive view of security: "we must look primarily to achievement and not to negative restraint." But of course freedom is the fountainhead of achievement. In respect of science, this means maximum communication among colleagues, the right to obtain general information at least about projects in progress, and the right to publish freely the results of researches. The corollary is a minimizing of secrecy, the confinement of restrictions to the narrowest possible area consistent with national safety.

After Damascus

The converts from communism in the United States now represent a large and increasingly influential sect. There is no doubt that until a few years ago, that is, until fellow-traveling ceased to be the fashionable attitude, they were subjected to a good deal of persecution, and were made targets of various forms of personal abuse and slander, particularly if their abjuration was made in any public manner. It is even possible that the lives of some who, like Mr. Whittaker Chambers, had been involved in the underground or conspiratorial, section of the party were in some danger. The horror and hatred that these apostates inspired among devout party-liners has been pretty well described in Mr. Lionel Trilling's novel, The Middle of the Journey.

All that, however, has changed. In the general if belated public awakening to the meaning, methods and purposes of communism these converts have been surrounded with much the same aura they shed as party militants in the days of the American Writers' Congress, the League Against War and Fascism and the League of Women Shoppers. And the truth, of course, is that the country has some reason to be grateful to these deserters from the party, for it has been through their testimonies rather than through any of the normal organs of public enlightenment that we were informed of the character of the Communist apparatus and of the extent of its penetration into places of power. It was likewise from the former Communists that we gained some inkling into the strange psychology whereby so many young members of the bourgeoisie decided to commit themselves to the destruction of the system to which they owed all their privileges.

But need it follow from all this that former Communists are now our safest guides in determining how to continue the cold war against the Soviet Union and the men who govern it? Prof. James Burnham, whose treatise, The Coming Defeat of Communism, is now exerting a good deal of influence in high places, would have us believe that it does follow. In order to deal intelligently and successfully with Communists, says Prof. Burnham, it is almost necessary to have been a Communist oneself; because > the anticommunism of an individual who has successfully cured himself of communism is of a different order from the anticommunism of one who has not only not experienced communism but has never felt its immense attraction to the disheveled modern soul. The latter is based very often on prejudice and ignorance; the former springs from knowledge and inner torment. Moreover, the immunity to communism by having harbored and then thrown off its virus is far more absolute than the congenital immunity. It is my own belief that those who have been Communists, or who have at least wanted to be, are the very best soldiers in this fight against communism; and that they will, and must, have a prominent and even leading part in the conduct of that fight. (Italic ours.)

Now this is very curious reasoning, and no less curious because it is implicitly contradicted elsewhere in Mr. Burnham's book. For he urges the necessity of an offensive alliance of American diplomacy with the two groups of persons in the modern world who have shown the least susceptibility to the Communist virus, the Roman Catholic clergy and the devout followers of Islam. To carry Mr. Burnham's logic to a conclusion would be to say that the surest way to rid the world of communism would be to expose every one to it. It is of course true that some of the peoples who have been most thoroughly exposed to communism—the Poles, Czechs and Hungarians, for example, and if we may trust the testimony of refugees, even a good many Russians—have developed a strong distaste for it, as Professor Burnham acknowledges elsewhere in emphasizing the importance to be placed upon the resistance movements within Communist countries.

Thus when Mr. Burnham speaks of the attraction of the Marxist ideology for the "disheveled modern soul," he is thinking, we suspect, not of men and women in general, but of restless intellectuals like himself. Communist propaganda among the masses is always careful to employ only the most concrete and material terms, such as bread, land, jobs and so on. But the "disheveled souls" that think to find peace and communion within the Communist Party are fetched with another and very different sort of bait, and we suspect that in most cases the bait is power—the power that is necessary if one wishes to remake the sorry world according to heart's desire.

When the twice disheveled intellectual discovers that communism is itself a greater evil than all the social evils he wished to abolish by it, the desire for power does not necessarily desert him. He now needs the power for another purpose—the eradication of communism. Thus it is not his desire, but the object of his desire, that has changed. And this is why it may be dangerous to entrust him with the power that he seeks. In becoming a Communist he persuaded himself that he must destroy in order to create; but he found that destruction had become an end in itself. And now he seems likely to forget that the extent of the coming victory over communism will be measured not by what we destroy but by what we preserve.

"He Claims To Be An Officer"

Spring Fever In Europe

By Andre Visson

Pre-Crisis Climate

SPRING is here! But it is not the spring of yore which quickened the hearts of poets, lovers and gardeners. It is no longer the season of rebirth. This year spring comes bringing with it a dark trail of disquieting rumors. In its wake are uncertainty, anxiety and even defeatism.

During the winter months most of Washington's responsible observers were ready to echo the belief of George F. Kennan, chief of the State Department's planning board, that war was not inevitable. They believed that the cold war could go on for years without becoming a shooting one. But with the coming of spring the cold war, like the weather, is getting warmer. And responsible observers are beginning to ask: Have we not been indulging in wishful thinking? Have we not been rationalizing too much in our evaluation of the international situation?

To be sure, it is still true that logically, the evil men in Moscow's Politburo would seem to have nothing to gain by starting a war. They have won so much without fighting that they must feel that they can continue to win much more in the same way. Then too, they are having trouble in their orbit, and they know that they cannot depend on the enslaved population in the satellite countries. They must also know that democracies do not start preventive wars.

BUT WHAT explanation is there for the continuing rumors and reports about the increasing Soviet stockpiling of fuel and strategic materials? What of the rumors of the concentration of Soviet forces in the Baltic Sea area, where the Soviets shot down the missing American naval plane? What about the rumors of trouble along Yugoslavia's border? What about the increasing Communist agitation in Italy and France? And what about the preparations for the Berlin parade of 500,000 Reds the end of May?

The last question may hold the clew to this spring's jitters. The Moscow policy makers are acting as if they were carefully preparing the proper climate for a new German crisis. They are not behaving like conspirers planning a coup. They are not concealing their movements. They are acting like men who want us to expect the worst. They want us to know that some time this spring—or later in the summer—they are going to make a major move somewhere in Europe, probably in Germany. They want to keep us guessing, but they obviously want us to think that it is going to be a major crisis with high stakes—nothing less than the status of Berlin!

This is the apparent objective of the Soviet spring offensive. But because it is so "apparent," many responsible observers in Washington doubt whether it is the real objective. They wonder whether it is not another Soviet smoke screen to conceal the real Soviet objective. In their obvious effort to make us concentrate our attention on western Europe and especially on Germany, the Moscow planners may want to distract our attention from the Far East. They succeeded in doing this in 1948. While we were going all-out to win the air-lift battle for Berlin, we seemed to forget—or at least to minimize—what was going on in China.

IF IN 1950 we again concentrate on Berlin and on other possible developments in Germany, Moscow may think that our attention will again be diverted from developments in Asia. If we find ourselves compelled to make a choice between western Europe and southeast Asia, we may again, the Moscow planners believe, give preference to Europe.

The only way to frustrate these Soviet hopes and expectations is to make it clear to Moscow that we are determined to keep a watchful eye on both western Germany and southeast Asia and, if necessary, act in both areas. All the preliminary, if unofficial, information on the forthcoming American-British-French conference admirably serves this purpose. All press reports are unanimous in emphasizing that the German problem and the situation in southeast Asia will have the same priority on the agenda which is now being discussed by Washington, Paris and London.

Another possible objective of the Moscow planners is to use the spring campaign of alarming rumors to block and sabotage the economic recovery and military preparedness of western Europe. Every time they succeed in getting a European industrialist to postpone a project for some new development, they have won a minor battle. Every time they succeed in making an American investor feel that it would be wiser to wait before investing his money in a European venture, they have won a minor battle. And if they should succeed in making America's strategists wonder whether it is wise to send so much military equipment to western Europe, they will have won a major battle.

Our policy toward western Europe, as perfectly summed up by General Bradley, is a policy of calculated risks. So long as we are willing to take the risks, we have a better than fair chance to win the cold war. But if we should become scared of taking the risk, Moscow will win the war without having to fight for it.

Senator Watkins' Staff

In your April 14 issue, you ran the news story of the Senate report with respect to the number of relatives employed by the Senators. Concerning me you said, "One Senator—Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah)—had one son, two daughters, and a daughter-in-law on his payroll at varying times."

That statement standing alone might create some false impressions. The facts are, as you can easily ascertain from the report, that my daughters Nina and Jeanene worked for a period from August 12 to September 4, 1948. They are typists and came for a short period on some special work and while other members of the staff were on vacation. That is the only time they were ever on my payroll.

My son, Dr. Arthur R. Watkins, a World War II veteran, who spent six years in Europe, is a specialist in modern European languages and European history. He is a member of the faculty of a Western university. He did research for me here in Washington for approximately three months in the summer of 1949 while the Atlantic Pact and arms implementation measures were before the Congress. That is the only time he was ever on my payroll.

My daughter-in-law, Mrs. Lorna Watkins, is the widow of my son Don, who died about a year before I came to the Congress. She and her 4-year-old daughter are living with my family in Arlington. She is a regular and full-time employe. She was my secretary before I came to Congress and is a trained secretarial worker.

All the members of my family rendered full-time service when they were employed and came when I had difficulty in getting help in the office.

ARTHUR V. WATKINS.

Effect of Rent Control

Once again the fate of rent control is to be decided. Last spring it was said that if the law were extended one more year that would definitely be the end of it—there would be no more rent control. Is it becoming such a fixed idea of a few that they must have a bargain in rent or gain some other advantage no matter how much it hurts anyone or everyone else so long as they can put it over? Don't people ever stop to think what the landlord has sacrificed since the outbreak of the war in deprived income which will never be made up to him while their own incomes rose several times because of increased costs?

The rent law has a deeper significance than that of mere dollars and cents. Is it not unthinkable, unsound, and demoralizing to encourage the practice of seeking personal advantage at the expense of others?

How can Tighe Woods and the defenders of rent control justify their sweeping implication that landlords are "gougers" when they themselves admit that there are cases in decontrolled areas where 50 percent or more of the landlords do not increase the rent at all? Does this not imply injustice, a lack of respect for and goodwill toward the landlord?

Landlords do not belittle all tenants, although the term "gougers" could be just as fairly applied to some of them. What else is it but "gouging" when tenants still openly oppose decontrol which would put an end to their unfair advantage over landlords, by which they have been profiting all these years, without any consideration of the landlord who has suffered 10 years of privation of fair business practice? No law is a good law that favors one class at the expense of another.

JULIA THORWARTH.
Washington.

Asia Nationalism

I refer to your April 8 article by Vicente Villamin on "Asia Losing Its Old Order to Communism."

He says America is not losing anything in Asia, but that it is Asia which is losing its very soul and the old order to Russian communism. He further implies that the old order of Asia is better than the new way of communism. I would like to ask Mr. Villamin, how can that old order which invited Western imperialism in the nineteenth century be good for the Asiatics in the twentieth century? If United States Asiatic policies are for the support and revival of that fascistic nationalism, then Americans better pack their bags and leave those countries that the United States is supposedly supporting.

I, as an Asiatic, can see the dangers in the resurgence of nationalism not only in Asia but in other parts of the world. Does Mr. Villamin understand the slogan, "Asia for the Asiatics," invented by the Japanese during the last war? Until America supports progressive movements everywhere, I am certain that United States policies in Asia and elsewhere are doomed to failure like the China debacle we have just witnessed.

Brannan Plan for Coal

I have just read your very interesting April 10 editorial, "Layoff Again," about coal miners losing their jobs because of the rapidly diminishing demand for coal.

I think I have a perfect solution for that situation. Why not have a law passed by Congress to fix a "reasonable" price for coal and whenever the demand for coal falls off to such an extent that the price to be obtained in the market for coal falls below that fixed "reasonable" price, the Bureau of Mines would be instructed to take the surplus coal off the market at that fixed price—say 85 percent or 90 percent of parity?

This surplus stock of coal thus acquired by the Government would not deteriorate too rapidly; but if it finally became evident that it would be a dead loss, it could be used to fill in swamps or for fill material for raising roadbeds, like around Bladensburg, for instance.

Disowning McCarthy

Recently the statement was made that we in Wisconsin are all behind Senator McCarthy.

I thought you would be interested in an editorial from the Milwaukee Journal (which sums up extensive unfavorable press comment). There are many people here, Republicans, too, who would like to disown Mr. McCarthy. LOIS S. BJELL.
Janesville, Wis.

Institute of Pacific Relations

Senator McCarthy has mentioned the Institute of Pacific Relations several times in his attacks on Ambassador Jessup and Prof. Owen Lattimore, always inaccurately and with false implications. Your readers may be more inclined to accept the opinion of the Rockefeller Foundation that the institute is "the most important single source of independent studies of the problems of the Pacific area and the Far East." The Navy is a good judge of loyalty and competence. It has awarded the American IPR its certificate of achievement.

The Senator's charges implicating the American IPR clearly derive from those initiated years ago by Mr. Alfred Kohlberg. Among the trustees of the institute who rejected such charges on March 17, 1947, following a careful examination of the record, were Arthur H. Dean of Sullivan & Cromwell, New York; Walter F. Dillingham of Honolulu, Dr. Brooks Emeny, president of the Foreign Policy Association; Huntington Gilchrist of the American Cyanamid Co., and Dr. Philip C. Jessup of Columbia University, not then a trustee. The members of the American IPR voted overwhelmingly in support of the conclusions of these trustees, most of whom are still on the board, which at present includes President Robert G. Sproul of the University of California (vice chairman), Dr. Richard E. Fuller, director of the Seattle Art Museum (vice chairman); President Arthur G. Coons of Occidental College, Los Angeles; Prof. John K. Fairbank of Harvard University, Martha A. Gerbode of San Francisco, John R. Hersey, W. W. Lockwood of Princeton University, Prof. Owen Lattimore of Johns Hopkins University, Gen. George C. Marshall, Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, and the undersigned. All are fully informed regarding both the past and present activities of the institute.

Charges from any source that the IPR is or has been a Communist-front organization do not deserve serious consideration. Steps were taken several years ago to remove any reasonable cause for such an impression. As Ambassador Jessup has pointed out, Senator McCarthy's charge that the institute's magazine Far Eastern Survey was controlled in 1942-43 through contributions from one source, while he was a trustee, is utterly false. Two of the largest banks in the United States recently doubled their contributions to the institute in recognition both of its integrity and of the value of its work in the public interest at a particularly critical period in American relations with Asia.

The trustees and members of the American IPR, which is one of 12 national councils in the Institute of Pacific Relations, are identified with it because they realize that free inquiry and the publication and discussion of its products are essential in dealing with the complex and often controversial problems of Asia and of American relations with Asia. They demand authority, competence and objectivity in the institute's publications, but they welcome a diversity of views in the belief that Americans wish to form their own conclusions. The institute does not editorialize or take any position on foreign policy. It tries to keep a fair balance of views in its publications and is often congratulated on doing so.

Inaccurate and irresponsible charges made by a Senator make headlines and stock in the minds of the public, while reasoned replies go largely unnoticed and unheeded. All who have had anything to do with the support of a nonprofit organization known how easily the flow of funds can be retarded. Senator McCarthy's accusations against the IPR are false, but they have already done it serious damage.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Services Taking Mud Out of War

By Drew Pearson

IT HAS been beyond the wildest dreams of the mud-slogging infantry that mud could ever be eliminated from war. Army scientists now believe they have done it. The same goes for soggy sand which used to bog down the Marines storming beachheads.

The Army has developed a wonderful chemical that turns mud into solid ground. It has been tested at Fort Belvoir, Va., where clammy Virginia clay was made as hard as cement. Even after 48 hours of soaking, it withstood 35-ton weights without cracking or buckling. A batch of mud treated with the chemical last summer is still as solid as a paving block.

This means that muddy battlefields can now be transformed into stable ground for mobilized armies or even into landing strips for airplanes. The Marines can also make sandy beaches hard as rock for landing heavy vehicles.

Actually, both the Army and the Navy have been working separately on the mud-hardening process. The Army has been specializing in soils at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the Navy has been concentrating on sand at Princeton. Both experiments have been successful, though totally different chemicals are used.

The Army has found that a calcium acrylate mixture will harden earth, though different chemicals may be more effective on different soils. Because of the limited supply of calcium acrylate, its present cost is $7 a pound. The basic ingredients are cheap enough, however, and Army scientists believe they can bring the price down to a few cents a pound by mass production.

The Navy uses furfural resin and aniline to solidify sand at a cost of only 16 cents a pound.

Truman Talks Turkey

IN A telephone chat with congressional chiefs, President Truman did some blunt sermonizing on (1) the timid treatment of bombastic Senator Joe McCarthy by Senate leaders and (2) the dismal record of both houses in enacting the Fair Deal program.

Truman said McCarthy's charges should have been met head-on on the Senate floor.

Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas of Illinois replied that there was no reason to dignify McCarthy's unfounded rantings with an answer, since the Wisconsin Republican was hanging himself, but this soft strategy didn't satisfy Truman at all.

He told Lucas that the best way to handle McCarthy was to get in the ring and slug it out.

Truman was equally blunt about congressional inaction on Fair Deal legislation, informing the leaders that they would be in no position to talk about the Republican "do nothing" Eightieth Congress unless the Democrats started showing results in the Eighty-first.

Truman urged Speaker Sam Rayburn to build a fire under the House Ways and Means Committee for dragging its feet on new tax legislation. Congressional stalling on taxes, he said, was hurting both business and employment.

There has been a lag in both manufacturing and buying, the President reported, because business firms are waiting to see what Congress will do about taxes.

New Air Secretary

NEWLY apponted Secretary of Air Tom Finletter is one of the ablest public servants to work in Washington in recent years. A modest, soul-searching individual, he has been trying to stay away from Washington, but he has been drafted back repeatedly.

During the war Finletter did an A-1 job as special assistant to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, climaxing it by master-minding the public relations of the United States delegation to the San Francisco Conference.

After San Francisco, Finletter quit Government, returned to his New York law firm, only to be redrafted to head up the President's commission on air power. Although Finletter recommended a 70-group Air Force at that time, he has now privately committed himself to President Truman's 48 groups.

When Finletter finished the air survey he again returned to New York, but had hardly resettled when he was yanked away from his firm to go to England, where he organized Marshall Plan aid to the United Kingdom. Finletter agreed to stay six months; was drafted for a total of 18 months.

Finletter has a delightful wife, the daughter of famed Conductor Walter Damrosch. And when he returned from England, he promised her he would stay home and tend to his knitting. Now he is back in Washington again as Secretary of the Air Force.

The Magazine Rack

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.

AN ARTICLE 11 years old is reprinted in Collier's, but it is as timely as the topic of the H-bomb.

Should mercy killings be legalized? This question has been stirred anew in recent months by the case of a doctor accused (and acquitted) of ending a cancer patient's suffering by injecting a lethal dose of air into her veins. There have been several other such cases headlined recently.

There seems to be no better answer today than there was in 1939 when Collier's first published the article by Dr. Foster Kennedy, noted professor of neurology at Cornell University Medical College. Nor have Dr. Kennedy's views changed since 1939.

His sympathies go to the children who are "unfit from birth" and "nature's mistakes." They are, he writes, "incapable of the joy of work or the joy of play," unable to even reach the "calm placidity of the vegetable world."

No diagnostic error would be possible among the thousands of congenitally unfit, says Dr. Kennedy.

"I am opposed," writes Dr. Kennedy, "to the legalization of euthanasia for those persons who, having been well, are now ill. I believe it would be for the general good that euthanasia be legalized for creatures born defective whose present condition is miserable and whose future, in the opinion of a properly constituted board acting under State authority, is hopeless."

Collier's concludes its expose on gambling conditions in Illinois with a few items that should interest the Internal Revenue Bureau. It reports the case of one county official who boasted he had cleaned up $250,000 in his four years in office.

The Minds of Men

TIME traces the intellectual growth of three men—Prof. Owen Lattimore of the United States, Britain's Secretary for War John Strachey and France's Atomic Energy Chief Frederic Joliot-Curie.

It is an attempt to show how they reached their present political state of mind. All of them, Time declares, were probably affected to some degree by the post-World War I fallacy that communism and progress were synonymous.

Time says Lattimore's ideas on what our policy should have been in Asia did not constitute a crime or disloyalty, but adds sorrowfully:

"It was nevertheless a tragedy that United States complacence about Asia allowed the ideas of Lattimore & Co. to have as much effect as they did."

No, Time concludes, Lattimore, Strachey and Joliot-Curie were not spies. And their ideas were not the same, but—

"Anyone with a lively sense of danger in the free world could legitimately hold the opinion that the ideas of these three might be more dangerous than a carload of spies."

Through the eyes of Quentin Reynolds, you see General Ike not as a military man but as Mr. President Eisenhower, head of Columbia University.

It seems typical of Eisenhower that when he first started in his new office he confessed nervously to Harry J. Carman, dean of Columbia College, that he wasn't certain how he should address the heads of Columbia's 16 different schools. Carman suggested he call them "dean" or "director" until he got to know them, and then call them by their first names.

"Good," said Eisenhower. "And I'll start with you. From now on you're Harry and I'm Ike."

Variable Policy Urged for Asia

military goods, which would automatically bar them from China.

In any event, trade with the Communist mainland has shrunk to a mere trickle, and the future of Chinese-American trade is an academic question as long as the Nationalist blockade goes on.

Chiang Has a Hand

THE tragi-comic situation in Shanghai at the moment shows clearly what happens when a country tries to ride off on two horses at once. To Shanghai have come about 350 American diplomats and businessmen from all parts of China. They have been ordered home because the Communists, in plain disregard of international law and custom, and perhaps with Moscow prompting, seized American consular property in Peking and other Chinese cities.

The Shanghai contingent has been waiting for six weeks, but the plans to bring them home by sea have been abandoned. The trouble was not only that the Communist authorities put every conceivable obstacle in the way of an evacuation by sea. The trouble was also that the Nationalists under Chiang Kai-shek, still recognized, financed and supported by the United States, have mined the only deep-water channel leading to the Shanghai docks.

When the American officials do come out—if they ever do—it will be the first time in more than 100 years that the United States has had no diplomatic representation in China. The Communists have booted us out just as emphatically as Chiang Kai-shek ejected the Russians, in reversed circumstances, 23 years ago.

All that keeps American influence alive in China today is, firstly, the presence of American missionaries and traders brave enough to stay without official protection; and, secondly, the memory of an American friendship that protested every prewar foreign grab of Chinese territory, even to the lengths of going to war in 1941 rather than abandon China to the Japanese.

Vocal 'Influence'

IN THESE unhappy circumstances, American policy-makers are thrown back upon indirect methods of influence. "Voice of America" broadcasts are bringing China the story of Soviet penetration into Sinkiang and other border provinces; Chinese-speaking diplomats have been moved to new posts neighboring China so they can work on Chinese communities there.

But this is no policy, and no substitute for a policy. For an answer to the question, "What do we do now about China?," one must look elsewhere, especially to Japan.

Officials here have a deepening conviction that Japan must be set free of economic restraints as quickly as possible, both as the most efficient workshop of Asia and as the most promising center of resistance to Soviet power.

One of John Foster Dulles' first assignments in the State Department will be to examine the prospects of a Japanese peace treaty or, if that is impossible, an agreement by all the non-Soviet countries that fought Japan.

One unresolved question is whether to seek permanent American bases in Japan—an idea that already arouses hostility among Japanese politicians and people. Another concerns the extent to which Japan shall be encouraged to export and earn her own living; the British are already alarmed at the prospect of Japanese competition in textiles and other fields.

This much is sure: the United States is impressed with the strength of democratic institutions in Japan, and sees the former island empire as one of the few bright spots in the entire murky picture of Asia. If Japan's factories can help in the economic recovery of the rest of Asia, so much the better.

Non-Communist Arc

LOOKING beyond Japan, officials here have been doing a great deal of thinking about the vast rim of China, the 10,000-mile arc of non-Communist countries that extends all the way from south Korea and the Philippines to Indonesia, southeast Asia and the subcontinent of India.

Ambassador Philip C. Jessup said last week that all these were weak countries, all of them except Siam inexperienced in self-government. And he pictured the situation as especially dangerous in every country that has a common frontier with China, and wherever there is a big Chinese minority subject to Communist propaganda and blackmail.

Jessup and his colleagues have discovered that Asia is too vast and too diverse to be fitted within a single American policy. The only common denominator for Asia is a set of principles within which the United States can take different kinds of action in different areas.

The first of these is that the United States must identify itself with the Asian peoples' struggle for self-government. As Jessup put it in his radio speech on Thursday, the United States "believes every people has the right to be independent, to govern itself and to work out its own problems in its own way."

Trouble With Allies

THIS principle has already involved the United States in difficulty with the French, who have not yet given full independence to the states of Indo-China; it will cause trouble, too, with the British, who rule Malaya as a crown colony.

But the British in India, the Dutch in Indonesia and the French to some extent in Indo-China have already shown that they accept the principle of fostering Asian independence. As the United States sees it, communism and national independence do not mix; they are deadly enemies.

Accordingly, the United States is putting constant pressure on the French to give real independence to their former Indo-China colonies, where a full-fledged war is being fought against the Communists. And the United States will do whatever it can to strengthen the prestige of the newly-independent governments all the way from Pakistan to the Philippines.

The second broad principle guiding American policy for Asia is, as Jessup put it, that "free peoples who are determined to maintain their independence are entitled to military aid which will help them to remain free."

Anti-Guerilla Arms

ON this basis, the United States is planning a second annual installment of military equipment for the Philippines and Korea; it has earmarked 10 million dollars' worth for Siam and 15 million for Viet Nam, in Indo-China, and probably will provide still more for Indonesia.

This does not mean shipments of planes and tanks; it involves small arms to strengthen internal constabularies, and light equipment like radio walkie-talkies and river craft for fighting against guerillas.

The third main principle is that the only sure safeguard against communism in the long run is less poverty, illiteracy and disease in Asia. On this basis the United States has already made a 100-million-dollar loan to Indonesia, the World Bank has made loans aggregating more than 70 million dollars to India, the British Commonwealth countries have loaned seven million pounds sterling to Burma, and the United States, with the help of other nations, intends to supply technical help to show the countries of Asia how to help themselves.

Pieces of Pattern

THESE are bits and pieces in a pattern of action which will not, admittedly, save Asia from communism. The United States intends to do something on its own. It will step up its information and propaganda drive, especially among the Chinese communities outside China. It will pay more attention to the Chinese and other Asian students in this country, who may some day go home and become America's best friends. It will do everything it can, in the United Nations and elsewhere, to enhance the self-respect of the newly-independent nations of Asia.

The important thing, in American eyes, is to make sure that the people of Asia have the will to meet their own problems. If they have it and if we have the requisite imagination and courage, then there is plenty we can do to help them.

Dixiecrat Party in the Balance

By Stewart Alsop

A DEMOCRATIC primary in the Deep South rarely deserves national attention. But a forthcoming primary in Alabama may well have a decisive effect on the whole national political balance of power.

This primary, which is to be held May 2, will decide whether the whole Dixiecrat movement is likely to collapse, or whether it may become an extremely important national political factor in 1952.

Aside from Louisiana's huge, shrewd Leander Perez, and Mississippi's bumbling Gov. Fielding Wright, the real sparkplugs of the Dixiecrat movement are to be found in Alabama. The Dixiecrat braintrusters include Alabama's wily Gessner McCorvey, former Gov. Frank Dixon and the corporation lawyers Horace Wilkinson and Marion Rushton.

These men now largely control Alabama's Democratic Party, which in the last election they transformed into a Dixiecrat Party. Their control is now being directly challenged by Alabama's able Senators, Lister Hill and John Sparkman, and by most of the Alabama Representatives. This fight will come to a head May 2, when the Alabama voters will choose between a Dixiecrat and a Hill-Sparkman slate for the State Democratic Committee.

If the Dixiecrat slate wins, the Dixiecrat movement will be strengthened decisively throughout the South. And this in turn will permit the Dixiecrat leaders to attempt to put in motion a shrewd political strategy, designed to influence the choice of the Republican presidential candidate in 1952.

The strategy is largely the brainchild of McCorvey, who has been busily promoting it throughout the South. But it has been approved in principle by all the Dixiecrat leaders, and it has the tacit approval of the big oil and corporate interests which supply the Dixiecrats with their financial lifeblood.

The first step would be to call Dixiecrat conventions in every Southern State early in 1952—a step which was omitted in 1948. These State conventions would name delegates to a formal National States Rights Convention, to write a party platform and nominate presidential candidates. This convention would be carefully scheduled to take place after the Republican convention. And the fact would be widely advertised in advance that the Dixiecrat convention would be prepared to nominate the Republican candidate on the Dixiecrat ticket—provided the candidate and the platform were acceptable.

The intention is of course obvious—to influence the Republican choice by holding out the rich and tempting prize of the electoral votes of four or more Southern States. Some experienced Southern observers claim that the strategy is unrealistic, if only because the South would never be hoodwinked into voting for a Republican by so transparent a strategem. Yet other observers believe that this strategy might stand a real chance of paying off.

A Logical Coalition

AFTER all, it is pointed out, Republican Chairman Guy Gabrielson has already said publicly that he has been keeping in touch with the Dixiecrat leaders, to see whether some understanding might not be possible. Gabrielson's indiscreet remark was quickly disavowed by all and sundry. But the fact remains that by 1952 the Republicans will have been out of power for 20 years—and the civil rights issue is the only serious impediment to an understanding with the conservative Southern Democrats, which could bring the Republicans back into power. Obviously the step from a Congressional coalition to a coalition behind a single presidential candidate is a short step and by no means illogical.

This Dixiecrat strategy explains why the Dixiecrats have been beating the drum so enthusiastically for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Although he has publicly (and perhaps wisely) opposed compulsory civil rights legislation, Senator Robert Taft is considered so indelibly Republican that Southerners could hardly be bamboozled into voting for him. But Eisenhower is not even a registered Republican, and although there is nothing in his record to indicate any enthusiasm for Dixiecrat ideas, the Dixiecrats have been eager to bestow on him what might well be a kiss of death.

Obviously, if the Alabama Dixiecrats are administered a severe defeat by the Hill-Sparkman forces, this strategy will receive a setback from which no recovery will be likely. The Hill-Sparkman camp has been helped by the Administration decision to delay Senate debate on the civil rights issue—a fact which is doubtless not a coincidence.

Even so, the Alabama Dixiecrats are putting on a tough, shrewd campaign, and the outcome is still very much in doubt. And it is not inconceivable that the outcome of this apparently obscure Alabama contest could have a far-reaching effect on the whole national political future.

Our Political Economy

Aggravating the Building Cycle

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

WITH winter construction running well ahead of last year's, 1950 may set a new post-war record for home building. Will it also mark the turning point in the postwar housing boom?

We know that the construction industry is typically one of high peaks and low troughs, and that the present level of construction is not likely to last.

There are many reasons for the mercurial nature of the industry. Houses, once built, last a long time, so that even in a boom like the present one, new houses add only about 3 percent a year to the total supply. Small changes in total housing demand bring exaggerated fluctuations in the market for new homes.

Suppose, for example, that a city of 50,000 families normally needs 1000 houses a year to replace old ones. If 2000 new families were to move in, there could be a 200 percent increase in the demand for new houses.

We have seen this kind of leverage at work in the present postwar housing boom. Building was sharply curtailed during the war, but several million new families were formed. After the war, high incomes and low mortgage rates provided the effective demand for new homes.

The result was a tremendous pressure of an industry where production does not respond rapidly to demand. The same phenomenon occurred after the Civil War, with residential building reaching a peak in 1871, and after the First World War, when 1925 marked the high point. Many economists believe that wars are the major cause of building cycles.

Though reliable data goes back only to the Civil War, certain features have been repeated in every cycle of the last century. Most interesting, perhaps, is the fact that the downturn in building regularly comes before, not after, a downturn in general business conditions. Between 1925 and 1929, for example, nonfarm housing starts declined from 937,000 units to 509,000, a drop of 46 percent.

The exact mechanism of the cycle is not clearly understood.

Slow to Recover

IT TAKES almost a decade from the peak to the trough of a construction cycle. Once down, building recovers very slowly because there is a large supply of old houses on the market at prices much lower than the cost of building new ones. Until these can be absorbed, construction lags.

The price of houses fluctuates widely over the building cycle. Building costs, however, are more stable, and the long-term trend is upward. Though building costs declined in the recession of 1921-22, they never reached prewar levels, and when the present boom is over, though housing costs will undoubtedly decline, they are unlikely to go back to their 1939 levels. They are now over twice the prewar figure.

It is therefore true that the homeowner who can hold onto his house through depression may live to see it worth more than it cost new. Unfortunately, however, there are many who cannot keep up the payments as their earnings decline. During the 1930s, 1,860,000 homes were foreclosed, and millions of owners retained their houses only through heroic sacrifices.

IT HAS long been recognized that the violent swings of the building cycle are bad for the economy. In 1929 there were nearly a million and a half persons employed in contract construction. By 1933, the number had dropped by almost half.

During the depression, the Government sought to iron out the fluctuations by such financial aids as the Home Owners Loan Corporation, which refinanced many mortgages at lower rates of interest, and the Federal Housing Administration, which provided low-cost, Federally insured loans. These programs did help to stimulate construction and bring the industry back from its 1933 low.

Unfortunately for the Government's record, however, it has pursued the same cheap money policy in a time of extreme inflation with 4 percent GI mortgages, often for 100 percent of the price of the house, and special 90 percent FHA insured loans for rental construction.

There is no doubt that the political pressure for these policies was almost overwhelming. Nevertheless, the Government must bear serious responsibility for aggravating the building cycle. It has used up the whole arsenal of cheap money devices in the boom years. When the downturn comes it will be caught with no ammunition except outright housing subsidies.

The record is a sorry one, and it constitutes a devastating reply to those who believe that Government planning is the answer to the chaos of competitive private interests. So long as political interests remain what they are, planning is almost as likely to kill the patient as to cure him.

Interior Puts in Its Oar Again

By Harry N. Stull

THE attempt by a Federal agency to force its will on District residents in matters purely municipal is again displayed in the matter of swimming pools. After a bitter controversy over the location of the new bridge over the Anacostia River, the Interior Department now arbitarily insists upon the operation of these pools according to its dictum.

STULL

The pools are worthless if they cannot serve the people of the District, but suggestions by the Recreation Board looking to their maximum use have been rejected by the Interior Secretary. Harry S. Wender, chairman of the Recreation Board (despite abuse heaped upon him from certain sources), has been conscientiously attempting to solve this problem.

The Recreation Board members can be relied upon to carry out the wishes of the people of the District. In no sense can the Interior Department (where political issues cannot be expected to be ignored) determine public sentiment in the District.

This controversy brings out again the division of authority in this city and the need for legislation defining that authority. It is another reason why more people should read the Kefauver bill.

The Streetcar Pass

THE hearings before the Public Utilities Commission on the Capital Transit request for higher fares has demonstrated a unanimity of opinion among citizens in favor of retention of the weekly pass. The company's argument that the passes should be abolished because of certain abuses is not convincing.

If a way can be found to restrict their use to members of an immediate family, or to use by Government employes solely on Government business, the matter will be solved. However, no one has offered a reasonable suggestion to that end, and it is doubtful if one can be found. It would be unfortunate if they were to be eliminated because of their abuse by a few persons. Such a decision resulting in a compulsory cash fare would undoubtedly result in a great reduction in passengers—a result that could not benefit the company.

Perhaps when the hearings are resumed some company official (or one of the Florida gentlemen who have taken control of the company) will come forward with some plan that will permit retention of the weekly pass, which was first suggested by the company itself.

An amusing sidelight at the hearings was the angry statement of a company official that the poor financial condition of the company is due in large measure to the extensive use of private automobiles. Whether this is true or not, we can say, without fear of successful contradiction, that the automobile is here to stay.

The Tax-Laden Motorist

FOLLOWING the lead of the Federation of Citizens Association, many of the local bodies have petitioned Congress for abolishment of the war excise taxes. These include the taxes on luggage, jewelry, women's toilet articles, transportation and admissions. Some relief in this direction is indicated by statements made by congressional leaders.

In all this talk of reducing or eliminating excise taxes, the forgotten man is the automobile owner. No relief appears to be in sight for him. He pays taxes both to the municipality and the Federal Government.

To raise revenue at a time when a balanced budget was regarded as a desirable thing, Congress in 1932 imposed excise taxes on the sale of cars, parts, tires, tubes, accessories, lubricating oil and gasoline. These numerous taxes have become a burden on the automobile owner.

The time has long since passed when autos were owned only by the wealthy. A car has become a necessity to many wage earners, and consideration should be given to the relief of these persons as well as to the users of the commodities mentioned.

The District tax on automobiles, registration, tags, titling and inspection is higher than the average among the States. It is high time that the lawmakers stopped slapping another tax on automobile owners whenever additional revenue is needed.

IN THE death of William S. Torbert, civic Washington has lost a conscientious and energetic civic worker who contributed much to the welfare of the District. Mr. Torbert assisted in the organization of the Federation of Citizens Associations and for many years represented the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association as a delegate to the federation. As an author of legal work, his death will also be a great loss to the judiciary and bar of the District.

Howard Shines as School 'Fill-in'

By Benjamin Muse

IT LOOKS now as if Dowell J. Howard, who has been acting Superintendent of Public Instruction since last September, will remain at the head of the State Department of Education. Governor Battle has looked around for some time for another man for this crucial job, but, while the Governor has looked for somebody else, the prestige of the temporary incumbent has steadily increased.

MUSE

Howard, an unspectacularly hard-working official, is Battle's type, and he made a good impression upon all at the recent session of the General Assembly. He has shown no enthusiasm for the appointment as superintendent of Public Instruction—partly from innate modesty and partly, no doubt, because tenure in his regular No. 2 position is more secure. It is predicted now, however, that the Governor will shortly name Howard for the big job.

In any case, there should be no further delay in giving the Department of Education a full-rank chief. The present condition of uncertainty is preventing the inauguration of forthright policies in the supremely important field of public education. Apart from the Governor's school building program, the department is having to limit its activities more or less to routine.

'Departmental' Committee

AMONG other plans which have remained long in the blueprint stage is a far-reaching program of secondary education. The need for a re-examination of policy in this field was brought to a head by the squabbles over high school consolidation which raged during most of 1948.

The State Board of Education had decreed that no high school with less than 250 pupils would be accredited after 1952, and patrons of small high schools in a dozen counties—including Prince William, Page and Rockingham—protested loud and long. Last April the Board of Education rescinded its 250-by-1952 fiat and ordered a new study of accreditation in all its aspects.

The Department of Education announced that the new study would be made by a committee of educators, legislators and laymen, but in practice it has been almost entirely a Department of Education undertaking. Little work can be expected of unpaid outsiders on this kind of job.

In fact, 11 members of the committee of 20 which was set up (and which is still functioning) are either Department of Education officials or superintendents and principals subordinate to them, and four are from higher institutions of learning. Two are members of the General Assembly; two (Mrs. Floy McInteer of Prince William County, and Mrs. Henry W. Decker of Richmond) are school board members; and one, Lewis Knowles of the Staunton Evening Leader, is a plain newspaper editor. The committee has held four meetings in the course of a year.

Emphasis on Curriculum

THE STUDY was designed to embrace the whole problem of secondary education in Virginia. In fact, the most conspicuous feature of the committee's report as it has developed thus far is the omission of any reference to enrollment figures. At this stage, at least, the plan of the committee—and, shall we say, of the Department of Education—is to base accreditation on instructional offering regardless of the size of the school.

Responding to the recent agitation on this score, the tentative plan makes "local, Virginia and American history" and "local, Virginia and American government" compulsory studies. The only other required subjects are English, mathematics and science. Foreign languages are included in a list of 55 elective units.

The 31-page report is now slumbering in the office of Director of Secondary Education Thomas T. Hamilton. It has yet to be submitted to all superintendents and principals, to receive final approval from the committee, and, of course, to be accepted by the State Board of Education. Like most Department of Education projects, it is still "tentative."

The department still quietly frowns upon small high schools, but an old ruling fixing the minimum enrollment for an accredited high school at 75 is all that is now in effect.

Squabbling GOP Booting Chances

By James P. Connolly

OUTSIDERS often wonder, as outsiders will, why there is so much family fighting among Maryland Republicans, the State's minority party. The answer might be because it is the minority party; it quarrels because its causes and chances are scarce.

CONNOLLY

The party is outnumbered almost 2½ to 1. In the last general registration in 1948, the division was roughly 593,000 Democrats and 248,000 Republicans. Obviously, with the registration so strongly against it, the GOP always needs Democratic help to win.

Of the 20 gubernational elections held since 1871 under the present constitution, the Republicans have won only three, the Democrats 17, and the Republican majorities were rather slim, ranging from 3000 to 18,000.

The successful Republican candidates were Lloyd Lowndes, in 1895; Phillips Lee Goldsborough, in 1911, and Harry W. Nice, in 1934. None was reelected, but two Democrats have been. Former Governor O'Conor was reelected and the late Governor Ritchie was elected four times consecutively.

From the record, it is plain that real Republican opportunities are few and far between. Yet it is just when opportunity knocks that domestic rowing in the GOP reaches a peak. Right now, with the party leadership anticipating the best chance in years, feuding is at fever pitch.

Lots of Candidates

THE PAUL ROBERTSON and other factions are warring with the dominant France organization and the party has an embarrassing oversupply of gubernatorial timber, all party oaks, no splinter wood. A party wing that surveyed the field named no less than 15 potential candidates for the nomination. Fifteen is almost enough to nominate. Even in a horse race, the field is limited to 12.

Robertson, a claimant to the Republican City Committee chairmanship held by Deeley Nice, is suing in court to unseat Charles A. Dorsey, the minority member on the Baltimore Board of Election Supervisors.

Mrs. Calvin Gabriel, vice chairman of the City Committee, has compared Jacob France, National Committeeman, to Hitler and Stalin (the resemblance is slight), and Helen Brown, Baltimore attorney, has demanded that Stanford Hoff, chairman of the State Central Committee, bring some order out of the confusion of candidates or she will be compelled to add to it by running.

The whole situation is the reverse of what was expected. The Republicans hope to capitalize on Democratic wrangling and resentment. Democratic defection is their best chance for a Republican year. But the regular Democratic organization is standing firm so far and the Republican line is wavering.

Hope Springs Into Action

THE wonder is why. Deserting Democrats (deserving to them) might vote Republican, but they'd be more likely to switch if the Republicans offered more prospect of winning. Everyone likes to pick a winner, but a split party makes a poor psychological appeal.

Knowing all this, why don't the Republicans patch up their household differences and pull the party together? The answer could lie in the long stretches when the Republicans live on hope. When opportunity finally knocks, there is a general rush for the door. Every faction and figure wants to get there first. In such scrambles, the result is apt to be that nobody gets there.

The Democrats, being more often in the saddle, approach their primaries with more politically experienced strategists, and the more politically seasoned seem more practical at keeping peace in the house.

The difference is really regrettable, even to many Democrats, because a more even balance would make for better working of the two-party system. If nothing more, it would make the State's overwhelmingly one-sided politics more interesting to the innocent bystander.

Elimination Conference

TO GIVE him his due, Jacob France has been doing his best or his worst, depending on the point of view, to restore order in the ranks and thin out the party's surplus of prospective candidates. During the last week he tried out a new wrinkle in peacemaking, an elimination conference. The plan might not have been original with him—there were signs it had been suggested—but at least he gave it a try.

At his invitation, four of the more prominent contenders—Senator Roy Tasco Davis, D. John Markey, Royden A. Blunt and Mr. Mudd—sat down around a table in a Baltimore hotel room (smoke-filled, naturally), and there the host, Mr. France, left them.

The idea was that three were to talk themselves out of the race in favor of concentrating support on the fourth, but it didn't work, not at once, anyway. The four reported that they had "a fair, frank and friendly talk" that is running into extra innings. (They plan to meet again in a month and talk some more.)

Convincing Case Made Against 'Lost Peace'

By Marshall Andrews

GREAT MISTAKES OF THE WAR. By Hanson W. Baldwin. Harper. $1.50

IN THIS slim volume, the military editor of the New York Times endeavors to show how the Western Allies lost the peace in winning the war. He does so convincingly enough to leave with the reader a sense of angry frustration, and of regret that the case he makes could not have been presented, not so belatedly, but during the war, when something might have been done about it.

It is here, indeed, that this sense of frustration and regret finds itself turned not a little toward Hanson Baldwin and his book.

Baldwin identifies his product as that of "hindsight" and his judgments as "something like those of a Monday morning global quarterback." It is the more to be regretted that, with his prestige and his really numerous following, he could not have made these truths clear before this Nation and its Allies were committed to a course which seems irrevocably headed away from, rather than toward, the peace so greatly desired.

If the truths now so clear to Baldwin were obscure to him in the war years, it is even more to be regretted; for there were many then to whom they were not obscure, but they could not make themselves heard or their influence felt.

A Barren Victory

THE burden of Baldwin's exposition is impeccable: that the United States based its military operations upon military expediency without regard for political considerations, with the inevitable result that the military victory was barren of political achievement. The outcome was substitution of one totalitarianism for another and the threat of one political and economic domination for that of a worse.

Inability to estimate the true Russian character and to recognize its aims, says the author, led the leaders of America to snap up the military commitments with which the Russian trap was baited. The result, Baldwin points out, was a series of concessions designed to buy Russian intervention in the war against Japan.

And, he continues, Soviet intervention in Japan was not only unnecessary but actually detrimental to postwar adjustment, and was in fact essential to Russian policy. Thus, after Japan already had been irrevocably defeated by United States sea power, Baldwin says, Moscow was exorbitantly paid to take precisely the step she probably would have made concessions to gain.

The Effective Way

THE author makes the point that use of the atomic bomb on two Japanese cities was not only militarily unnecessary but morally wrong and achieved no gainful purpose. No doubt that contention is valid, so far as it goes, and it has some powerful support.

But it overlooks the fact that no mere demonstration, however conducted, could have been so effective as actual military employment of the bomb in countering Russian propaganda that the Red Army forced the Japanese surrender, and possibly in maintaining the uneasy peace for the past five years.

It is a further matter of regret that Baldwin, who certainly should know better, has given currency to the fiction that the document, "Air Campaigns of the Pacific War," is a product of the impartial Strategic Bombing Survey. He could have ascertained easily enough that it is not, and had he identified it as propaganda in citing it, he would have strengthened materially the remainder of his citations.

Terrifying Book Carries Reader Through Life of Soviet Citizen

By J. R. Wiggins

IF YOU WERE BORN IN RUSSIA. By Arthur Goodfriend. Farrar, Straus. 191 pp. $5.

THIS is one of the most alarming books ever written about Soviet Russia.

Arthur Goodfriend takes the reader through the life of a Soviet citizen, from cradle to grave. The journey reveals the endless flood of indoctrination that engulfs the individual in this Communist society from early youth to old age.

GOODFRIEND

It is a frightening trip for those who still dare hope that somehow the East and West may avoid a conflict that appears sometimes inevitable. It is a discouraging experience for those who still search for a meeting of minds. For this book discloses, with painful clarity, how different are the minds that come to the council table when spokesmen for the Soviet world and the free world foregather at international conferences.

This book is no anti-Communist tract, mind you. The author obviously has done his level best to present objectively a summary of the lifelong process of party indoctrination to which Russian citizens are subjected. Only those who are intimately acquainted with the process can judge how well he has succeeded.

He confesses the handicap of his own point of view. But he has exerted himself to escape it. He has tried so hard to do so that some readers may be misled into regarding this book as a sympathetic study of Soviet Russia. He does not intrude into the narrative to point out the falsehoods in the stream of Soviet propaganda, to warn against the lies about the West, to deplore the distortions of fact. He just describes the flood tide of propaganda as it exists.

Perceptive readers will find this book, in a far different way, as terrifying as George Orwell's "1984." They will put it down in a kind of despair. Can the free world hope that the victim of such a tyranny can retain anywhere in the mind an isolated island of objectivity where truth could find lodgment?

Obviously, Mr. Goodfriend did not intend to inspire such despair. It is his business, and the business of the firm with which he is associated, to help the free nations of the world utilize modern communications to disseminate their story.

The real lesson of this book is that we must proceed with our own "indoctrination" more vigorously and energetically than ever before, if we are to have any real hope of success. This book is an "intelligence estimate" of the enemy's weapons in this field. It should frighten us into action.

writes her first novel since "Forever Amber"

Every woman has a story. Not one in a million had a story like Shireen Delaney's. Her beauty had won her the adoration of men. Her talent had won her outstanding success, a luxurious apartment, a life filled with excitement—everything but the one thing she wanted.

Lovely, ruthless and misled, Shireen is modern woman in search of herself. Kathleen Winsor portrays her with outspoken honesty. All women—and the men who need to understand them—will want to read her story, brilliantly and magnificently told.

A Stimulating Biography

Logical Development of Mencken

THE IRREVERENT MR. MENCKEN. By Edgar Kemler. Little, Brown. 317 pp. Ill. $3.50.

IT IS doubtful whether a capable writer, if he tried, could write a dull book about the delightfully irascible Henry Louis Mencken, and Edgar Kemler, needless to say, has not tried.

The biography of the sage of Baltimore, who will observe his seventieth birthday September 9, is not only stimulating but debatable.

In the din that has marked much of a long and vociferous life, it has sometimes been forgotten that this sprig of the Menckenii, which long ago produced scholars and iconoclasts, was not born a full grown picador thriving on boos and hisses.

His youthful development, in fact, was in outline much like that of many another literary figure: he declined to prepare for law or engineering, lacked any instinct for bookkeeping, wrote execrable imitations of Kipling's poetry and wanted to be a newspaperman.

In view of the later Mencken style, it is amusing to note that he took a correspondence course in writing and was advised to eschew pompous verbiage and to write simply and directly.

He soon gave up poetry writing, and in time abandoned short story writing, with him a form of pot boiling.

Brown Brothers Photo

H. L. Mencken and George Jean Nathan (left) in 1920, when they were co-editors of Smart Set

Steeped in Ink

HE DID become a newspaperman, and has been in and around Baltimore papers all his adult life. As a newspaperman, he grew up in the old tradition of more extravagant writing.

Early in his career he served for a time as drama reviewer, and around this same time learned a controversial technique from a New York editorial writer. The technique, in Kemler's words, "consisted of the treatment of contemporary worthies with an affected scholarly precision, referring to them always by their titles, real or imaginary, such as Honorable, Doctor or Professor, and crediting them with the virtues of some famous prototype: a Southern Baptist preacher became 'a village Bossuet' and an obscure newspaper critic became 'the Texas Paine.'"

Mencken was precocious. In 1904 he authored "George Bernard Shaw: His Plays," and in 1907, "The Philosophy of Friedrich Nietzsche." The former was the first full-length study of G. B. S., the latter the first book for the lay reader on the philosopher. Mencken was still in his twenties when the books were published.

About this same time, while Sunday editor of the Baltimore Sun, he became interested in the differences between British and American "English."

The Prince of Pilsener's interest in music and beer had already developed.

Thus, as Kemler's biography indicates, the Mencken of the last 40 years is pretty much the logical development of the Mencken of the first 30 years.

Kemler's book recalls the days when the American Mercury with its familiar green cover was read word for word from month to month, and describes Mencken's battles with provincials and the "Puritans."

Criticism Creeps In

THE biography is not quite as described on the jacket—"An Informal History of the Man and His Era," however; an interpretation of the man is there, but there is not much of the era.

Kemler wrote his book with the consent and magnanimous cooperation of Mencken, and had the advantage of the latter's reading the manuscript. It is not an "official" biography, though, and anything but adulatory.

The book concludes with a report of a visit by Mencken to Ezra Pound in St. Elizabeth's that is a gratuitous insult to Mencken and in shocking bad taste.

There are times when the reader feels that the biographer has skirted around an incident, presumably because the principals are still living or because the evidence is not all available. There are incidents that must have appeared quite differently to each of those involved and may yet cause controversy. There are other incidents that the reader would like more full developed.

The root of the feeling probably is that Mencken is such an interesting character that no book shorter than Boswell's "Johnson" will ever be wholly satisfying. Meanwhile Kremler's treatment of the many-sided H. L. Mencken will provide subject for talk in the land through which he romped so energetically, so long.

An Enriching Experience

Stimpson's U. S. History Another Pleasant 'Visit'

A BOOK ABOUT AMERICAN HISTORY. By George Stimpson. Harper. 436 pp. $3.50.

GEORGE STIMPSON has completed another of his unusual books. This one, "A Book About American History," is filled with the surprising and revealing sort of information for which its author has become famous.

Stimpson is one of the most unusual "collectors" in the world. He collects facts. He has made it his hobby, his passion and his profession. His latest effort is likely to rival in popularity his "Book About the Bible."

All facts interest Stimpson, as his miscellaneous question and answer book demonstrate. Facts about the Bible and about American history are, however, his favorites. He started collecting material for this book, and for the Bible book, 30 years ago.

As a very young man, he said to himself, "Some day I am going to write a book about the Bible" and "Some day I am going to write a book about American history." Many a young man has said the same thing about some projected research and literary effort. Some of them have even started gathering material. Most of them get no farther than a dismal collection of clippings and indecipherable notes.

That is where Stimpson is different. He follows through. His office has been transformed into one of the most valuable "morgues" in the country. And out of his assorted notes and clippings to which he has devoted a lifetime, there emerges periodically another book. There is no good reason why they should not continue to come forth from his reservoir of interesting material.

A book by Stimpson is like a conversation with Stimpson.

He has ranged over the whole field of human knowledge and stored away bits and pieces of information on the greatest imaginable variety of things. His information on American history, in particular, inspires wonder and amazement in any circle he favors with his presence. An evening with him is an enriching and enlightening experience.

His books permit a larger circle to enjoy that pleasure. They are just Stimpson himself put between covers. If you like to visit about American history with a congenial companion who is a bright, intelligent, reflective and leisurely observer of the whole American scene, you will like this book.—J. R. W.

Notes on the Margin

ADRIENNE KOCH, one of the country's leading Jefferson scholars, almost never got into the field at all.

When it was suggested that she look into Jefferson's writings for a possible subject for a doctoral dissertation, her reaction was, "Presidents are stuffy." But she looked, anyway, and found the man—whose writings another student has pored over so long that she calls him "Jeffie"—to be "exciting."

Dr. Koch still finds him so, as witness her fourth book, "Jefferson and Madison, the Great Collaboration," just published by Knopf.

Despite a rugged schedule—she lives with her husband, Lawrence R. Kegan of the Commerce Department, at 2120 16th st nw., and teaches philosophy at New York University three days a week—she is at work on another book. It is a history of American philosophy for Oxford University Press' Home University Library series.

In a Nutshell

ROOF OF THE WORLD. Tibet, Key to Asia. By Amaury de Riencourt. Rinehart. 322 pp. Ill. $3.50.

FRENCH traveler Amaury de Riencourt describes Tibet at first hand and believes that it is the key to an adequate understanding of the East because Tibetan psychology is more readily perceived than that of more complex Asiatic cultures. Asserting that "religion is still the dominant political force" in Asia, he suggests that the continent "is now in the process of searching for its own values and its own response to the challenge of scientific thought."

THE SASKATCHEWAN. By Marjorie Wilkins Campbell. Rinehart. 400 pp. $4.

NEWEST addition to the superb Rivers of America series, "The Saskatchewan" tells the story of 2000 miles of Canadian North America during 200 years. The river, the main branch of which rises in the Canadian Rockies, flows into Lake Winnipeg and, under the name of Nelson River, emerges from there into Hudson Bay. The Saskatchewan Basin drains an area of approximately 145,000 square miles. Transition of the area from the days of the Indians and roving French and Indian traders to the present, with the turning point in the transition being the rebellion led by Halfbreed Louis Riel in 1885, is described with care.

FRANZ KAFKA AND PRAGUE. By Pavel Eisner. Golden Griffin Books. (Arts, Inc.) 100 pp. Ill. $3.

PAVEL LISNER'S essay, translated from the German by Lowry Nelson and Rene Wellek, is written in the belief that Kafka is "explicable only in terms of his Prague, and thus only by means of an intimate knowledge of circumstances which are unique and will never recur again." The writing is smug, but the excellent pictures are a compensation. The book's handsome physical appearance has won it a place in the American Institute of Graphic Arts "50 Books" show.

THE MAGNIFICENT COURTESAN. By Lozania Prole. McBride. 379 pp. $3.

PULP fiction editors would even shudder at this one. It's a fifth-rate fairy tale concerning a servant girl who, through judicious use of her charms, finally becomes Lady Hamilton, the mistress of Admiral Horatio Lord Nelson. The book is as amateurish as the heroine is professional.

THE WORLD OF LEARNING. Europa Publications, Ltd., London. $10.

IN THIS third edition of a volume first published in 1947, all reference libraries will have a valuable pathfinder. Authoritatively it presents, in alphabetical order of countries, detailed information about academies, learned societies, research institutions, libraries and archives, museums and art galleries, universities, colleges, technical institutions, with names of members of leading academies, presidents, directors, curators, deans and professors of other institutions. The 45-page index of institutions is probably the most important single addition to this 1950 volume. Preceding the national presentation is an international section which leads with a chapter on UNESCO, its origins, aims, functions and organization. Included also is a list of international scientific and cultural organizations.

JOHN FOSTER DULLES

discusses the crucial question of our day

WAR or PEACE

A distinguished statesman—one of the chief architects of America's bi-partisan foreign policy—here issues a clarion call: "Let us mobilize for peace!" Strategic planning, willingness to sacrifice, and a dynamic faith, he says, can win the peace, as they have won past wars.

John Foster Dulles...

analyzes the dangerous situation of our world today, stressing the importance of resolution, strength, and cool judgment in facing the Russian threat. He traces the course of international affairs and American foreign policy during the past five years. He explains our present foreign policies, weighing gains against reverses. Finally, he points out what needs to be done to strengthen the United Nations and to draw the free peoples together to form a bulwark for peace.

John Foster Dulles...

is uniquely qualified to discuss these matters. Since the 1945 San Francisco Conference, he has taken part in ten major international meetings, each of which brought him face to face with the Russians. As a primary figure in America's bi-partisan foreign policy, as a delegate to the UN, and as a United States Senator, he has participated in many momentous decisions. In this book you will find his comments on important political figures, and many fascinating glimpses behind the scenes.

Straightforward and informative, realistic yet appealing to the highest moral values, this is a book for every American who cares about the future of our country and of the world.

Barrymore Loves Ted, Povich Loves All Bosox

With Shirley Povich

Y'KNOW, A GUY COULD weary of picking the Red Sox to win the American League pennant, but this tireless prophet is doing it again, despite three Purple Hearts for wounded feelings in the last three campaigns.

POVICH

I will not be swayed by Miss Ethel Barrymore who has been following the pennant races for years, has that old-time baseball religion, and recently announced to a waiting world that the Yankees ought to take it all.

At that, La Barrymore admits a healthy respect for the Red Sox. and even a love interest. "I'm in love," she confided to the United Press, "with Ted Williams."

I'm leaving romance out of this, unlike Barrymore. I'm not in love with Ted Williams. I'm picking the Red Sox because I'm completely unsmitten by the rest of the clubs in the league, and a firm believer in their inadequacy.

For three years now, since they won their last pennant in 1946, the Red Sox have had the best team in the league. Then why didn't they finish on top? Elemental, chums, the best team didn't play the best baseball.

Yet, I must go with the team that owns two of the five twenty-game winning pitchers in the league last season (Mel Parnell, Ellis Kinder); the best hitter in the business, Ted Williams; the same club that in 1949 hit the league's most home runs and two-baggers, and Old Hand Joe McCarthy at the helm.

AMONG THE ITEMS that favor the Red Sox this season, or should, is the schedule. Last year the Red Sox bogged down horribly when they had to play 18 of their first 27 games on the road, away from Fenway Park's friendly fences. They were almost out of the pennant race before they were in it. Only July 4, they were mired in fifth place, 12 games behind the league-leading Yanks.

This season they will have no excuses. They play 18 of their first 26 games at home, should be nicely squared away after the first month, and the team to catch.

All of which is assuredly not gospel. The Red Sox have their weaknesses, too. They're thin on the bench. In 1948 when they lost a pennant-playoff to Cleveland, in 1949 when they blew the flag to the Yankees on the last day, they acted like a faint-hearted club. Their more brutal critics called 'em choke-ups.

And at 35, Ellis Kinder may not come close to winning the 23 games he won last season. And Bobby Doerr is slowing at second base, and Vern Stephens isn't one of the league's good shortstops. But the Red Sox have fewer weaknesses than the rest.

The Yankees are to be respected chiefly for Joe Di Maggio, Joe Page, Tommy Henrich and the traditional Yankee grit in the face of situations. Casey Stengel kept them up there last year in their crippled condition with baseball's version of the Hindu rope trick—no visible means of support. Yet the Yanks never blew.

BUT IT'S AN OLDER AND creakier Di Maggio, and Henrich, who return to the battle this season. Di Maggio's heel-spurs are supposed healed but he has never been an iron man. Henrich plays with such dash he is susceptible to injuries, and it is always unsurprising when he's hurt.

Stengel hasn't yet filled the first base job to his satisfaction, will weaken his outfield if he brings Henrich in. Di Maggio may be the lone relic of traditionally great Yankee outfields. The likes of Mapes and Bauer offer defensive stability, but little in the batting order.

In contrast to the pitch-rich Red Sox who have in addition to Kinder and Parnell, a solid left hander like Chuck Stobbs and a steady right hander like Joe Dobson, Stengel

Noren's 2-Run Homer Launches Nats' 4-2 Victory

March to Flagpole Tuesday Will Be No Place for the Kids

The traditional march to the flagpole to raise Old Glory on opening day at Griffith Stadium Tuesday has no place for youngsters.

Vice President Barkley, 73, will lead the procession, flanked by two other gentlemen who have been in their respective businesses for a number of years.

On the Veep's right will be Connie Mack, 87-year-old manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, while Clark Griffith, 80-year-old president of the Nats, is the third member of the official flag-raising party.

The flagpole is located in dead centerfield, 408 feet from home plate.

DiMag Hits Homer, Bums Beaten, 6-4

New York, April 15 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio socked his fifth home run of the spring to highlight a five-run fifth inning rally that enabled the New York Yankees to beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 6-4, before 12,000 fans today. The triumph was the Yanks' first of the year over their 1949 World Series foes.

DiMaggio unloaded off veteran Preacher Roe to break a scoreless tie and open the gates.

Chapman, Joost Homer; A's Win, 7-4

Philadelphia, April 15 (AP).—Eddie Joost and Sam Chapman hit homers here this afternoon as the Philadelphia Athletics landed on the Philadelphia Phillies and their ace pitcher Russ Meyer for a 7-4 victory.

Singles by Richie Ashburn and Eddie Waitkus and Del Ennis' infield out gave the Phillies a 1-0 lead in the first. Eddie Joost tied it quickly for the Philadelphia Americans with a home run in the third.

A walk, Sam Chapman's three bagger and a single by Pet Suder gave the A's two more in the fourth, while two walks, an infield out and a hit added two more for the A's in the fifth.

HOMER FIRST TIME UP—Irv Noren, rookie from the Pacific Coast League, made an impressive debut yesterday by slamming a homerun over the right field wall the first time he ever went to bat in Griffith Stadium. Above Noren is congratulated by Eddie Robinson (left) and Sam Dente (right) as Irv crosses home plate in the first inning. His homer scored Dente ahead. The Nats beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-2, in an exhibition game. The same teams play here today

Haynes Baffles Bucs; Griffs Bang 11 Hits

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Irv Noren required exactly one pitch to become completely adjusted to his new surroundings at Griffith Stadium yesterday.

Making his first appearance at the park, the $70,000 Coast League sensation slammed Pitcher Bob Chesnes' second offering over the rightfield wall for a two-run homer to chauffeur the Nats to a 4-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

There was reward for the 3006 spectators who sat in 40-degree weather to get their first gander at the 1950 Nats in something else besides Noren's first-inning homer.

Their hopes, if not themselves, were warmed by the stout pitching performance of Joe Haynes, now well over the hump of a comeback campaign after a wretched 1949 season.

Haynes permitted only one run and five hits in the seven innings he toiled and pitched out of the one jam he found himself in like the craftsman he once was.

He endowed Ray Scarborough with a 4-1 lead in the eighth inning and Scarborough, primping for his opening day assignment against the Athletics Tuesday, promptly squandered one run by pitching a home run ball to Wally Westlake, who drove the ball into the new left-field stands, 386 feet from home pate.

Westlake got two of the Bucs' seven hits and his fourth inning single drove in the other Bucs' tally.

The Nats gave every sign of bearing out Manager Bucky Harris' prediction that they would be a hitting ball club, fashioning 11 blows off of Chesnes, Murry Dickson and Forrest Main. The collection included a double by Gil Coan, and a triple by Eddie Stewart, as well as the homer by Noren, who also got a single.

Eddie Robinson, back in the line-up after being out for 10 days with a siege of Virus X, belted a single to center on his second appearance. It was the 16th straight game this Spring in which the big firstbaseman has hit safely and kept his average well above the gaudy .400 mark.

Sam Dente set the stage for Noren's sky-scraping drive over the rightfield wall by singling off Chesnes with one out in the first. Two pitches later, the Nats owed a 2-0 lead as Noren uppercutted the second pitch out of the premises.

Three singles, with Westlake's driving in the run, gave the Bucs their first tally in the fourth, but the Nats got that one back in the next inning on Stewart's triple to deep center and Eddie Yost's fly to left.

Gil Coan's double to center drove in Haynes, who was on first after forcing Al Evans, with the fourth Nats' tally in the 6th.

IN SHORT—Steve Nagy, the pitching part of Harris' four Coast League acquisitions, goes against Cliff Chambers, another southpaw, in today's exhibition finale at 2:30 p. m. . . . Al Evans missed a homer into the new left field seats by inches in the seventh inning when Ralph Kiner backed up against the boards to haul in his smash. . . . Kiner, incidentally, didn't come within 100 feet of a homer. . . . The Nats broke in their new road uniforms and revealed a new numbering scheme. Pitchers are labeled in the twenties, outfielders in the thirties and infielders in the forties.

Jim Demaret Takes Lead on Sizzling 64

By Sterling Slappey

Atlanta, April 15 (AP).—Jimmy DeMaret, who last Sunday won the Augusta Masters, today shot the greatest round of competitive golf ever played at North Fulton—a seven-under-par 64—to sweep to the lead in the North Fulton Open.

His three-day total is 204, three strokes better than second-place Sam Snead, who came in with a third round 69.

Demaret's great round included eight birdies and only one over-par hole. His putter was accurate on the speedy greens and he had no complaints about pin positions, although nearly every other golfer claimed that holes were located to penalize putters.

Ferrier Third at 209

In third place after 54 holes on the 6762-yard course was Jim Ferrier, the big Australian who flubbed the Masters on the last nine holes. Ferrier was two under par with a 69 for a 208 total.

Clayton Heafner, Charlotte, N. C., the second-round leader, got a 72 for a 209. Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C., coleader after the first round, took another 71 to slip into a tie for fifth place with 211 strokes. Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill., got a 69 to join Palmer.

The old competitive record at North Fulton was 66, scored by several golfers in various tournaments.

National Open Champion Cary Middlecoff, in a fit of temper after missing a 4-foot putt, blasted his ball off the green across an adjoining fairway. His action was the equivalent of withdrawal from a tournament from which he received appearance money.

Bosox Held To 3 Hits, Bow To Braves, 4-1

Boston, April 15 (AP).—The Boston Braves teed off against Right-hander Joe Dobson for a 4-1 victory when they resumed their intracity series with the Red Sox in a game halted by rain after seven innings today at Braves Field.

Del Crandall's two-bagger and Sam Jethroe's single gave the Tribesmen their first tally in the third inning and they collected their other runs in the fourth, fifth and seventh frames.

Gussie Moran Thinks She's Engaged Again

Monte Carlo, April 15 (AP).—Gorgeous Gussie Moran's heart was in another dither tonight, she said.

The glamorous California tennis star said maybe she is thinking of getting married to Pat Di Cicco, of Hollywood, former husband of Gloria Vanderbilt.

Di Cicco confirmed they were thinking of getting married, but said nothing is official yet and they haven't decided where a wedding might be held.

She also emphasized that so far "it's not an engagement."

—Truman, Scarborough vs. A's—

Nats Try Spitter and Hook Again in Opener Tuesday

The same 1-2 pitching punch that delivered the Nats an opening day victory over the Philadelphia Athletics last year will try it again at Griffith Stadium Tuesday.

Informed that Harry Truman, left-handed spitballer from Independence, Mo., who launched the 3-2 success against the A's in 1949, would be on hand again, Nats Manager Bucky Harris announced that Ray Scarborough, curve-balling righthander from Mount Olive, N. C., would once again try to finish the job.

Both came through superbly last year. Truman fooled everybody by tossing a spitter for his ceremonial pitch while Scarborough kept the A's baffled enough to toss a 7-hitter.

Griffith Stadium gates will open at 11:30 Tuesday morning with the Presidential party scheduled to arrive at 2:45.

The complete Opening Day program:

11:30—Gates open.
12:00—Concert by Goldman Band.
12:30—Washington batting practice.
1:45—Philadelphia batting practice.
2:15—Philadelphia fielding practice.
2:25—Washington fielding practice.
2:30—Army Band arrives.
2:45—President Truman and party arrive.
2:55—President Clark Griffith and Connie Mack accompany Vice President Barkley to flag pole with Army Band for flag raising ceremony.
3:00—President Truman throws out first ball.

Terps Blow 5 Run Lead, Lose, 6 to 5

Richmond, Va., April 15 (AP).—University of Richmond's Spiders scored five runs in the last of the ninth to tie Maryland, and added another in the tenth to defeat the Terrapins, 6-5, here today.

Blanked the first eight innings, the Spiders could get only a lone hit during that period. But the roof caved in on Maryland Pitcher Boots Panella in the ninth.

Bo Nelson, Richmond shortstop, started the rally with a one-bagger to left field. Pinch Hitter Ellis Redford singled, and Simon Moughamian came up with his second hit of the day to drive in Nelson. A double by First Baseman Bobby Stephens drove in another tally.

A walk loaded the bases with one out. Pete Smith's single shoved another run across. Don Soderberg relieved Panella on the mound for the Old Liners.

Millikan Plans to tTake Terps Job After He Gets Release

H. A. (Bud) Millikan is well on his way to becoming the new basketball coach at the University of Maryland.

Millikan is returning tomorrow to Newton, (Iowa) High School, where he is a basketball coach, to iron out the details of his release by the Board of Education. He plans to come back in about a week to sign up with the Terps.

He gave out a few hints as to the type of teams he would like to field at College Park.

"They would be made up principally of players from Maryland and the Washington area, and they would pile up a lot of points," he said.

The latter part of that statement was surprising. Millikan played and coached under Hank Iba, famous Oklahoma Aggies basketball stylist, who stresses defensive play and wins low-scoring games.

Jim Tatum, Maryland's athletic director, said he might be able to announce in a few weeks that Wade Walker, Oklahoma's All-America tackle, has been added to the football staff as a varsity line coach.

"I haven't spoken to Walker since the senior bowl game in December, but I'm pretty sure that he'll be in our camp next year," said Tatum.

NBA Plans Minor 'Branch'; Wants to Buy St. Louis Charter

Chicago, April 15 (AP).—The National Basketball Association today moved to reduce its bulky 16-team membership with preliminary study of a proposed branch league of seven or eight members.

In a surprise meeting here, the NBA executive committe and representatives of Sheboygan, Wis.; Waterloo, Iowa; Sandusky, Ohio; Racine, Wis., and Des Moines, Iowa, talked over the planned "affiliate" loop.

Possibly St. Louis, Denver and Anderson, Ind., may round out the new pro circuit, it was reported. Grand Rapids, Mich., also was said to be interested in the new combination.

NBA President Maurice Podoloff also disclosed that the NBA had offered to purchase the St. Louis franchise, but had received no answer.

The NBA president said the proposed new league would have a working agreement with the major circuit. He declined to describe the projected loop as a minor cage wheel, but conceded that there would be no meeting of the champions of both leagues.

Tri-City Buys Redskin

Chicago, April 15—(AP).—The Tri-City Blackhawks have purchased Center Noble Jorgensen from Sheboygan's Redskins.

'Brookmeade's Sunglow, Greek Ship Run 1-2 in Chesapeake

Derby Entry Pays $8.80, Kinsman 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Have De Grace, Md., April 15.—Leaving the stretch strewn with shattered Derby and Preakness hopes, the Brookmeade Stable threw a one-two-punch into the twenty-ninth running of the $20,000 Chesapeake Stakes here today.

Sunglow and Greek ship, carrying the famous white and royal blue, drove into the finish line in the order named and a half length apart, the stablemates having Mrs. James Carson's Kinsman between them at the end of the famous Maryland mile and a sixteenth test.

Thus the major trial hereabouts for the Derby-Preakness-Belmont doings went to an old-established firm, the majority of the "Johnny-Come-Lately" stables having their ambitions rudely jolted. Among those most affected was the two-year Palatine Stable because Quiz Show couldn't answer the $1 question today, let alone the $64 one.

The son of Apache, gallant winner of the Chesapeake Trial a week ago, showed some early speed and then folded like a kite in a hurricane, finshing a legweary tenth in the field of 16, the largest ever to compete in the stake.

A crowd of 18,000, largest of the meeting to date, saw Jack Robertson bring Sunglow to the outside entering the stretch and watched Consolato Errico take Greek ship to the inside. Either would have been insurance for the other had interference been met. However, each got clear sailing. The consensus was that the best of the pair, today at least, was the winner.

The entry, running one-two, brought a mutuel payoff oddity, the pair returning $8.80 to win, $9.40 to place and $6.20 to show. Kinsman paid $4.20 to show. The time was not excitable. Sunglow was clocked in 1:46 against 1:44, the record for the race set in 1933 by Mr. Khayyam, and 1:42 3-5, the track mark registered by Natchez a few years back.

This was the first Brookmeade Chesapeake victory since Cavalcade won in 1934 and then went on to win the Kentucky Derby, one of the few horses to make good on that "double," the others being Whiskery, War Admiral and Citation.

There was some controversy directly after the race about whether or not Sunglow, named for the Derby, was also a Preakness eligible. However, there is no doubt now. Trainer Preston Burch phoned Mrs. Isabelle Dodge Sloan at Aiken, S. C., and told her of Sunglow's victory and his intentions of sending him to the Preakness. Burch mailed in a supplementary entry to make sure.

Greek Flag, believed to be the best 3-year-old in the barn before today, already had been made eligible for all of the triple crown races. Kinsman was not named for any of the big events. However,

Truman Only Southpaw in 37 Years of Presidential Pitching

Harris and Ewing and The Washington Post

TAFT—1912 | WILSON—1914 | HARDING—1921 | COOLIDGE—1923 | HOOVER—1929 | ROOSEVELT—1933 | TRUMAN—1945

THINGS WERE not going so well for the Cincinnati Reds of 1882, especially for a barrel-chested righthander who was doing the pitching that sultry July afternoon.

Doubles, triples and home runs thundered off the bats of the opposition in devastating monotony. Finally, the merciful manager yanked the distraught pitcher who trudged off to the clubhouse.

He flung his glove the length of the room and then practically ripped off his uniform.

"That's it," he bellowed. "That's the last time I'll ever pitch. If that team hit me as well as they did, I must be through. I'll never pitch again."

He kept his word—for 29 years. Then, one mid-August day, the retired pitcher, William Howard Taft, who by this time had become the twenty-sixth President of the United States, came to the Washington Ball Park and consented to throw out the first ball that day late in the season.

Clark Griffith, who was to become manager of the Nats the next season, 1912, heard about it and an idea struck him.

"Why not have the President of the United States throw out the first ball every opening day?" Griffith asked himself.

"And why not, it's a natural," said Griff, answering his own question. A trip to the White House to see Taft was arranged and the former Cincinnati righthander agreed, throwing out the ball on opening day in 1912.

"That's right," Griff chuckled yesterday, "we had a real pitcher throw out the first ball on opening day. Mr. Taft was making a comeback at 55. And he could zing that ball, as I remember."

Still chuckling, Griff arose from his chair to point to a picture on his office wall of President Truman making the ceremonial toss last year.

"For an umpire, that fellow is a heck of a good pitcher. Truman, you know, was umpire back in Missouri. The kids wouldn't let him play on the ball club 'cause he wore glasses, so he took to umpiring.

"He gets a big kick throwing out that ball. Why, I didn't know he was left-handed until 1947 when he threw it out left-handed. He's the first southpaw to come out of the White House in 37 years that Presidents have been throwing out the first ball. And he throws harder than any of the other Presidents."

Come Tuesday, the weatherman permitting, Mr. Truman will be making his fifth appearance on the presidential mound, a flag-bedecked box to the left of the Nats' dugout on the first-base side of the park.

Old stuff to Griff after having watched so many? No such thing.

"It's always a great thrill to me, a really great thrill.

"Funny thing, I was thinking the other day of how several of the Presidents who have pitched here had a baseball background. Taft was a professional pitcher, Harding owned a ball club one time, Roosevelt managed the Groton baseball team and Truman was an umpire. Why they're fans, all except Mr. Coolidge.

"He didn't like baseball, I'm quite sure. He'd leave about the second or third inning. But his wife, she loved baseball. Used to score the games.

"And Mr. Roosevelt! He told me lots of times he'd like to come out to the games more often, but he said he didn't want to put me to so much trouble. We had to build a little ramp for him, you know, because of his legs.

"Course, we've had some lesser lights throw out the first ball when the President couldn't attend, but somehow it takes the President himself to give you the real thrill of an opening day.

"Wonder what Truman's gonna do Tuesday? He fooled those photographers couple of years ago by throwing one ball out righthanded and a second lefthanded. Then last year he comes up with a spitter.

"He's tricky. Wish I could get a pitcher for Bucky Harris like that."

POVICH—From Pg. 1-C

This Morning

may have aheap of pitching troubles.

His man, Vic Raschi, who won 21 last year, and Allie Reynolds who won 17, had the powerful help of Joe Page. But Page traditionally is little account in alternate years and it is remembered that even last season when the chips were down, he was pounded hard the last four times he poked his nose into the box in a relief shift.

Stengel is scrounging for a four-man starting staff to consist otherwise of two left-handers, the unreliable and wild Tommy Byrne, and the veteran Ed Lopat. Beyond them, he isn't deep. But Yankee pitchers have the help of the league's best double-play combination in Phil Rizzuto and Gerry Coleman.

IT'S POPULAR THIS SPRING to cite the Detroit Tigers as the dark animals who could rise and take it all—and they might. They have going for them perhaps the most proficient outfield in the league—Vic Wertz, Hoot Evers, and Sophomore Johnny Groth, a youthful hell-for-leather trio who can get the ball, throw it, and grab their bats and knock the thing out of the park.

And on paper, Red Rolfe has perhaps the finest of all the pitching staffs, depending on a big "if,"—if Hal Newhouser's sore arm comes around. None can match the potential of Newhouser, Strikeout King Virgil Trucks, Hard-Balling young Art Houtteman, and the soft-balling but canny Fred Hutchinson.

The Tigers have, too, the absolute best third baseman in the league in George Kell who topped his fielding skill with the league batting title last season; and in Gerry Priddy they plugged their second base weakness completely. Other factors being equal, Priddy alone could make up the ten games by which the Tigers finished fourth last season.

But Rolfe is taking two big gambles that could land the Tigers back in fourth place. He is operating at shortstop with the weak-armed Johnny Lipon, and at first base he is getting to be quite disenchanted with Dick Kryhoski, the strong young man the Yankees discarded. In fact, he's already looking for another first baseman.

OUT IN CLEVELAND, Lou Boudreau visions the Indians as a better-hitting club than the crew whose lack of base hits cost 'em the pennant last season. Only Dale Mitchell hit as much as .300 for the Indians. Boudreau himself, Joe Gordon, Ken Keltner, and Larry Doby nose-dived sadly in the batting figures.

Boudreau now is attempting to pump some power into the Indians' batting order with the installation of his giant colored lad, Luke Easter, in right field. And in Easter he may indeed, be adding not only base hits but run-producing power. Bucky Harris, dubiously noting recent claims that the powerful Easter "can be pitched to," commented: "Yeah, and the way to pitch to him is carefully."

At third base, the Indians have replaced Keltner with young Al Rosen, a good minor league hitter who has yet to catch up with major league pitching. And if he does, the Indians will still be sacrificing defensive strength because Rosen has always been unimpressive as a third baseman.

Cleveland could be one of the few clubs that are strong on pitching. Their two Bobs—Lemon and Feller—are a mighty duo, and in young Mike Garcia the Indians boast the best-looking rookie pitcher to break in last year. Boudreau has bolstered his relief staff with little Jesse Flores, from the Coast League, and is praying for the rebound of Gene Bearden, the freshman sensation of 1948, the sophomore flop of 1949.

UNTIL A FEW WEEKS AGO, it was popular to assume the Athletics would have a lock on at least fifth place, perhaps move into the first division. That label now belongs to the White Sox, who all of a sudden have come up with some of the league's better pitching.

Jack Onslow is blessed with a potent quartet in Right Hander Randy Gumpert, and his southpaw trio of Bill Wight, Bob Kuzaya and Walter Pierce. They will take the White Sox wherever the club is going, with the help of Cass Michaels, the league's best second baseman.

The White Sox were jolted by the shoulder injury to Gus Zernial last July when his .355 average was leading the league, but he is back for what could be a full season. Always to be balanced against Zernial's hitting, though, is his crudeness in the outfield. Onslow's outfield otherwise, Dave Philley and Gerry Scala, is not of the heavyweight type.

Onslow has patched his infield with heavy-hitting, nonfielding Hank Majeski at third base; and at shortstop he has installed Rookie Alphonso Carrasquel, a good-looker out of the Texas League who has edged Luke Appling out of the job. But he is suffering at first base, where his top candidate is Charlie Kress, .278 hitting cast-off from the Reds.

CONNIE MACK'S Golden Jubilee Year as manager of the Athletics scarcely appears to be one of his happier years. The A's, in fact, appear to be a worse team in April, after two months of spring training, than they were in January when on paper they were somewhat imposing.

Mr. Mack paid $100,000 to the Browns for Bob Dillinger, a .324-hitting third baseman, only to discover that Dillinger was no ball of fire around third base. He wangled Catcher Joe Tipton from the White Sox, now admits that Mike Guerra is his best catcher. He hasn't come up as yet with a third outfielder to play with Sam Chapman and Elmer Valo, is gambling that Barney McCosky will make it after a back operation and a year's lay-off.

It was in his pitching, supposedly solid, that Mr. Mack was struck hardest. Phil Marchildon, Dick Fowler, Joe Coleman, Lew Brissie—names that once sounded imposing—came down with varried ailments. Marchildon, Mr. Mack gave up on, sent back to the minors. Fowler and Coleman are being hospitalized for sore arms; Brissie this spring can't get anybody out, nor has Alex Kellner been looking like the 20-game winner he was last season.

Mack's pitching plight, at least at the outset, is such that the opening-game assignment on Tuesday is being turned over to a little left hander, Charlie Shantz, who last year won a total of six games. It is from Shantz and Rookie Bob Hooper, up from Buffalo with a whopping 19-3 record, that Mack is looking for pitching help.

WASHINGTON IS ATTEMPTING to recapture some of its former glories by putting the club under the management of shrewd Bucky Harris, who won two of the town's pennants. Harris has put together what could be a tolerable ball team—if the pitching can be overlooked, which it can't.

Except for Irv Noren, the expensive rookie outfielder from the Coast League, the Nats' front-line forces are exactly the same as those who burrowed into last place in 1949, with several long losing streaks under Joe Kuhel.

Noren could give the club added punch, but his outfield colleagues, Gil Coan, Sam Mele and Eddie Stewart, are not a distinguished group. Harris is gambling that Coan will awaken, finally catch up with major league pitching; also that his right-handed hitters, Eddie Yost, Mele, Al Evans, Mickey Grasso and Clyde Vollmer will capitalize on the shortened left field distances.

He's gambling, too, that Al Kozar has brushed up on his double-play technique at second base. The Nats' infield otherwise stacks up smartly, with the under-rated Same Dente a whale of a shortstop and Eddie Robinson the best-hitting first baseman in the league.

But when Harris counts his pitchers, he tolls off Ray Scarborough and stops.

YET THE NATS could beat out the Browns, who have hired a psychologist-hypnotist to rid them of their defeatist complexes. There will be a rush on seasoned psychologists if Dr. David Tracy and Manager Zach Taylor get the Browns out of the cellar.

They are the club that finished seventh last year and then sold off their heaviest hitter, Dillinger, and Gerry Priddy, perhaps the league's best second baseman. They don't own an infielder who made good in the majors last year, and in pitchers they're almost as impoverished as the Nats. Their outfielding pair of Roy Sievers and Dick Kokos are hot articles. But if you smell anything burning, it's probably the Browns' fans.

Bob McNabb Holds Losers To Four Hits

Lexington, Va., April 15 (AP).—Georgetown University's baseball team defeated Virginia Military Institute, 13-2, here this afternoon.

Georgetown tallied four runs in the first inning to build up a safe lead and merely added to it thereafter. Pitcher Bob McNabb allowed the Keydets only four hits.

Both of VMI's runs were scored in the sixth when Homer Chryssikos doubled, advanced to third on Fred Anson's fly ball and scored on a fielder's choice. Paul Shrader followed him after Red Williford's double.

VMI used four pitchers, Blair Thomas through the fourth, Ted Taylor in the fifth and Tommy Harwood for the last two innings. The game was called after the seventh because of cold weather.

Three United States roller champions will see action in the tenth annual District of Columbia figure skating championships at Riverside Stadium Monday and Tuesday.

Jimmy Sutton, 1949 United States figure skating titlist; Barbara Niles and John Pritchett, novice dance champions, and Gary Gardner, 10, juvenile speed king, all have enrolled.

Lowry's Five Goals Pace Maryland to 11-3 Victory

Paced by Hank Lowry's five goals, the University of Maryland lacrosse team won an easy 11-3 victory over Rutgers yesterday at College Park.

The slender attackman tallied the first four Terrapin points in the opening 8½ minutes on shots from the crease area. Teammate Mark Medalry, who assisted on three Terp goals, fed Lowry on two of his first period markers.

Navy Trails, 2-0, Wins Lacrosse, 9-6

Annapolis, Md., April 15 (AP).—Navy had to come from behind today to overcome Penn State for its fourth lacrosse win of the season, 9-6.

Penn State, loser to Loyola in its first start of the season yesterday, startled the crowd on Farragut Field by skipping off to a 2-0 lead in the opening period.

Rockville Host To Colesville in Montgomery Loop

The Montgomery County League kicks off the Sunday sandlot baseball season at 3 p. m. today with Rockville host to Colesville.

Robert (Brother) Love, onetime University of Maryland righthander, will pitch for Colesville. Lefty John Coakley, back on the sandlots after three years in the St. Louis Browns' farm system, will toil for Rockville.

The Tri-County League opens May 19, and the Prince Georges and Montgomery Park and Planning League on April 30, and the Southern Maryland League April 29.

Texas Golfer Gets a Birdie On the Wing

Paris, Tex., April 15 (AP).—The birdie Frank Wear, jr., shot on the Spring Lake Golf Course here was a dove.

Wear, member of the Paris Junior College golf team, has the dead dove and three witnesses to prove it.

His tee shot off the first hole broke the bird's neck.

Bill Hawkins' 4-Hitter Wins For Navy, 8-4

Annapolis, Md., April 15 (AP).—Bill Hawkins pitched Navy to a four-hit 8-4 victory over Columbia today in the opening game of the Eastern Intercollegiate League baseball season.

Mixing curves and a blooper with his fastball, the Richmond, Va., right-hander, fanned 10 Columbians and gave up seven walks.

A two-run homer by Midshipman Pat Corrigan of Baltimore paced the 13-hit Navy attack. Corrigan golfed a low ball over right fielder Tom Powers' head and it rolled 400 feet to the edge of the ball park.

It was Navy's third win against three defeats and one tie for the season. Columbia absorbed its third straight defeat.

Beginners in Boating Will Be Given Break This Season

Power, Sail Groups Plan New Events

By Happy Walker

For years, the average individual attracted to either power or sail boat racing might just as well have been reaching for the moon insofar as opportunity to break into the sport was concerned.

Today that condition is rapidly changing in and around Washington. No longer will the boat rookie be denied a chance to try his skill in either sail or power.

In recent months, several freshman boating groups have been organized, primarily to offer sandlot opportunity for boating initiates.

Such a group is the newly launched Capital Power Boat Association, destined to be one of Washington's more aggressive power boat racing clans. Last year's successful, but unorganized, novice power race series enlisted the efforts of a dozen seasoned boating followers who conceived and founded the group in the interest of the novice.

Races on May 7 and 28

Such well known names in the boating field as Malcome Lamborne, Jack Hyde, Aubrey Thacker, Joe Thacker, I. E. Hale, Hudson Moses, John Lamphier, Howard Scott, Jack Marr, Wes Lusby, Earl Hildebrand, W. A. Rogers and this writer made up the founding fahers' roster.

May 7 and 28 have been set for the spring races to take place in the Georgetown Channel between 14th st. and Memorial bridges, with pits at the Columbia Island Marina; 15 classes are scheduled with racing starting at noon.

The officers are as follows: John W. Hyde, commodore; Aubrey Thacker, vice commodore; W. A. Rogers, treasurer, and Howard Scott, secretary.

Solomons Club Founded

Another recent development is the founding of the Solomons Outboard Club. Here again, half a hundred amateur speed bugs comprise a power racing group to sponsor informal races, with an occasional sanctioned affair thrown in.

Their schedule includes a series of informal races to be kicked off with an ambitious APBA-sanctioned 40-mile marathon from Solomons to Benedict and return on May 21. The race schedule will include all stock utility classes.

First year officers are: John Hall, jr., chairman; Raymond Scott, vice chairman; Vernon Garner, treasurer; Barbara Dowell, secretary, and Pepper Langley, measurer.

Wicomico Organized

Down on the Wicomico River at Salisbury, Md., two dyed-in-the-wool power racing devotees, Newell Howard and Jerry Valliant have devoted their talents to forming still another amateur power boat racing group. Dedicated solely to good sportsmanship in the field of power racing, the Wicomico Boat Racing Association has an impressive program of informal races and marathons planned, designed primarily for the newcomer.

The club is replete with race committee, insignia, excellent trophies, program and fine leadership denoting the serious efforts of the group to achieve their purpose. May 28 is slated for their initial race which will include all stock utility classes.

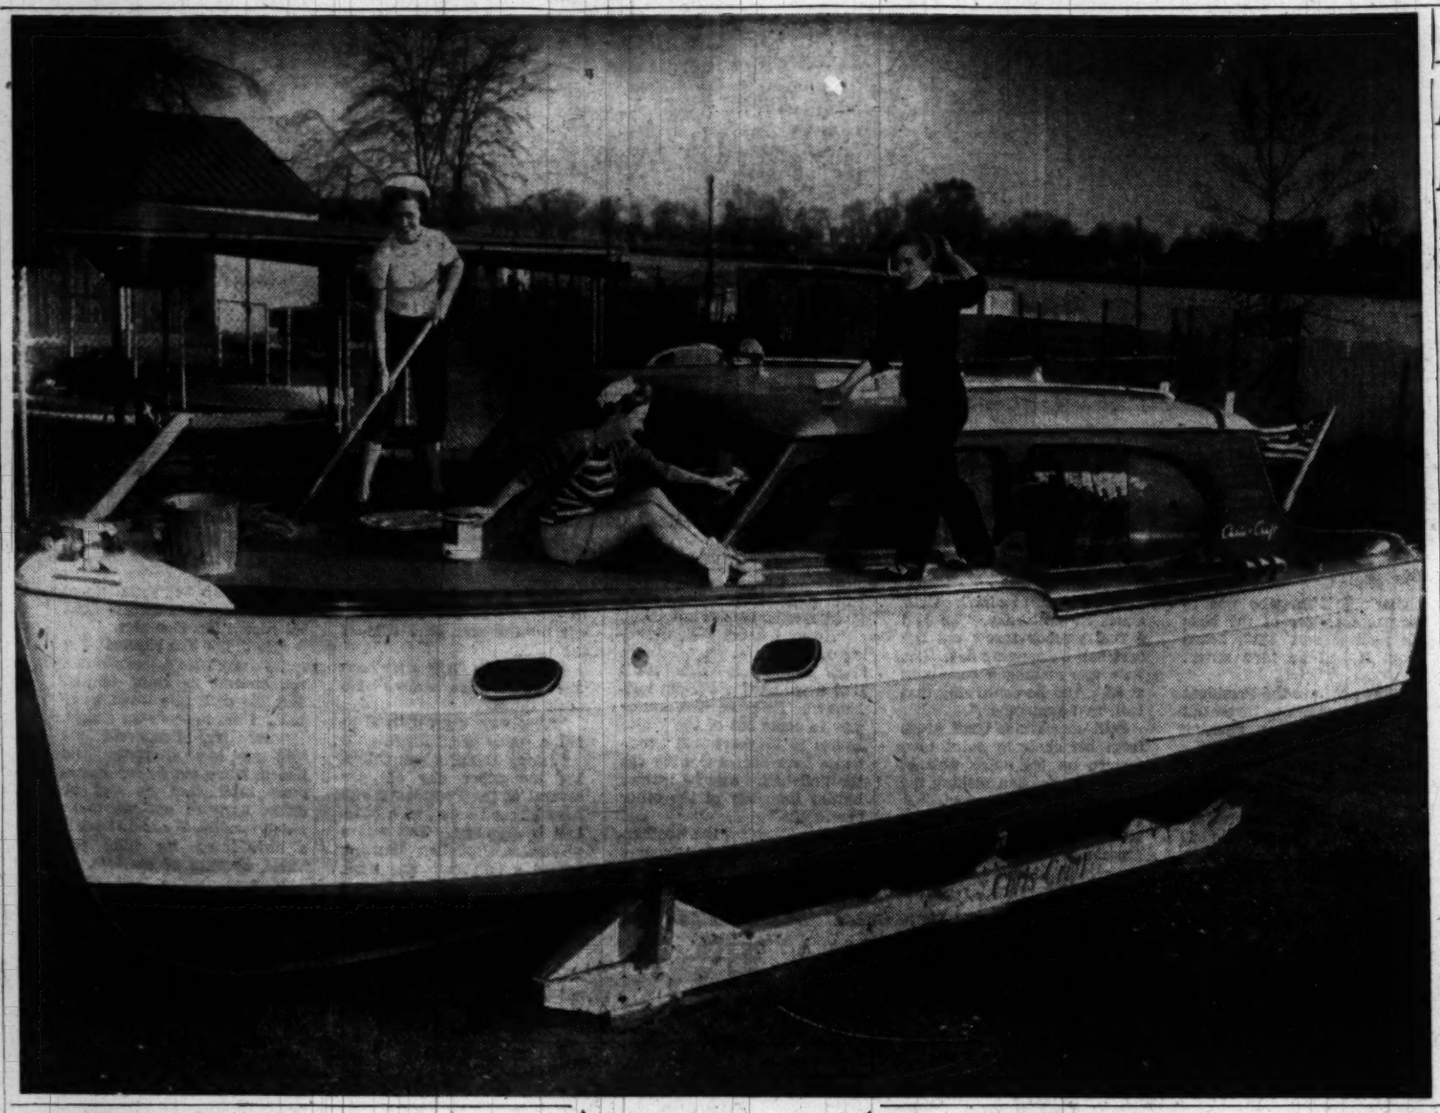
Officers include Newell Howard, commodore; Mason Dunham, vice commodore; Edwin James, rear commodore; James Spencer, secretary, and D. R. Rayne, treasurer.

Another Sailing Series

Encouraged by a highly successful, yet experimental summer race series last year, and under the guidance of Chairman Walter Collier, the Washington Sailing Marina oc Mount Vernon boulevard will repeat their series of amateur sailing races this year.

All small sail classes will be included in the series, and arrangements are now under way to register sailing neophytes who desire training and experience in sail racing.

Aiding Chairman Collier in this worthy program are: J. M. Crowe, O. M. Downing, Bob Foley, Jerry Kinney, Morton Knight, C. J. Lester, George Murnan, Marvin Myers, Dan Pinching. Ellen Pinching is secretary and James M. Morgan, director.



Trout Season Near Too

Perch Frozen Out, But Channel Bass Are Running in Carolina

By Ralph Murdock

The enthusiasm of our angling fraternity really received a chilling setback when 20-degree temperatures and snow flurries struck Washington area fishing spots last week.

Murdock

Before the elements hit, the fishing generally was spotty, although several fair catches of white perch were reported. Some of the perch we saw taken at Chain Bridge should have been returned to the water; they were too small for eating.

On the bright side comes good news: The first catch of channel bass was taken at Cape Hatteras, N. C., on Tuesday. A party of Pennsylvanians, guided by Capt. R. R. Balance, nabbed three of the bronze beauties casting in the surf off the point of the cape.

The anglers were R. W. Leach and John McFadden of Pittsburgh and James Thompson of Ebenburgh. The bass weighed from 15 to 30 pounds.

The coppered hefties, evidently late this year, have been appearing in pound nets for two weeks, but the first catch to be made by trolling is yet to be reported. The big schools of channel bass are expected in Oregon Inlet within 10 days.

AT MOREHEAD CITY, N. C., the grey trout have put in an appearance. Catches of from 2 to 11 were recorded early in the week. Small power boats and skiffs are available at this location.

The blues have also arrived on the lower coast of North Carolina at Southport. Captain Hulan reports big game fish are beginning to bite at Frying Pan Shoals where a pair of amberjack were hooked and landed.

Yesterday marked the opening of the trout season in several nearby States. Virginia starts its season next Thursday. Experiments have convinced some of the Fish and Game Commissions of several States that fall stocking of trout is anything but a profitable venture.

New Jersey, known literally as a "put-and-take trout" State, ran an electric fish-shocker through one of its trout streams to get an estimate of the remaining fish which had been stocked last fall.

THE ELECTRICAL DEVICE covered over 3000 yards of one of Jersey's best fishing spots and turned up only five trout—four browns and a rainbow. The $64 question arises—what happened to the trout?

Carl Argent, sr., at the Largo Sports Store on Central ave., says that roe shad are being taken in the Patuxent below Queen Annes Bridge. Ken Hukernell, one of the pioneers of shad fishing, caught two roes on Thursday. Incidentally, Ken has gotten out a booklet on shad fishing. The title is "Shad Fishing in Maryland." A copy is yours for the asking at the Largo Sports Store.

Nice and Handy To Have Around

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

As around the house, a young lady (or two, or three) can come in mighty handy around a boat when spring arrives and it is time to prepare for the season just ahead.

Navy Edges Columbia Crew By Two Feet

New York, April 15 (AP). — By the narrowest of margins—one tenth of a second—Navy's varsity crew repulsed a late Columbia surge to win the Maxwell Stevenson Cup Regatta on the Harlem River today.

The Middie oarsmen crossed the finish markers two feet in front of the Lion shell covering the 1¾ mile course in the fast time of 7:51.3. Columbia's time was 7:51.4.

Navy's junior varsity crew outdistanced the Lion J. V.'s by five lengths but Columbia's freshmen upset the Middie yearlings by a length with a strong stretch drive.

The varsity race—the first for the Stevenson Cup—was a nip and tuck battle from start to finish.

Rowing with a downstream wind and a fast moving tide, Navy took a slight lead as Columbia caught a crab at the start.

At the half mile, Columbia almost drew even, with both shells rowing at about 35 strokes per minute.

Navy upped the beat to 37 and led by about one-third of a length with a quarter mile to go.

Again Columbia drew close as Stroke Ed Groh forced the count to a grueling 41. The powerful Midshipmen, however, had enough left to withstand the Lions' final quarter-mile sprint.

Bridle Trails Show Today

The Washington Bridle Trails Association will hold the first of a series of two junior member shows at Equitation Field in Rock Creek Park starting at 10:30 a. m. today.

Points accumulated in this show and the fall event will result in the high scores earning a grand championship award for the seasons activities, limited to those youngsters under 18 years of age.

Designed to inspire children towards better horsemanship and increase the interest in riding along the beautiful bridle paths of Washington's Rock Creek Park the show offers an opportunity for every day riders to get together for a little competitive exhibition, free to both entrants and spectators alike.

Spring Is Here

Sailors Warm Up Next Week For April 30 Potomac Series

By Happy Walker

THIS IS THE TIME of year when Greater Washington boating enthusiasts are arousing themselves from land-locked hibernation and preparing their craft for pleasurable months ahead on the Potomac and nearby Chesapeake Bay waters.

Walker

Boat yards, back yards and garages are humming with activity—scraping, painting, refitting, a new motor—or putting the finishing touches on the apple of their eye—that homemade job.

Contrary to popular opinion, chill fall months do not put an end to boating pleasantries, especially in and around Washington, as we are usually blessed with ideal Indian summer, making boating enjoyment possible.

Even during the winter there has been the usual round of boating clubs' social, educational, instructive and planning activities.

Too, there have been numerous frost-bite regattas staged throughout the R months by those hardy sailing devotees who will brave almost any weather to answer the race committee's starting gun.

Hereabouts, the Corinthian Yact Club, Capital Y. C., Eastern Power Boat Club, Washington N. C., Columbia Y. C., the canoe and boat clubs, sailing associations and the power boat groups have just about completed their plans for a heavy season.

All indications point to an all-time high in both sponsored sail and power racing events throughout the Washington area.

The schedule shows the Potomac River Sailing Association leading off on Sunday, April 30, with its customary spring race series off Hains Point. The traditional warm-up race is set for next Sunday, followed by six consecutive weekends of racing, including the Memorial Day weekend race to Gunston Cove.

LEN PENSO, course chairman, and his committee have devised an entirely new course to challenge the local sailing skippers, both oldtimers and newcomers, with the starting line off Hains Point seawall.

The Chesapeake Bay Yacht Racing Association's summer schedule will offer a crowded lineup of sanctioned sailing events starting with the Gibson Island Yacht Squadron's Rhode River event on June 3 and 4. For the rest of the summer season, Washington area sailors can just about pick their own weekend sailings from CBYRA offerings.

In the power boat race field, present indications also point to a heavy slate of power boat races in and around Washington. Hudson Moses, chairman, Fourth Region, American Power Boat Association, reveals there are presently some 20 sanctioned outboard and inboard regattas slated for this region including Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and D. C.

UNWANTED and unnoticed in the past, the novice power and sail racer will not be standing idly by this year enviously watching the more experienced drivers and skippers churn up the water on their favorite course.

A number of sophomore boating groups have recently been organized to give the determined beginner an opportunity to participate in informal races in Washington waters during the coming season.

Maine ave., Washington's waterfront, is a behive of activity. Glistening 1950 cruiser models, small craft and motors are on display at every turn. The prospective owner can gaze—perhaps longingly—at the newest creations in small craft including fiberglas, plywood, wood, plastic and aluminum construction. The latest gimmicks, gadgets and accessories, together with the last word in streamlined outboard motors, are attracting droves of boat lovers.

'Trotters End Tour at Uline

An attendance record for a professional basketball game is assured Wednesday night when the Harlem Globetrotters conclude their 18-game coast-to-coast tour with the 1950 College All-Americans at Uline Arena, 8:30 o'clock.

The Trotters have never been so much as extended in four previous appearances locally while winning two decisions each from the Philadelphia Spahs and New York Celtics.

They played before 6900 while at least 2500 more were turned away in their most recent outing locally.

With the All-Americans will be Tommy O'Keefe, Georgetown University's popular six foot, one inch, 175-pound guard, who scored 1018 points in 90 games during four years at the Hilltop.

Bob Cousy, Holy Cross star, also will play against the Globetrotters here Wednesday.

Brown Leads Navy In MacMillan Sailing

Annapolis, Md., April 15 (AP).—Brown led at every marker to sail off with a first race in the MacMillan Cup series on Chesapeake Bay today.

Flying a spinnaker and mizzen staysail besides the usual canvas, Skipper Glen Foster of Edgartown, Mass., brought the 44-foot yawl Flirt home in two hours 56 minutes and 12 seconds after a windy trip over the triangular course of 18.4 miles.

Second boat to finish was Navy's, about six minutes behind Brown.

Princeton's defending champions came in third.

Total points in the two races will determine who retains the MacMillan Cup for the next year.

Order of finish with skippers and yawls:

1—Brown, Glen Foster, Flirt;
2—Navy, Charles Robertson, Alert;
3—Princeton, Jack Blodgett, Dandy;
4—Colgate, Dug Campbell, Lively;
5—Cornell, Will W. White, Active;
6—Yale, Robert Monetti, Intrepid;
7—M. I. T., Ray Brown, Vigilant;
8—Bowdin, R. C. Brown, Resolute;
9—Harvard, Richard Braisted, Swift;
10—Penn, R. G. Smith, Fearless.

Delrem Process Makes Task Of Refinishing Boat a Pleasure

A wartime friendship between an aviation methods engineer and a chemist is responsible for one of the greatest boons to the boating industry in many a year. Their names are: Norman G. Nelson and George P. Nelson. They are not related. A method perfected by these two wartime buddies is now called the Delrem process for paint removing.

One of the most tedious and costly jobs of the boat owner is his periodic paint removal job prior to refinishing. The Delrem process is a simple formula of blending chemicals with water heated to 180 degrees which is spread on the surface from which the paint is to be removed. A portable electric machine, with water supply connection, is the gadget that does the trick. Water and chemicals are mixed cold, then heated to the desired degree and spread on the surface.

Because the process does not require burning, scraping, rubbing, or pressure, it is particularly adaptable to boat work, especially where large areas are involved. Being 90 percent water, the process is completely fireproof. An example of the old method as compared with the Delrem system would be a 40-foot cruiser which would require from 8 to 10 days for paint removal from her sides and bottom at a cost varying from $300 to $350. Under the Delrem system, the same job would require only four hours at approximately a 50 percent savings in cost. In addition, the process does not injure wood surfaces, canvas surfaces, metals or caulking compounds.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Wall Street Says Benediction

Pretty soon, maybe, we'll begin talking about postwar business without awe and disbelief. We'll get used to the idea of good business—of some 57 million to 59 million persons employed, of a national income of 220 billion dollars, of a Federal Reserve Board index of industrial production at 183 more or less.

Livingston

In the first quarter industrial activity increased, a natural result of the end of the coal strike and the upturn in steel production. And the President's Council of Economic Advisers has decided that the outlook for the rest of 1950 isn't bad at all—with this reservation: Industrial expansion has not been rapid enough to absorb the unemployed. Good business is becoming a habit.

And Wall Street is pronouncing the benediction with higher stock prices. To be sure, not all shares are advancing. The blue chips—du Pont, General Motors, Eastman Kodak, most of the Standard Oils, and so on—lead the climb. They're the stocks bought primarily by investment trusts, mutual funds, and banks for investment accounts. Also in favor are the utilities, because they're good earners during slumps, and the oil, natural gas, and chemical stocks, because they have "unlimited" growth possibilities. These last three are Wall Street's latest fads.

Wall Street's enthusiasm is selective. Railroad shares are still in the doghouse. Ditto the more speculative issues. Moreover, it's a safe-and-sane market, with little of the Fourth-of-July, get-rich-quick-on-margin fever of 1929. Wall Street's choosiness reflects business itself. Prospects vary. The dominant characteristic of a boom, unanimity—everything going up at once—is missing.

Standard & Poor's Corp. forecast of corporate earnings for 1950 bears this out. Out of 62 industries analyzed, Standard & Poor's figures that only 14 will show gains of 10 percent or more this year over 1949. These are: Brewing, chemicals, coal, tin containers, electric power, gold mining, meat packing, natural gas, paper, radio and television, railroads, rayon yarn, beet sugar, and tires and rubber goods. (But a 10 percent gain doesn't always mean prosperity. Some gains will be merely a rebound from a poor 1949, as in railroading, meat packing, and coal.)

38 on the 'Little Change' List

Thirty-eight industries are figured to show little change—"10 percent either way." They are: Aircraft manufacturing, automobiles banking, biscuit and bread makers, building materials, carpets and rugs, cigarettes, cigars, confectionery, glass containers, corn products, dairy products, distilling, drugs and cosmetics, electrical products, finance companies, hard floor coverings, casualty insurance, fire insurance, manufactured gas.

Also, metal fabricating, nonferrous metals, flour milling, motion pictures, office equipment, packaged foods, personal loan companies, printing and publishing, retail trade, shipbuilding, shoes, snuff, soaps, soft drinks, steel, sugar refining, telephone, textiles.

Ten industries are expected to show declines of 10 percent or more: Air transport, auto parts, canned foods, agricultural machinery, industrial machinery, oil, railway equipment, shipping, cane sugar, and vegetable oils. (Earnings increases in 1949 in air transport and machinery are regarded as too good to continue.)

Agriculture Feels It, Too

The sustaining factor in the economy continues to be home-building and automobiles, spiced by the up-and-doing television industry. Thus, whereas nondurable-goods sales are slipping back toward their prewar level, durable goods sales are still increasing (see chart.) The Federal Reserve Board survey of consumer intentions indicates that people still are in the market to buy homes, autos, and electrical appliances throughout 1950 at a rate comparable with 1949—a good augury for the rest of '50.

An upsidownsy pattern also prevails in agriculture. In the first four months of this year, farm cash receipts from marketings were down about 5 percent from last year. But receipts from meat animals were down only 2 percent, primarily because of increased sales. Dairy receipts were likewise off only slightly. But poultry and egg income is estimated off 20 percent, because of sharp price drops.

In crops, lower prices and reduced marketings cut income from wheat, cotton, and oil-bearing crops 15 percent. In corn, a bulge in sales offset lower prices. And because of higher prices and larger marketings, tobacco farmers are about 15 percent better off than a year ago. Fruit growers' receipts are up still higher—about 25 percent.

Thus, over-all farm readjustment continues. Farm marketings this year, including Government payments, will probably be around 25 billion dollars, which would compare with $27,500,000,000 in 1949 and the postwar peak of $30,800,000,000 in 1948. Such a drop—19 percent in two years—seems severe. But the farmer in 1947 and 1948 was on top of an unprecedented boom. Prices were high, crops large. That boom could not go on forever either. Nor does it have to for the farmer to fare well.

Loan Firm Nets $5.17 a Share In 1st Quarter

By S. Oliver Goodman

Lincoln Service Corp. set new records in gross and net income for the first quarter, President Charles Delmar reported yesterday.

Delmar

Net of the small-loan firm, whose headquarters are in Washington, rose to $179,231 in the three months ended March 31, equal to $5.17 a common share. This compared with $130,455 or $3.72 a share in the same 1949 period.

Operating income totaled $555,896, against $413,478 last year. Expenses, including provision for Federal income tax, amounted to $361,923 as compared with $272,695 last year.

Following payment of regular preferred and common dividends, earned surplus advanced to $1,226,782 as of March 31, against $830,441 last year, Delmar said.

NEARING GOAL: Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. has completed the best first quarter in its entire history, President William Montgomery reported yesterday. Production of new life insurance totaled $35,591,000, an increase of 23 percent over the same 1949 period. Total policies in force aggregated $978,600,000 and the company expects to reach its objective of a billion dollars by July, the goal set by Acacia field men in honor of Montgomery.

SALES CONGRESS: E. J. Moorhead, executive vice president of the U. S. Life Insurance Co., will be among the five leading speakers at the all-day Sales Congress Thursday in the Shoreham Hotel. The event, sponsored by the District of Columbia and Baltimore Life Underwriters Associations, will include talks by experts on new techniques of selling life insurance. General chairman in charge of arrangements is McKey Smith of Washington, and vice chairman is John C. Dorohoe of Baltimore.

READY IN JUNE: Officers of the Bank of Commerce & Savings said yesterday that construction of the new branch at Fourth and Rhode Island ave., ne., is rapidly nearing completion. They hope that it will be ready for business sometime in June. One of the features will be a "drive-in window" for motorists. In design and construction, the building will follow the pattern of the bank's Brightwood Branch, which was completed last June.

ODD LOTS: Capital Airlines reported yesterday that it almost doubled revenues from special charter flights in the first quarter of this year. The revenues from such traffic totaled $163,682 compared with $90,476 in the 1949 quarter . . . Thomas N. Leef, a general partner in Fefris & Company, members of the New York and Washington Stock Exchanges, has been elected president of the Washington Round Table . . . The Washington Chapter of the National Office Management Association will hold a dinner meeting at the Dodge Hotel on Tuesday.

SPEAKER: LeRoy A. Petersen, president of Otis Elevator Co., will address members of the Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, at their monthly meeting Wednesday in the Lee House.

EARNINGS: The Bell System yesterday reported net income of $72,902,778 applicable to American Telephone & Telegraph Co. stock, or $2.80 a share, for the three months ended February 28. Total net income for the system was $75,349,375, with $2,446,597 applicable to minority interests. Net income for the coresponding quarter last year was $45,673,417 for the system, with $44,249,884 or $1.89 a share applicable to A. T. & T. stock and $1,423,533 applicable to minority interests.

Bank of America To Increase Capital

Los Angeles, April 15 (AP).—The Bank of America proposed today to sell its shareholders 3,412,684 additional shares of common stock, thereby cutting a 29-million-dollar melon for them.

President L. M. Giannini, after a directors' meeting here, announced that the proposal to issue to all present shareholders rights to subscribe for a new common at a preferential price of $20 will be placed before the shareholders at a special meeting in San Francisco May 2.

Recent quotation on the stock is about $28.50 a share and on this basis, the announcement said, the rights would be worth about 29 million dollars to the shareholders of record May 11. They would have an opportunity to buy the 3,412,684 new shares on the basis of one new for each six shares owned. The rights would expire June 1, 1950.

The new share would round out the number of common outstanding to 24 million and would increase the capital funds of the bank to a figure in excess of 380 million dollars. Exclusive of the reserve for possible loan losses of 45 million dollars, Giannini said the total capital funds and reserves of the bank are at a new high and will exceed those of any other bank by approximately 50 million dollars.

Brick House on 25 Acres
This substantial Virginia home was built over 100 yrs. ago with the characteristic high ceilings and thick brick walls. It is in excellent condition today and has 5 bedrooms, 2 baths, stoker heat, and spacious porches. It is surrounded by 25 acres of fertile land and looks out over prosperous farming country. For the horse lover there is a nearly-new cinder block stable with running water in each of the 4 boxstalls. It is within 40 minutes easy drive of Washington, and the price of $35,000 is less than the replacement value of the house alone. Terms.

HE DIDN'T SLEEP
in this home. It is too new and modern. We're talking about George Washington, but he did live close by. It's a lovely 3-bedroom brick rambler on a ½ acre of ground. It has a full basement where you could put a deep freeze and keep all of your present food fresh from the garden, plus all the fish you could catch from the Potomac which is only a stone's row away. The fish are biting good now, so let's take a look today. Approved GI at $14,950. Fine neighborhood for children.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, APRIL 16, 1950

Stage Set for 59th DAR Congress; Triennial Election Interest Mounts

By Nicha Souré

THE EYES of 167,000 Daughters of the American Revolution will be focused on Washington this week.

Chief reason for this interest is the triennial election of national officers which will be held during ths fifty-ninth Continental Congress of the Daughters opening Monday. Four thousand delegates and alternates will cast ballots.

Predicting the Thursday night results would be impossible. Candidates for president general for the next three years, each heading a complete Slate, are Mrs. Edwin Stanton Lammers of Texas and Mrs. James B. Patton of Ohio. The contest promises to be one of the most spirited in DAR history and one of the closest in many a DAR moon.

Aside from the politicking which is an integral part of national elections, the Daughters will take time out to be proud "mamas." Their collective 2-year-old offspring is the new administration building which will be dedicated on Tuesday.

With "achievement" as the keynote of the Congress, the DAR can point with justifiable pride to the new building. Two years ago, the DAR Congress voted to raise $900,000 for the erection of the last building on the DAR site and for the remodeling of Memorial Continental Hall.

Building Begun at Once

IN LESS than two months after the resolution was passed, the new building was begun. Last year at the annual Congress, the cornerstone was laid and this year the new administration building, completed and furnished, will be dedicated.

An interesting sidelight to the DAR building program is the important roles two Indiana president-generals have played. It was during Mrs. Charles Fairbanks' administration that the DAR site was purchased and Memorial Continental Hall begun.

The present president general, Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, another Hoosier, saw the beginning and completion of the last building on the DAR site in her administration.

On the last lap of their fund-raising campaign, the Daughters will buckle down to business and try to clear up the administration building slate. During every session there will be a drive to add more money to the fund. A "building-o-meter" on the stage will tabulate funds raised and on the honor roll will be placed the names of States and chapters which have completed their quota.

Cost May Top Million

THE COMMITTEE has estimated that a $5.50 pledge from each of the DAR members would wind up the campaign. On March 31, the Daughters had received $657,815.35 with an approximate $250,000 yet to be raised. However, costs of the new building may well exceed the million-dollar mark.

An extra boost in raising the money will be the foregoing of big receptions for the national officers candidates and of floral corsages. Following last year's example, Mrs. O'Byrne has asked for "greenback corsages" which could be turned over to the building fund at the end of the Congress.

In years past, candidates for president general have been honor guests at gala receptions where friends and foes alike could come for a friendly get-together with some politicking on the side.

Funds for these receptions were raised by private means, but this year this event, too, has been given up in favor of the building fund economy. It is the hope of the Congress that this money will be sidetracked into the new administration building.

Voting Hall Is New

ALTHOUGH the entire building will serve as material proof of the Congress' theme, "achievement," the voting hall on the ground floor probably will be the apple of the Daughters' eyes.

Named for the present president general, O'Byrne Voting Hall will be used for the first time on Thursday. Twenty-five booths line both sides of the hall which has both a C st. and D st. entrance.

For the privilege of voting in comfort, the patriotic group can thank Miss Katherine Matthies, the third vice president general from Connecticut.

As chairman of the tellers committee in years past, Miss Matthies knew full well the long hours spent in voting and counting votes. Miss Matthies gave the largest single contribution to the building fund, $30,000, for the voting hall.

In these well-lighted comfortable booths, the DARlings will cast their votes for the Lammers ticket or a combination of both, and for 7 of the 10 candidates for vice presidents generals.

In DAR elections, candidates win high offices through two means; their previous DAR records of achievements and their personalities.

Both Served Long

BOTH CANDIDATES for president general have long records of DAR service and both have served as members of O'Byrne's cabinet. Mrs. Lammers was first to enter the election field, having announced her candidacy at the close of the 1949 Congress.

As a member of the Children of the American Revolution and the DAR, Mrs. Lammers has close to a lifetime record in patriotic organizations.

A member of the Jane Douglas Chapter in Dallas of which her mother is a charter member, Mrs. Lammers served as committee chairman, curator and regent and is now an honorary regent of the Jane Douglas Chapter and past president of the Chapter Regent's Club.

In Texas State DAR work, Mrs. Lammers was treasurer, acting recording secretary, parliamentarian, State regent and honorary State regent. Her State committees' activities included chairmanship of national defense, Valley Forge Memorial Bell Tower, finance, Texas George Washington Monument, adviser of Texas Room redecoration and a member of the DAR good citizenship pilgrimage committee. She has been treasurer, vice president and president of the State Officers Club.

Nationally, she has served as vice president general, national chairman of the junior American citizens committee and a member of the resolutions committee. She is at present a member of the executive committee and national vice chairman of the building promotion committee and is concluding a three-year term as recording secretary general. As recording secretary general she revised and edited the pamphlet "What the Daughters Do." She holds membership in the National Officers Club and National Chairmen's Association.

Mrs. James B. Patton, the other president general candidate, has served for the past three years as first vice president general. She received the largest number of votes cast for any candidate for cabinet office in April, 1947.

As first vice president general, Mrs. Patton edited the 1948 handbook. During the past three years she has attended every meeting of the national board and the executive committee and on occasion has represented the president general.

With 40 years of DAR membership behind her, Mrs. Patton has served as State regent of the Ohio State Society, DAR, from 1944 to 1947. Of her 10 years on the State DAR executive board of Ohio, 4 were as State librarian. She also has served as State vice regent and State chairman of national defense.

Mrs. Patton served as second vice regent and first vice regent of her Columbus chapter and later became regent of the chapter with 500 members.

She is honorary State regent, DAR, a national vice chairman of membership and a former member of the Tammassee Advisory Board for the DAR School at Tammassee, S. C. For a number of years she has been a CAR promoter. During her residency in New Jersey she became an associate member of the Orange Mountain Chapter at Orange, N. J.

The DAR stage is set. The Thursday night performance will tell who will be the star for the next three years.

'Caution and Care' Paid Off for DAR Head

By Sonia Stein

"I WILL proceed with caution and care," said Mrs. Roscoe C. O. Byrne when she took office as president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution three years ago.

Today, about to relinquish her shepherding job, Mrs. O'Byrne can look back on a term of office noted for its tranquillity, good public relations and material accomplishment. Caution and care have paid off.

Of her accomplishments, Mrs. O'Byrne is proudest of the new administration building at 1720 D st., nw—a $900,000 project which will be dedicated Tuesday at 3 p. m. The building, an extension of the old administration building which has been slicked up with paint and polish to match the new construction, is two thirds paid for, and Mrs. O'Byrne hopes that by the time the annual Congress is over Friday night, every penny needed will have been pledged. "We hope to leave only the mechanics of collecting to the incoming administration," she explained.

Brought Shower of Dollars

IT WAS Mrs. O'Byrne who brought a shower of dollars into the coffers last year by suggesting that Congress delegates —the size of whose corsages had previously been legendary—confine themselves to one orchid or less and wear instead a lavish display of greenbacks which could be "discarded" into the fund at the end of the session.

The delegates—or rather, their chapters, which have always supplied the floral decorations—responded enthusiastically, producing lovely corsages smelling sweetly of fresh printers ink. Mrs. O'Byrne was showered with colonial bouquets and leis of crisp, fresh bank notes.

One delegation from New York State brought a huge batch of fresh new bills with them, for fear they couldn't obtain any in Washington during the weekend. The money was tucked into a money belt and then into the girdle of one of the delegates for safety's sake on the trip.

By the time this batch of bills was pleated, fluted, twisted and rolled into the semblance of flowers, they made such a sizable package that the delegates doubted whether the hotel management would deposit it in the space reserved for guests' valuables. So they popped their greenbacks into a suitcase and popped the suitcase into bed with one of the delegates for overnight security.

The enthusiasm with which members everywhere have joined in the project pleases Mrs. O'Byrne very much. "The new building and remodelling of Memorial Hall was achieved entirely through small contributions. The largest was $30,000 and most of the gifts were much smaller," she said.

MRS. ROSCOE C. O'BYRNE
. . . a "building" administration

"I'm very anxious that every member contribute something—no matter how little—to the building fund before we have finished. Every member should share in building her headquarters," added the soft-spoken Mrs. O'Byrne.

Greenbacks in Style Again

GREENBACK corsages will be worn again this year and Mrs. O'Byrne has already received from the Maryland State DAR a colonial bouquet made of clipped blue and white ribbon—the insignia of the president general—worn by Mrs. Henry M. Roberts, jr. of Maryland when she was head of the group. And to this bouquet is attached 200 silky white ribbons, each bearing the name of a chapter or an individual in Maryland who is contributing $1 to the building fund. Mrs. O'Byrne has promised to wear at least one of two corsages, similarly made, during the current Congress.

Not all of the DAR money has gone into building. More than $108,000 was contributed in the past year to the 12 elementary schools and colleges on the DAR's approved list. These schools, located in underprivileged areas where there are no public school facilities, are given funds for scholarships if they measure up to certain standards of teaching and give sufficient civic training.

To Mrs. O'Byrne, who was once a teacher, this side of the organization's work is very important.

Getting the president general's job done isn't easy these days. "It's a big business, this organization," Mrs. O'Byrne says and she will be happy to turn over its responsibility to someone else at the end of the week and go home to "rest and read and rest and rest."

Remembers Harder Job

BUT in spite of all this hard work, Mrs. O'Byrne said the presidency was never as hard as the job she once had as head of the DAR Good Pilgrimages for three years. Prior to the war, the DAR brought 49 girls —selected as outstanding citizens—to Washington for three days every spring. They traveled here with delegates en route to the Congress, but they customarily went home by themselves, and Mrs. O'Byrne could never rest comfortably until she'd been assured all 49 were safely home. Nowadays, the girls are given $100 bonds to use for their education or however they like.

Nicknamed "Sphinx" because she maintained a poker-face through executive sessions in the days before she was president general, and then gave her carefully considered opinion, Mrs. O'Byrne is not given to "sounding off."

"We do not enter into controversies. No opinions are given on party politics or religion," she said, explaining the DAR position.

However, neither she nor the DAR are given to backing down. For example, the organization makes a determined effort to see that any State legislature contemplating a vote of approval for world government has the facts, as the DAR sees them, laid before it.

The DAR has, during Mrs. O'Byrne's administration, taken strong stands. Mrs. O'Byrne herself spoke recently on the necessity for keeping this country armed, and said that there is a necessity for manufacturing the H-bomb as a protective measure, although she believes it should never be used. "It is easier to be prepared and never use it than to be unprepared and need it," said the head of this group of women whose ancestors fought for freedom.

Mrs. O'Byrne, who regards her own administration as a "building" administration because of the enormous job of finishing the new building in less than two years time, hopes that the organization will also continue to build in the sense of membership.

Because the DAR loses about 2000 members a year through death, there is a need to replace members as well as to add additional ones, Mrs. O'Byrne points out. But she feels confident that the organization is needed more than ever in these critical times, and that it will grow and thrive.

Martha Ryan Becomes Bride Of Lieut. Allen

Miss Martha Genevieve Ryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Joseph Ryan, and Lieut. Walter Gordon Allen, son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frank A. Allen, jr., were married yesterday at 10 a. m. in St. Ann's Church. The Very Rev. Hubert Welsh, O. P., cousin of the bride, officiated at the ceremony.

The bride wore a bouffant gown of white dotted swiss with an illusion veil and Chantilly lace headpiece. She carried white lilacs.

The attendants, all in white organdy with matching bonnets, were Mrs. Joseph Frederick Hughes Cutrona of West Point, N. Y., sister of the bride; Mrs. John Leveroni of Boston, Miss Mary Dorothea Allen, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Patricia Leibell.

Alfred A. Delery of Cambridge, Mass., was best man, and ushers included Lieut. Erwin R. Brigham, Williamsburg, Va.; Lieut. Ernest S. Ferguson, Fort Meade, Md., and John H. Kauffmann of Washington.

After a wedding trip to the Poconos the couple will live in nearby Virginia.

Th bride is a graduate of Immaculate Seminary and Georgetown Visitation Junior College. She studied dramatics at Catholic University.

Lieutenant Allen is a graduate of The Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., and from the United States Military Academy, class of 1945. He served three years overseas.

Miss Wolberg, Francis Coffey Are Married

Miss Marion Elizabeth Wolberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Harry Wolberg, became the bride of Francis Alexander Coffey, son of Mrs. Margaret Dawson Coffey and the late Alexander Coffey of Waterford, Ireland, yesterday at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart. Mr. Coffey is third secretary at the Irish Embassy.

The Right Rev. Msgr. H. Louis Motry, dean of canon law at the Catholic University, officiated at the nuptial mass.

The bride wore a gown of ice blue imported chantilly lace and satin. The tight-fitting bodice and extended panel of satin were joined to a full lace skirt, which swept into a court train. The double bertha of lace formed an off-the-shoulder neckline. Her full-length veil of illusion fell from a cap of chantilly lace, and she carried white orchids and lilies-of-the valley.

Miss Jean Wolberg, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Julia Neef, of Tampa, Fla.; and three cousins of the bride: Dr. Audrey Brown and Miss Eileen Brown, both of Long Island, N. Y., and Miss Laurice Brown of New York City.

The First Secretary of the Irish Embassy, Eamon Kennedy, was best man. Ushers were Sean Hayden, Aedan O'Beirne, Martin Daly and Hugh McCann. Six-year-old Nicholas Marks, son of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Marks of this city, served as ring-bearer.

A reception was held at the Columbia Country Club for 400 guests. Sidney and his orchestra played. The guests were the Ambassador of Ireland and Mrs. Hearne, and Mrs. Margaret Dawson Coffey, mother of the bridegroom, who had flown from Ireland to participate in the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of Trinity College and Catholic University. She also attended Dumbarton College. She is now with the State Department.

The bridegroom graduated from Waterford Park College and was associated with the Irish government in Dublin before entering the diplomatic service.

After an extended trip through the Middle Atlantic States, the couple will make their home at Alban Towers.

Joanne Alvord Marries Ensign In Cathedral

THE Washington Cathedral was the setting for the wedding yesterday of Miss Joanne Alvord, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Chapman Alvord, and Ensign Henry Remsen, son of Mrs. Thomas Vaille Sproull of Belfast, Me., and William Remsen of Newtown, Conn. Canon Theodore O. Wedel officiated at the ceremony which was followed by a reception at the Sulgrave Club.

The bride's gown was of white lace over satin with a veil of illusion held by a coronet of seed pearls. She carried white lilacs, lilies of the valley and orchids.

Mrs. William R. Loweth of New Rochelle, N. Y., was matron of honor and other attendants were Mrs. Ellsworth C. Alvord, jr., Mrs. Darwin Curtis, Miss Marian John, all of Washington; Mrs. William Buell of Princeton, N. J., and Miss Josephine Bernardin of Andover, Mass. Charles Remsen, Brooklyn, N. Y., was his brother's best man. Ushers included Dr. Ellsworth C. Alvord, jr., and Robert W. Alvord, brothers of the bride; William R. Loweth, Edward Rothrock, Morey Bell, and Darwin Curtis of Washington, Ensign Edward A. McManus, Detroit, and Ensign James C. Day, Nashville, Tenn.

After a wedding trip the couple will go to Carlisle, Pa., where the bridegroom is instructor of the Armed Forces School of Information. The bride is a graduate of National Cathedral School and Vassar College. She is a provisional member of the Washington Junior League.

Ensign Remsen attended Phillips Academy and was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1948.

Party Arranged For Co-Authors Of New Novel

Mrs. Smith Mayo, Meredith Johnson and Frank H. Colley of Chequire House, 202 King st., Alexandria, have issued invitations to an autographing party for Jay and Audrey Walz, authors of the new novel "The Bizarre Sisters," on Saturday, from 4:30 to 7 p. m.

Mrs. Mayo will be assisted by Mrs. Patrick Hayes, Mrs. Martin Bennett, Mrs. Richard Bales, Mrs. Thomas B. Mechling and Mrs. Henry H. Fowler.

Mrs. Walz is the mystery novelist Francis Bonnamy. Mr. Walz, formerly with The Washington Post, is now with the local bureau of the New York Times.

Mrs. Dewey Is Married to Mr. Pierrepont

St. Matthews Cathedral was the scene of the marriage yesterday afternoon of Mrs. A. Peter Dewey and John Pierrepont of New York. The Rev. Gregory Borgstedt of Portsmouth Priory, R. I., officiated at the ceremony. A reception followed at the 1925 F st. Club.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Joseph I. Weller of Washington. Mr. Pierrepont is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rutherfurd Stuyvesant Pierrepont of Far Hills, N. J.

Gown of Taffeta

George Fulford gave his sister-in-law in marriage. She was costumed in an afternoon frock of dusty blue taffeta with a short veil falling from a headband of the same fabric. She carried lilies of the valley. The bride's attendants were her daughter, Miss Nancy Dewey; her niece, Miss Ariane Dewey, and the bridegroom's niece, Miss Polly Pierrepont.

Rutherfurd S. Pierrepoint, jr., of Old Westbury, Long Island, served his brother as best man. Ushers included Sargent Schriver of Chicago and New York, and Pennington Whitehead of New York.

Widow of Colonel

On return from their honeymoon the couple will be at home in Far Hills and New York City.

The bride is the widow of Lieut. Col. A. Peter Dewey, who was killed in 1945 in Indo-China while serving with the OSS. She is the granddaughter of the late Dr. Paul Brandon Barringer, former chairman of the faculty at the University of Virginia, and the late Mrs. Barringer.

A member of the Junior League, Mrs. Pierrepont was graduated from Madeira School. The bridegroom, a former Navy lieutenant, is a graduate of Yale University. He is a member of the Racquet and Tennis Club and of the Brook Club of New York City.

Tau Beta Phi Board Will Meet Monday

The national board of Tau Beta Phi Sorority will meet Monday at 8:30 p. m. in the Monroe Room of the Willard Hotel. The national president, Mrs. Lillian T. Scruggs, will preside.

A meeting of the convention committee has also been called for 7:30 p. m. on Monday at the above location. Mrs. Marjorie M. Kettles is chairman of the annual convention, which is to be held at the Vanderbilt Hotel, New York City, June 16-8.

Women's Press Club Skit Predicts:

Truman Still the Boss in Heaven—But GOP Gets the Girl!

By Lucia Brown

THOUGH true to the Democratic Party in her fashion, the first lady candidate for Vice President decided to marry a Republican last night.

It all happened in skits—a series titled "Will the Lady Yield?"—at the Women's National Press Club's annual dinner and stunt party at Hotel Statler.

President Harry S. Truman was there to study problems facing the feminine statesman and—after the stunt show—to present the Club's Achievement Awards to six outstanding American women. Also attending were Mrs. Truman and scores of other Capital notables.

The opening skit found the distressed candidate consulting a psychiatrist because she was in love with a Republican. Subsequent "dream sequences" lampooned the Washington scene, helped the lady mend her split personality.

Susan B. Speaks Up

IN ONE vision of the Capitol, she found her own grandmother chatting with the statues of Lucretia Mott, Susan B. Anthony, and Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

"There's a young lady now, who looks like you, running for Vice President of the United States," said Susan.

"Vice President?", answered Grandma, "Why ain't she running for President?"

The next scene showed the candidate in "Heaven," with the President presiding over the Welfare State.

"But, Harry," she asked, "with everything so wonderful, what have we got left—I mean, to harp about?"

"Lady, you don't know how easy that is," replied the President, handing her a harp. "The Government pays for the lessons!"

True, in Her Fashion

BETWEEN dreams, the heroine told her psychiatrist the problems of a woman politician. To the tune of "I'll Be True to You, Darling, in My Fashion," she sang:

"If a guy like John McShain
Sends me diamonds in a chain
When a contract bears his name,
What must I do?"
"When the handsome Howard Hughes
Offers me his plane to use
Surely I just can't refuse
And cry 'nay, nay'
For I'm always true to my party in
My fashion, yes, I must be true to
My party in my way."

In the last dream of all, the candidate encountered the census taker who told her a surplus of a million women may be revealed by the 1950 nose count.

"Out of my way!", she cried. "Where are you going?", asked the census taker in alarm.

"Where do you think? To get my man!", she called as she disappeared. "What Vice President wants to be distributed as surplus?"

All Ends Happily

IN THE final scene, a chorus sang "Husbands Are a Gal's Best Friend." All ended happily between Democrats and Republicans when the candidate told the President that she was getting "her man and her job, too."

As the chorus entered, the President asked: "But do these strangers all belong in Heaven?"

"Your Welfare State is for everybody," she said. "Don't you remember, Harry?"

"That's right," the President replied. "Let them all in! We'll charge the Republicans $100 a plate, and let the Democrats bring their own box lunches."

The presidential role in the skits was taken by Frieda Wyandt Everett, whose representation of Mr. Truman at the stunt party has become a tradition in the past few years. Hope Ridings Miller was the "Candid Candidate" and her psychiatrist was Mary Pauline Perry. Doris Fleeson gave the introduction.

Guests at Party

CHIEF JUSTICE AND MRS. FRED VINSON were among those witnessing the skits at last night's dinner. Also present were: the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, the Norwegian Minister, and Mme. de Morgenstierne; Miss Margaret Truman; William E. Boyle, chairman of the Democratic National Committee; Guy Gabrielson, chairman of the Republican National Committee; Watson Davis, director of Science Service, and Mrs. Davis.

Mrs. Kee Fulfills Objective

Wilson Hospital Library's Section To Be Presented

By Marie McNair

PROBABLY no other library in the country can boast the number of autographed volumes on the shelves of the new building at Fishersville, Va. The books were obtained through the efforts of Mrs. John Kee, wife of the Representative from West Virginia, and chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The first section of the library will be formally presented Monday.

It was Mrs. Kee, visiting the Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center at Fishersville, who discovered the center had no library, and no funds to provide one. The project bearing the late President's name was once the Woodrow Wilson Army General Hospital. Now the State of Virginia is prepared to look after the education and rehabilitation of physically afflicted civilians of all ages. With funds from State and Federal treasuries.

Trumans Send Books

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Truman, and Margaret, among the first to contribute to the library, have sent two autographed volumes —"John C. Calhoun" by Charles M. Wiltse, and "Lincoln Finds a General" by Kenneth P. Williams.

Vice President Barkley has autographed Gen. Claire Chennault's "Way of a Fighter" and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt graciously put her signature on her own book, "This I Remember." "Crusade in Europe," with the author's inscription has come from General Eisenhower, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's "My Memoir" has a special place on the shelves in the library center bearing her husband's name.

Other contributors are former Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, with Mr. Hull's memoirs; Eric Johnston's book, "We're All In It;" Marquis Childs' two copies of his work, "Sweden—The Middle Way."

Presentation Arranged

MRS. MANSFIELD NEELY'S contribution was an autographed copy of "My Aunt Louisa and Woodrow Wilson." Three rare books came from Mrs. Stanley Woodward, and Representative Frances Bolton contributed an autographed volume dedicated to her husband, the late Representative Chester Bolton.

Mrs. Kee herself started the ball rolling with 500 books of her own. On Monday she and Representative Kee will formally present the first section of the library to officials of the center. Following the ceremony the Kees and their daughter, Frances, will give a tea for the members and staff and students of the center.

Mrs. Grady Is Feted

THE "Captains and the Kings" have departed. Chile's President and First Lady, have moved on to New York's greener pasture, but entertaining goes on for Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of our Ambassador to Greece.

Yesterday she was guest of honor at a luncheon in the Senate Dining Room given by the four Senators' wives who visited Athens with their husbands last year and were entertained by Mrs. Grady at the embassy. Hostesses were Mrs. Dennis Chevez, Mrs. John J. McClellan, Mrs. Burnet Maybank and Mrs. John C. Stennis.

Mrs. Alben Barkley was in the group of guests. Others included Mrs. Perle Mesta, Minister to Luxembourg; Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. Tom Connally, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Harvey Kilgore, Mrs. Spessard Holland, Mrs. Robert Kerr, Mrs. Lydon Johnson.

Also, Mrs. James Webb, Miss Minerva Bernardino, Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. John Davies, daughter of the guest of honor; Mrs. Lorton Sims, Mrs. Ellen Woodward, Mrs. Max Gardner and Mrs. Thomas Cajigas.

A cocktail party for Mrs. Grady yesterday was given by Lieut. Col. Albert L. Cox, jr., USAF, at Anderson House, where members of the Society of Cincinnati, of which Colonel Cox is one, reside.

Mary Warren Engaged

At a tea yesterday at their home Col. and Mrs. Ross Warren announced the engagement of their daughter, Mary Lowell, to James Mitchell Smith, son of Mrs. Benjamin Aiken of Houston, Tex., and the late James Mitchell Smith.

Both Miss Warren and her fiance are in their senior year at George Washington University. The bride-elect, a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority, was graduated from Chevy Chase Junior College. Mr. Smith is a Navy veteran and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Miss Fooks, Mr. Noble Engaged

Mrs. Burleigh C. Fooks of Annapolis, Md., has announced the engagement of her dauhgter, Eleanor Burwell, to Midshipman Thomas Iglehart Noble, son of Rear Admiral (retired) Kenneth H. Noble, USN, and Mrs. Noble of Washington and Crownsville, Md.

The announcement was made at a cocktail party given by Comdr. and Mrs. Theodore A. Torgesen of Annapolis, cousins of Miss Fooks.

Midshipman Noble will be graduated in June from the United States Naval Academy. The wedding is planned for early fall.

Miss Guy To Be Wed

Lieut. Comdr. Joseph P. Guy, United States Coast Guard (retired) and Mrs. Guy of Silver Spring, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Agnes, to William Thomas Stevenson of New York City.

Miss Guy was graduated from Immaculata Conception Academy. Her fiance, a graduate of Fordham University, attends Benjamin Franklin University.

Miss Pratt, Lieut. Mayer to Wed

Lieut. Col. Harold B. Pratt, USMC (retired), and Mrs. Pratt of Washington and Chocorua, N. H., announce the engagement of their daughter, Elisabeth to Lieut. (j. g.) William S Mayer, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Mayer of New York City. Miss Pratt, a graduate of Wellesley College, is employed in the Washington Branch of the International Labor Office. Her fiance is stationed at the Navy General Line School, Monterey, Calif. He attended Darmouth College and George Washington University.

Miss Taylor Engaged

Mrs. Anna Mae Taylor announces the engagement of her daughter, Margaret Anne, to Ernest Paul Bertolini, son of Mrs. Madeline Bertolini, all of Washington.

Mrs. Bertolini, a Marine Corps veteran, attended George Washton University.

Man Worries Because His Daughter Has Dates With Various Lads While Her Favorite Beau Is Off at College; Is She Being Honorable

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Kindly advise a worried father. Last year my daughter Jane met a veteran eight years her senior. I shall call him James. They dated frequently and within three months decided to keep steady company; but as the young man attends college across the country he is away much of the time. He will graduate two years hence.

My daughter was proud of her steady beau and told her friends about the arrangement. Things were going nicely until she started to become moody. She had been staying home evenings after James had returned to college, but finally one night she agreed to go out with an old boy friend. That was just the beginning. She has been going out almost every night since, with various lads.

Lecture Leads to Bitter Dispute

I HAVE TOLD her she isn't playing fair and square with James, who knows nothing of these dating activities and who is sweating it out in college meanwhile, thinking her to be loyal and true. In reply she asked, how does she know he isn't having dates at college? The discussion ended up in bitter dispute.

I contend that Jane should either write James that she is going out with different boys, or she should stop going out with them. She retorts that she detests the thought of sitting home evenings for the next two years, while waiting for James to finish college. He sees Jane only during the summer and on holidays.

What do you think of our conflicting views? Is it fair of her to keep her dating a secret? Shouldn't James know? Can she really be in love with James, as she says she is, if she refuses to tell him this? Please answer soon. F. F.

Father Hasn't Thought Deeply

DEAR F. F.: It seems to me your ideas are completely off the beam of healthy social thinking and sound social practice. Going steady, what does it mean as a teamwork proposition? It certainly isn't a pledge of eternal fidelity. Many a girl has learned that to her sorrow, after pinning her whole hopes of marriage on one date partner, then seeing a newcomer snatch him to the altar.

Going steady is a current arrangement, not necessarily with any future in it. It is a far cry from being engaged. It merely says in effect, "Jane and James prefer each other's company to that of other possibilities hereabout." And with that understanding they rely on each other for dates and ordinarily their friends don't try to break in.

If Jane and James were engaged to be married and the wedding date set for the week immediately following his graduation, say, then Jane and he, if playing "fair and square," would trade candid accounts of their social activities when widely separated.

But even so, if the engagement were to last two years, during which time they'd be apart months at a stretch, Jane as well as James should participate normally in the social life surrounding them in their different locations; and healthy social life for the unmarried certainly includes some dating with the opposite sex.

Nice Men Respect Reserve

SINCE JANE is simply James' best girl but not his fiancee, and since they can't date together most of the time, it is proper and wholesome of her to maintain friendships with other boys in her immediate environment, and it is good manners not to discuss these pursuits with James—unless he asks how she keeps occupied, or unless he seems to think she doesn't or shouldn't have dates in his absence. And in such case she should indicate without going into detail that she stays in circulation and extends the same privilege to him at school.

The average man of good character, good taste and healthy mind doesn't want to be confessor to his girl's dating history. He judges her worth by her conduct in his company, doesn't expect her to be a recluse for his sake, and in fact would dislike the possessive implications of that kind of sacrifice, and respects nice-reserve about self above all in a woman. M. H.

THE longer the christening robe the better. That was the decree of Dame Fashion 150 years ago when this beautifully embroidered robe and cap were made. These garments are part of an extensive exhibit of baptismal costumes now on display at the Smithsonian Institution, and are modeled here by month-old Mary Ellen Ashton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ashton. The dress was a gift to the museum of the Dwight T. Cooke family, and the cap was presented by Miss Margaret A. Simonds

For the First Trip to Church

Full Skirts for Small Fry Typify Old Time Christening Gown Display

By Peggy Preston

MY, MY, how fashions have changed—in christening robes.

Nowadays, the theory is that a girl is never too young to display a well turned ankle. Even three-week old darlings can wear a ballerina-length frock on their christening day and be in the swing of fashion.

But it was not always thus. Time was when yardage counted above all else.

Just how greatly this phase of fashion has modified through the years is pointed up in the exhibit of christening robes on display at the Smithsonian Institution. From it one gathers that 150 years ago, no truly chic infant considered going abroad on her baptismal day clad in anything less than five yards of beautifully embroidered fabric. Today, she settles for a yard or less, and she takes her embroidery in sparing doses.

Gifts from Capital Families

THE EXHIBIT is one of the most recent acquisitions at the Smithsonian. It started out as a collection of rare, old embroidery examples, according to Miss Grace L. Rogers of the textile unit, who is in charge of the display. Several items of infant's wear were included and attracted so much interest that an entire collection has been centered around the christening outfits.

Although still small, the exhibit now almost fills three cases. Most of the garments on display were gifts to the museum of old Washington families.

One, with elbow length sleeves, ruffles on the shoulder and a cobweb of exquisite hand embroidery down the front, was the gift of Mrs. Dwight I. Cooke. A great fan of the handwork and lace spreads out from the neckline, reaching to the bottom of the yard and a half length skirt. The dress was worn by babies of the Cooke family for 150 years before it was presented to the museum.

Voluminous Christening

ANOTHER remarkable garment is a christening cape, 75 years old, which was worn by infants of the Henry Wallace Richardson family. It is made of soft, finely woven pique, now just a bit yellowed with age, and it is a voluminous affair with elbow length, circular collar.

Lace on the cape is much older. Miss Rogers reasons that it was probably cut from some lovely dress of a century or more ago and considered too precious to discard.

Then there is a tiny lace bonnet, the gift of Miss Margaret A. Simonds, and another, just as delicately fashioned, presented by Mrs. Caroline Woolfley Shannon.

Keeping these fragile garments in good condition is one of Miss Rogers' jobs. They are carefully laundered from time to time.

Plastic Starch Aids Preservation

THOSE WHO KEEP such tiny garments in their own family should follow the same procedure if they hope to keep them through the years. After washing they should be lightly starched and ironed, then wrapped in blue tissue paper to keep the white fabric from turning yellow. The new plastic permanent starch, which lasts for from 8 to 14 washings, has yet another advantage. Insects have no taste for it, and the garment has a good chance of survival for that reason.

Christening gowns, such as those in the cases of the Smithsonian are priceless, and even when originally made cost as much as $50. Today, baby may make his first trip to church in the frilliest outfit costing as little as $8.95. On the other hand, if Daddy has the wherewithal, a short, snappy christening gown can cost as much as $60.

Dimitri Wolkinsky

HEMLINES have been shortened considerably in the last century and a half, and modern christening gowns are no exception to the fashion rule. Baby Mary Ellen Ashton is dressed for her christening in a smartly brief frock of fine batiste. Edges of sleeves and skirt are scalloped and trimmed with ruffles of Val lace. Matching petticoat is also ruffles

Tobe Says...

"Suit Look" Smart In Dresses Too

If there is a typical "American" look, it is the "Suit Look." All of us feel so comfortable in suits, and think we look so much better, that we want dresses—at least some of them—to look like suits too.

So the "Suit Look" is the smart look in dresses this spring. It means two-piece dresses with lined jackets that look like suits but have the indefinable soft styling that comes only when a costume is designed by a dressmaker. These may be in wool—as navy serge or checked wools—or better still, in bengaline or ottoman—those useful suit dresses that you can wear all year round. I do!

SLIGHTLY DEAFENED?

THOUSANDS NOW HELPED BY SMALL HEARING AID

People who hear ordinary conversation, but who have difficulty hearing radio and TV, or hearing in church, at meetings, in the movies and other public places do not want to be burdened with cumbersome hearing aids. Thousands of such people are now being helped by a tiny, compact aid designed by Bell Telephone Laboratories and manufactured by Western Electric.

This all-in-one instrument is the smallest ever made by Western Electric, yet amazingly efficient. It can be worn all the time or only when needed. Its small size makes it easy to slip into a handbag or pocket when not in use. It may also be equipped with the new invisible ear mold for additional concealment.

Homemakers, Tackling Renovation Of a House, Seek Advice on How To Paint and Paper the Old Walls

DEAR ANNE:

We have bought a house 9 years old and would like to do the redecorating ourselves. It was originally papered and then a coat of casein paint was applied to the paper. If we paint, do we have to strip off the wallpaper? If we wallpaper it again, can we put it on over the casein paint?

Grace Sundstrom, Washington.

DEAR MRS. S.:

If the casein-type paint was of good quality and the paper adheres firmly to the wall, you can safely paint over it. As a matter of fact, high grade casein paints are sometimes recommended as a base for oil paints.

If, however, the casein paint is flaky or peeling or the wallpaper loose, it wouldn't be a good idea to apply the oil paint over it.

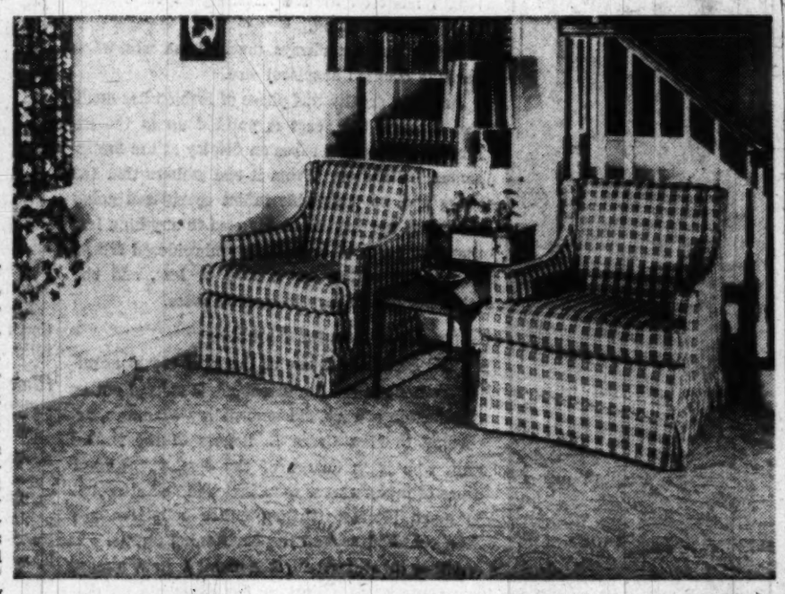
As to wallpapering over the casein paint, that's a little more difficult question to decide. Some paints of this type dry hard enough so that you can satisfactorily paper over them. As a test, wash the wall vigorously with warm water. If the paint tends to dissolve easily, it had better be removed completely before repapering.

You can remove such paint by washing with a brush and a solution of ¾ cup trisodium phosphate and 1 quart of water. However, since this washing will tend to loosen the wallpaper, you may find it better to remove the paper itself by first soaking with hot water, then peeling and scraping it from the wall.

DEAR ANNE:

How do you make a silverfish trap? I have heard such a thing mentioned but haven't been able to find out what it consists of. D. C., Washington.

One way to trap these shadowy little insects is with a small ointment jar and some flour. Use a plain 1-ounce jar, but wrap adhesive tape around the outside so as to give the creatures a foothold for climbing. Put a teaspoonful of white flour in the jar and place it near the source of the insects.



YOU get interesting patterns in rugs these days, even when they're of solid color. This one has two level pile which gives that lovely leaf effect.

They will climb the jar, fall in, and not be able to escape.

DEAR ANNE:

Would you please tell me how to clean dark marble table tops, mostly stained from cocktails being set there? And whether it is possible to remove scratches? L. Z., Silver Spring, Md.

Stains and similar marks can usually be removed from marble with hot water and scratchless scouring powder, followed by an ample rinsing with clean water. Stains that are too deep to be eradicated this way can be taken out by rubbing with a block of pumice stone, using plenty of water.

It's called Quadrille, and is one of the many designs to be shown in the Carpet Fashion Show Monday and Tuesday at Hotel Washington

If such treatment dulls the polished finish, you can restore it by rubbing with putty powder (oxide of tin) and water, applied with a damp felt pad. (A piece of discarded felt hat can be used.) This will also help get rid of minor scratches.

DEAR ANNE:

Is there a service in Washington whereby infant wear can be rented, such as many laundries have now for diapers? F. S., Falls Church.

I haven't been able to locate such a service, F. S., but perhaps some other reader knows about it.

Pi Phi's Will Fete Founders on April 29

Pi Beta Phi Fraternity, pioneer among national women's organizations, will celebrate the eighty-third anniversary of its founding at Monmouth College in 1867, at a luncheon in the Terrace Room at the Shoreham Hotel at 1 p. m. Saturday, April 29. Reservations are being made with Mrs. Herman Davis at Woodley 3138.

Alumnae Clubs of Richmond and Norfolk, Va., and of Wilmington, Dela., have been invited to join Washington Pi Phi's at this year's celebration. The active chapters at George Washington University and Maryland University will be in charge of the program.

The Order of the Golden Arrow, which is composed of Pi Phi's who have been members for 50 years or more, will welcome three new members who will be guests of the Washington Alumnae Club. Also coming as guests of the club are Dr. May L. Keller, president emeritus of the fraternity and dean of Westhampton College of the University of Richmond, and Mrs. Eli Holmick, who assisted at the dedication ceremonies of the Pi Beta Phi Settlement School at Gatlinburg, Tenn., in 1912.

As a local philanthropy the Washington Alumnae Club of Pi Beta Phi recently established a dental fund at a District of Columbia junior high school attended by pupils from an underprivileged section of the city.

Miss Mary K. Lutz, president of the Washington Alumnae, extended an invitation to all members of Pi Beta Phi, residents and visitors alike, to join the Founders' Day celebration.

Miss Lutz has been elected club delegate to the national convention in June, at Lake Jasper, Canada. Also attending from this club will be Mrs. Robert S. Wild, national vice president; Mrs. Ludlow King, Gamma Province president, and Mrs. H. Harrison Lingo, Gamma Province vice president.

Dog's Life? Gordon Bartons Think It's the Best

By Norma Lanum

THE NEWLY married Gordon Bartons were going to be school teachers—or maybe writers even. Young Barton always could reel off a good adventure story without much effort.

But shortly after their wedding day they bought a dog and things haven't been the same since.

That was in 1939. Their new puppy, an English bull, made his home in the couple's one-bedroom third-floor apartment.

That bull puppy—George was his name—opened up an exciting new hobby for the Bartons.

In time their hobby led to an exciting new career as well.

Now the Bartons own one of the outstanding professional kennels in the East, and Gordon Barton has "finished"—or made champions of—more dogs than he can remember. But he and his wife still have a warm place in their memories for George.

Read Books About Dog Psychology

"JUST imagine training a puppy on a third floor," laughs Peggy Barton. "We spent all our time running up and downstairs."

They took special care of that English bull, read lots of books And soon they were going to dog shows and buying more pets.

Three dogs later, the Bartons moved from their third-floor apartment and took a place in Glenelg, Md., where they could raise all the puppies they wanted.

It wasn't until the Bartons had some two dozens dogs of their own—most of them boxers—that they decided to turn their hobby into a business. That is when the Bartons began selling their pups and boarding, training and handling other folks' pets.

Now the Bartons keep over 40 dogs, none of them their own, in the elaborate kennels behind their house near Great Falls.

You might think they would lose some of their affection for animals when dogs became a business instead of a hobby and when there were scores to take care of instead of just their own special favorites.

Dogs Have Whims, Trainers Find

BUT that's not true, maintains Peggy Barton. "Dogs are like babies," she says. "With the first one, you're sometimes overly anxious, overly sentimental about it. After you have several you love them just as much. But you can be more objective, that's all."

Objectivity doesn't mean, however, that the Bartons aren't sympathetic to a client's whim about the care of his own precious puppy. They fed raw carrots regularly to a pedigreed pomeranian because its mistress insisted the pup was "crazy about" this vegetable.

Canine boarders at the Barton kennels get an elegant diet. Their menu includes a pound and a half of meat each day, plus cereals, eggs, buttermilk and even cottage cheese. Occasionally Mrs. Barton brews her special vegetable stew for the dogs.

Children Don't Favor the Pups

THE BARTON children, 6-year-old Margaret and Bobby who is 2, don't pay much attention to the dogs. But they have two Siamese cats which they carry around constantly. However, the little girl loves to go to dog shows to see her daddy leading the canines around and posing them in the center of the ring.

"And we finally taught her not to holler at him during the crucial judging," says Mom.

Gordon Barton has just returned from a tour of the "Southern Circuit" where he handled his clients' dogs for shows throughout the South. Now he's getting the puppies ready for the Old Dominion Kennel Club show next Saturday at the Municipal ballpark in Alexandria.

MARGARET BARTON has an affectionate hug for Baron, one of the outstanding boxers at her daddy's kennels near Great Falls, Va. Though Baron, owned by Keith Merrill, is too old for dog shows now, one of his children or grandchildren inevitably turns up on entry lists throughout the East. Harris & Ewing The boxer, who boards at Gordon Barton's kennels, already has earned its master $15,000, he's produced 12 champions and is the grandfather of 6 other blue ribbon winners

GORDON BARTON keeps an elaborate file on some 45 dogs he boards and trains at his Virginia kennels. Right now he and his wife Peggy are checking the entries of dogs the trainer will handle at the Old Dominion Kennel Club show Saturday at the Municipal ball park in Alexandria, benefiting Children's and Alexandria Hospitals

NEW PUPS from all sections of the country keep coming into the Barton kennels now that the height of dog show season is here. Gordon Barton has just returned from a trip over the "Southern Circuit" where he handled a few dozen dogs at various shows in the South. He's prepping them for Saturday's show

CANINE BOARDERS at the Barton kennels have elegant diets. Plenty of meat, cereal, milk, eggs, and even cottage cheese are included on their menus. And besides that they have regular doses of cod liver oil as well. Mrs. Barton gives this young bull puppy his dose. And see, there's not even a grimace.

PARRY-PHRASING

Look Like an Operetta Pair, And Sure Enough, They Are

By Ellen Buell Parry

THERE'S a couple from that country "down under" living in Washington who look and sing like the hero and heroine in an operetta. Moreover, they've often been an operetta hero and heroine! Romeo and Juliet is one of their specialties.

Wilson (Bill) Ewart is Second Secretary at the Australian Embassy. He's also a professional singer—a baritone. He and his wife Betty met when they were music students in Sydney, Australia, their home town. They have done a great deal of concert and radio work in Australia and New Zealand, although very little since they have been in this country.

Betty belongs to the Billy Tea Club in Washington, a club organized in 1946 and composed of Australian and New Zealand wives, as well as Americans particularly interested in either country.

Mrs. Norman Makin and Lady Berendsen, wives of the Australian and New Zealand ambassadors, have been active in this club; so has Mrs. Nelson Johnson, wife of our former ambassador to Australia.

The club has been entirely social up to now, but the "Billies" have decided to try to raise some money to help Children's Hospital. So, Bill Ewart, assisted by Betty, will give a concert at Pierce Hall, 16th and Harvard Streets, on the evening of April 26.

By the way, the Billy Tea Club derives its name from the "billy can," which is just a big tin can with a handle. But it's a necessity in the life of the people "down under" on a picnic. Their tea is made over a fire in a "billy can."

SPEAKING of Australia, Capt. Ethelbert Watts and his exquisite wife, Betty, will go to Melbourne this summer. Bert will be the new naval attache to the country "down under."

To be decided: Whether daughter Katie, at Madeira School, and son Philip, at Georgetown Foreign Service, will go.

"I HAVE personally invited 600 bachelors to the DAR Pages' Ball at the Mayflower on April 18," Mary-Stuart Price (nickname, "Studie") told me this week. She is assisting Mrs. William A. Disque, chairman of the ball.

BILL AND BETTY EWART
. . . will sing for the "Billies"

Studie is arranging it so no page will get "stuck." She has organized a floor committee to rescue any maiden in distress.

Studie unofficially runs a date bureau in connection with her work as a social consultant for debs here in the Capital. If girls or boys at the last minute find themselves dateless, they are free to call Studie. She will pitch in and do something about it.

Speaking of her debs, she told me, "I always see that they are escorted to every tea dance and ball. I feel it gives a girl a better start if she has a date—even if she sees little of him during the evening—it gives the girl a feeling of security which is important!"

Having been told that all names should be signed in reverse order in Puerto Rico, obliging Carroll Hunter of McLean, Va., Solicitor of the Agriculture Department, registered at the Puerto Rican hotel where he stayed recently as:

Hunter, Carroll
Virginia, McLean

When Carroll received his bill, he found he had been charged for an extra person. The hotel clerk, when shown the error, asked, "Well, how about that Virginia McLean?"

Hawaiian Club Will Sponsor Dance, Pageant

The Capital will have a taste of tropical atmosphere at the Hawaiian dance and pageant to be held in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel on April 26, sponsored by the Washington Chapter of Na Elele o Hawaii (The Messengers of Hawaii) a club recently organized in Washington.

Oscar L. Chapman, Secretary of the Interior, will crown Miss Beverly Farrington, daughter of the Delegate from Hawaii, as queen of the pageant. Miss Farrington's court will include two ladies-in-waiting, Mrs. Nora S. Coleman and Mrs. Luba Desha; four princesses representing the four major Hawaiian Islands, Miss Laida Kreuz, Miss Marion Kreuz, Miss Dawn McGarrow, and Miss Jean McBride; a crown bearer, Arthur Kusumoto, and six Kahili bearers, Charles Dwight, Shay Aurbach, John Desha, John Palmeter, Davis King and Robert Ellis.

Each princess will wear the color of the island she represents. The queen and court will wear colorful native holoku dresses and flower leis and tiaras.

The Washington chapter of Na Elele o Hawaii was organized by students of Hawaii attending schools in this area to encourage the association of students from Hawaii attending schools on the mainland. President of the club is John Palmeter of the University of Maryland School of Law.

MRS. ROBERT TAYLOR ANDREWS was Miss Arrah Minerva Wilson before her marriage yesterday at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. York Lowry Wilson of Washington, formerly of Rock Hill and Bluffton, S. C., and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Davidson Andrews of Montoursville, Pa. Both Mrs. Andrews and her husband are Justice Department attorneys.

Mayflower Group

The Society of Mayflower Descendants in the District of Columbia will meet Tuesday at 8:15 p. m. at the Arts Club, 2017 I st. nw. Visiting Mayflower members attending the DAR Congress will be guests at this meeting. The musical program will be by Mrs. David Kincheloe.

Bethesda Club to Present Show

The Woman's Club of Bethesda will present a "Bethesda Spring Show Festival" with the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce and the Bethesda Merchants on Saturday at Leland Junior High School at 8 p. m. Proceeds will go toward scholarships for Montgomery County Junior College and for the Club's welfare program.

Spring and summer clothes for men, women and children are to be featured. Fashions will be furnished by Gretchen Cole, Claire Dratch, Ladies Specialty Shop, Ray Koontz and Monty's Kiddie Land, and hats worn in the show will be made by Teri Ultman. Merchants will have exhibits in the lobby.

There will be a piano solo by James H. McLain and selections by Robert Guy, baritone, accompanied Mr. McLain. There will also be magic by Ralph H. Mittendorff.

Arlington Quota Club Plans Silver Tea

The recently organized Arlington Quota Club of Arlington has invited the public to attend a silver tea to aid the Hard of Hearing Children's Society, to be held at the Helen Waldron Shop, 2830 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, today, from 2 to 6 p. m.

Several movie shorts with sound and technicolor will be shown and an entire fashion show in technicolor.

Legion Women Aid Church

In accordance with the "Go to to make God an active partner in Church" movement recently the fight for peace."

launched by the American Legion, Mrs. Ethel Wilt, chaplain of the D. C. Legion Auxiliary, has completed arrangements for a program at the Grace Episcopal Church, 1041 Wisconsin ave. nw., at 4 p. m. today.

The Rev. M. M. Perkins, pastor, will conduct this service. Members of the legion and auxiliary are invited. Department and unit color bearers will take part in the flag processional, led by the National Guard of Honor under the direction of Capt. Warren Hilleary.

George Craig, national commander of the legion, has urged all posts and units to take the initiative in "this spiritual crusade

For the past nine years, the Legion Auxiliary has held special programs during April in commemoration of the organization of the Pan American Union. This year, the auxiliary's study groups are concentrating on the science and industries, people and culture of Ecuador.

Especially interested in this study are the members of United States Department of Agriculture unit, with Mrs. Pearl Heagerty as unit Pan American study chairman. As an official salute to Pan American neighbors, a gala dinner has been arranged for Thursday at the Dupont Plaza Hotel, 6:30 p. m.

Bright Babies

Any Little Actors in Your Home?

ACTORS are born, no doubt about it. Most of them simply grow out of it before they get a chance behind the footlights. But this page of pictures from the book "The Baby" (copyright, 1950, by Simon & Schuster, Inc.) ought to prove that all you need is a camera and a heap of patience to film a comedy.

Actors as young as these, however, while by no means "silent" stars, are not too good at ad-libbing. They need a script-writer. Those on this page had professional assistance in that department, but in the contest now being conducted by The Washington Post, Mummy and Daddy are the gag-writers.

Next Sunday, this page will be filled with the first batch of winners among pictures sent in by readers of The Washington Post. For the one judged best, the newspaper will pay $25; for each of the others published, $5.

Awards will be based on both the suitability of the picture and the cleverness of the caption. The picture need not be a new one, but the child must be under 18 months of age when photographed. The contest will continue for several Sundays.

Pictures must come directly from the child's parents or guardian, with written authorization for their publication. Write your name and address on the back of the picture, and enclose postage if you want it returned. Employes of The Washington Post and their families are excluded.

Remember these simple rules: A winsome or amusing picture of a child under 18 months of age; name and address on the back; a written authorization for its publication; enclose postage if you want the picture returned, AND—a "punch-line" to caption the photograph.

Here's your chance to be a film director. Mail entries to:

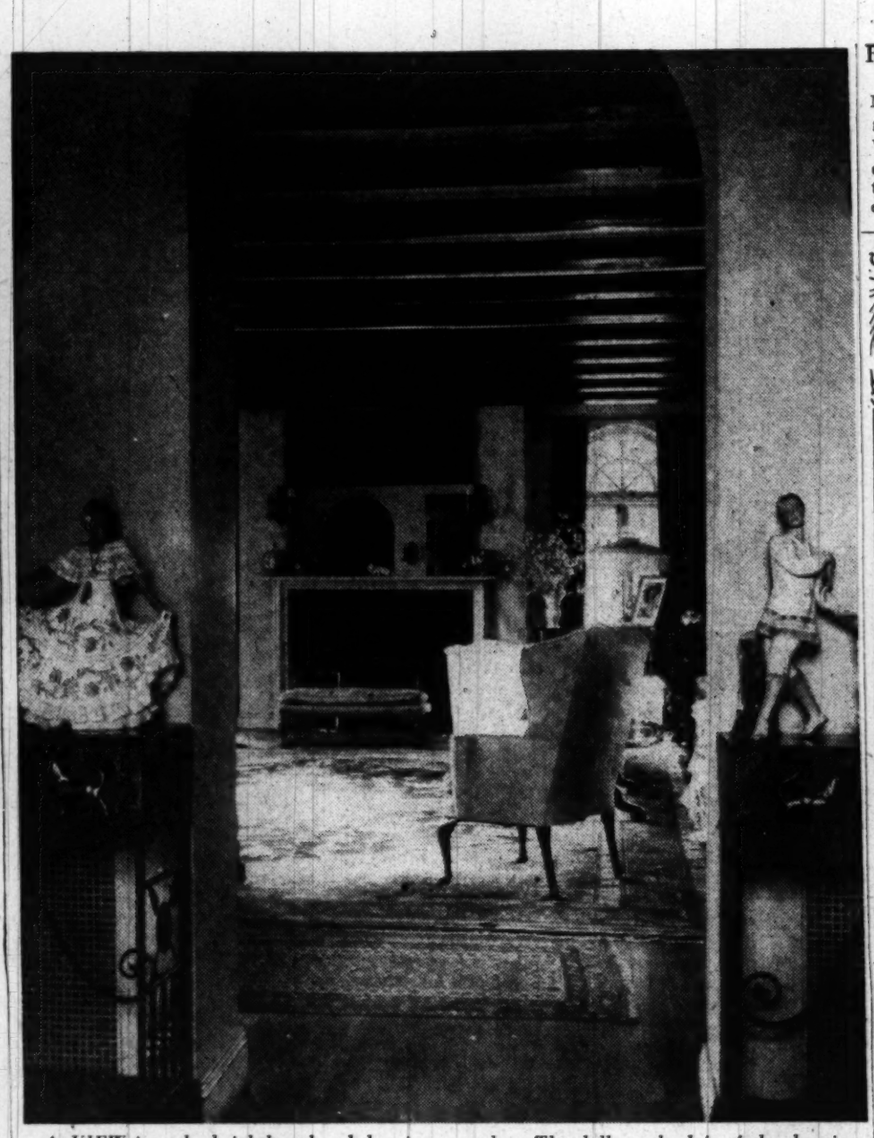
THE new Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Herbruger take just about two minutes to relax after luncheon at the embassy. In another moment the diplomat will be hard at work in the nearby chancery, and Senora de Herbruger will prepare for one of several engagements in a busy day. Golden forsythia fills the window



A VIEW into the brightly colored drawing room of the Panamanian Embassy. One side of the room has a row of French windows which open onto a terrace and woodland garden. The doll on the left of the drawing room entrance is attired in the native pollera costume, while the doll on the right is dancing in the montune, garb of the peasant

Spanish Group Plans Study of Brazil Culture

The White House Spanish Study Group of the Americas is celebrating its anniversary of the transfer to the Pan American Union. For the first time in seven years devoted to Spanish study, the group is now expanding to include in its activities the studies of the culture and literature of Portuguese-speaking Brazil.

The group is celebrating the occasion with a tea at the Pan American Union Monday, April 24, at 4:30 p. m., and will hereafter be called the White House Spanish-Portuguese Study Group of the Americas.

The Brazilian novelist, Miss Carolina Nabuco, sister and official hostess of the Brazilian Ambasador to the United States, will be the guest of honor.

Assisting at the function will be Mrs. Cordell Hull, whose husband was the architect of the good neighbor policy. Generally assisting will be the new Senate study group, Mrs. Spessard Holland, Mrs. Robert S. Kerr, Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, Mrs. Carroll D. Kearns, Mrs. Ken Regan, Mrs William F. Norrell, and Lady Hoyer-Millar. Mrs Clarence Norton Goodwin, under whose direction the movement has developed, will be in charge.

The Voice of America will broadcast the ceremonies.

Hebrew Home Auxiliary to Meet

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Hebrew Home for the Aged will hold its regular meeting on Monday at 1125 Spring rd. nw. Dessert luncheon will be served at 12:30 p. m., followed by the meeting.

Mrs. Joseph Kaminsky will give the opening prayer. Final arrangements are being made for the Minnie Goldsmith Donor Luncheon to be given at the Mayflower Hotel on May 15.

A rummage sale is being conducted at 3033 M st. nw. Members having articles they wish to contribute may call HUdson 3450.

A Bit of Panama

Color and Grace at Embassy

This is the twenty-fourth in a series of stories on embassy homes, hosts and hostesses.

By Elizabeth Maguire

LIKE the country it represents, the embassy of Panama is bright with color, gay as a Spanish dance, and hospitably inclined with grace and good will.

A mass of yellow forsythia against a window gives golden light to a drawing room furnished in soft blue and deep wine. Long windows open up the room on one side, and lead out onto a flagstone terrace surrounded with woodlands of white dogwood.

Senora Estela de Herbruger, wife of the new ambassador of Panama, is of French descent. Her grandparents came over with Count de Lesseps, when work on the Panama Canal was undertaken. She is pretty and young looking, and she is a grandmother of a six-month-old child. Her eldest daughter, the baby's mother, is Mrs. Adalberto Muller, who lives in Panama.

Panama School Closes For Summer

ANOTHER daughter, Doris, age 14, lives in Washington at the embassy. She is not attending school here because her school in Panama closed for summer vacation in January, and she is postponing adjustment to the new rotation of seasons until after summer has passed in her own country.

Another member of the family, Rodolfa F. Herbruger, jr., is a student at Gainesville Military Academy in Gainesville.

Rodolfa F. Herbruger, the Ambassador, is filling his first diplomatic post. He came to Washington in February of this year, and he presented his credentials about a month ago. He studied civil engineering at Santa Clara University in Santa Clara, Calif., and he is now a promnent industrialist. Handsome and intelligent, he and his charming wife make happy additions to diplomatic Washington.

Minute Novelties Brighten Parties

PARTIES at the Panamanian Embassy have the most artistic details imaginable. Tooth picks strung wth minute sausages spike grapefruits, watermelons are scooped hollow, filled with ice chips, olives and celery, and pink satin ribbons adorn upper halves thrown back like lids on jewel boxes. Little cakes called "sighs" disappear before you can bite them, and coffee is served rich and thick.

Like every Panamanian lady, Senora de Herbruger has in her wardrobe the native pollera dress complete with sparking temblequeques for her upswept hair-do. She also has the montuna dress which is worn with straw hats by the peasants. Full skirted, bright with colored designs and trimmed with lace, the polleras are ideal costumes for the dips and swishes of the lively tamborita.

Golden Jewelry Rounds Out Costume

GOLD COMBS, gold and pearl earrings, gold coin necklaces, and gold and coral bracelets almost complete the pollera costume. Only missing object is a little fish, a gold one tied around the neck with a ribbon. The fish is symbolic of plenty as the name "Panama" means "abundance of fish."

In her own country Senora de Herbruger divides her time between her house in Panama City and her finca high in the hills in the center of the isthmus, where she views both the Pacific and the Atlantic. Tropical fruit trees, avacados and grapefruits, grown in the garden, and orchids soft and languid drape themselves around the branches.

Tropical Flowers Brighten Jungle

A TREE called golden shower brightens the darkness of surrounding jungles. The Holy Ghost flower, like a white orchid, grows wild, and orange groves border the finca.

The senora's house in Panama City is built with several rooms wide open to the blue sky, and most of her time is spent outdoors on the terrace. She finds Washington similar to Panama because it is a crossroads of the world and constantly filled with new faces. She has not yet entirely mastered the English language, but she is very "simpatico," and listens so graciously one finds she is delightful to chat with.

Miss Jones to Be Wed

Mrs. Naomi Smith Jones of Arlington Forest, Arlington, Va., announces the engagement of her daughter, Jean Annette Jones, to Chester Loomis Bardwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Allen Bardwell of Springfield, Mass. The wedding will take place in the Arlington Forest Methodist Church July 29.

NORMANSTONE, Mrs. Martin Vogel's home on Thirtieth st., nw., will be the scene of a tea next Saturday for visitors on the Goodwill Embassy tour. Here Mrs. James McSherry Wimsatt, left, Mrs. Vogel and young Townie Vogel look over one of Townie's riding trophies in the library of the Vogel home

Goodwill Embassy Tour Will Include Gala Tea

Climaxing the Embassy Tour next Saturday sponsored by the Goodwill Guild, Mrs. Martin Vogel is giving a tea at Normanstone, her spacious home at 2601 30th st. Mrs. Truman and Mrs. Barkley will be the guests of honor, and all purchasers of tour tickets are invited from 4 to 6 p. m.

Receiving with Mrs. Vogel and Mrs. Clifford Davis, tour chairman, will be Supreme Court and Cabinet wives, Mrs. Sidney Hechinger, president of the Guild, and others prominent in the official and social picture. Friends of the hostess will pour and serve punch.

Senior and junior hostesses will be stationed at the embassies of Egypt, Iran, Greece and Brazil, and the legation of Luxembourg, the envoys of which have graciously consented to open them for the benefit. This year Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Hechinger and others have announced a junior ticket for $1.50, half the regular tour fee. Tickets may be secured at any of the embassy doors, as well as guide books with pictures of the embassies, their history, treasures, and messages from the ambassadors. Mrs. Willard A. Edwards has been assembling this material for the booklets.

Mrs. Truman Heads Patronesses For Frontier Nursing Benefit

Mrs. Truman leads the patronesses list for the annual benefit held by the Washington Committee for the Frontier Nursing Service. Other patronesses announced by Mrs. John W. Davidge, benefit chairman, are Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. Leverat Saltonstall, Mrs. Charles Bolton, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Cordell Hull and Mme. Draper Boncompagni.

The benefit will be held on May 5 at the Mayflower Hotel.

John Mason Brown, noted drama critic and associate editor of the Saturday Review of Literature, will lecture on "Seeing Things." His lecture will be followed by the serving of refreshments.

Tickets will be on sale at the door or may be obtained by telephoning Hobart 2121.

The Frontier Nursing Service was founded by Mrs. Mary Breckinridge in 1925 in the mountains of southeastern Kentucky. Here she built a hospital and established six outlying medical centers at each of which a nurse midwife lives and from which she gives medical care and nursing to everyone in her immediate vicinity who is in need. The service covers 700 square miles of mountainous rough terrain and serves 25,000 people who otherwise would have no medical care at all.

Mrs. Breckinridge feels keenly that all women living in remotely rural districts throughout the United States should have the same skilled care during childbirth, and while their babies are young, that is available to city mothers. So a midwifery training school has been established at the Frontier Nursing Service Hospital to give graduate nurses adequate training so that they may be sent to remote rural areas throughout the United States to give skilled care to babies and to women in childbirth.

AFTER SURGERY

Your problem has been solved by La Ceil and approved by some of our leading physicians and surgeons. Have a fitting in a La Ceil Brassiere of your size. A bust-form will be made to fit exactly into the vacant pocket assuring you a perfect match to the bust that remains. This form may be changed to a fresh garment in less than a minute. These forms are made of materials that are washable, do not flatten out and always remain full. When a woman wears one of these forms the bust cannot be distinguished from the flesh, even to the touch.

Kashmir Topic Of Washington Club Lecturers

"An Evening in Kashmir" will be the subject of a talk by Dr. Ward Allen and Mrs. Mark Eldredge before the Washington Club at a dinner meeting at 7 p. m., Thursday.

The lecture will be illustrated with colored slides of this world vacation spot, now a storm center of the India-Pakistan dispute.

Mrs. Eldredge, writer, lecturer and student of Oriental history, lived for 10 years in India and spent two years in Kashmir.

Dr. Ward Alleh is United Nations advisor to the Bureau of European Affairs, Department of State, and also advisor to the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan.

D. C. Panhellenic Plans Benefit

Once again the Panhellenic Association of Washington, D. C., is sponsoring a benefit to raise money for international scholarships for college women. The event, on April 25 at Lisner Auditorium, will be a performance of the "Wizard of Oz" by the Washington School of the Ballet. Tickets may be obtained at Snow Concert Bureau.

These scholarships will provide funds for foreign women in this country, as well as for American women to study abroad. As in the past, the American Association of University Women will administer the grants. Last year three French girls were brought to this country to study at Radcliffe, University of Pennsylvania Medical School, and Columbia, respectively.

Although the benefit is sponsored by college sorority women, tickets are available to all who are interested

Miss Elizabeth P. Feldman Is Wed at Fort Myer Chapel

The chapel at Fort Myer, Va., was the scene of the marriage yesterday afternoon of Miss Elizabeth Pitblado Feldman to Emil Charles Nobs of St. Louis, Mo.

The bride is the daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Herman Feldman of Washington. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Emil Charles Nobs of Pasadena, Calif.

General Feldman gave his daughter in marriage. She was costumed in lace with an orange blossom crown holding her veil. Miss Margaret Brady of Miami, Fla., and New York City, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids included Miss Ruth Ann Eppley of Cincinnati, Miss Elizabeth Myer of Arlington, Ensign Katherine Hinman, USN, Miss Helen Hollis and Miss Geraldine Huffman.

The best man was Richard W. Murphy of New York City. Among the ushers were William Smith, Leon Bureau and O. J. Blalock, all of Washington, M. L. Marks of Arlington, and Robert Griffith of Darnestown, Md.

Following their reception at the Fort McNair Officers' Club the couple left for their wedding trip to Bermuda. They will be at home in Washington.

Mrs. Nobs studied music in London with Tobbias Matthay and at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. Also, she attended the National Cathedral School and was graduated from National Park College, Forest Glen, Md.

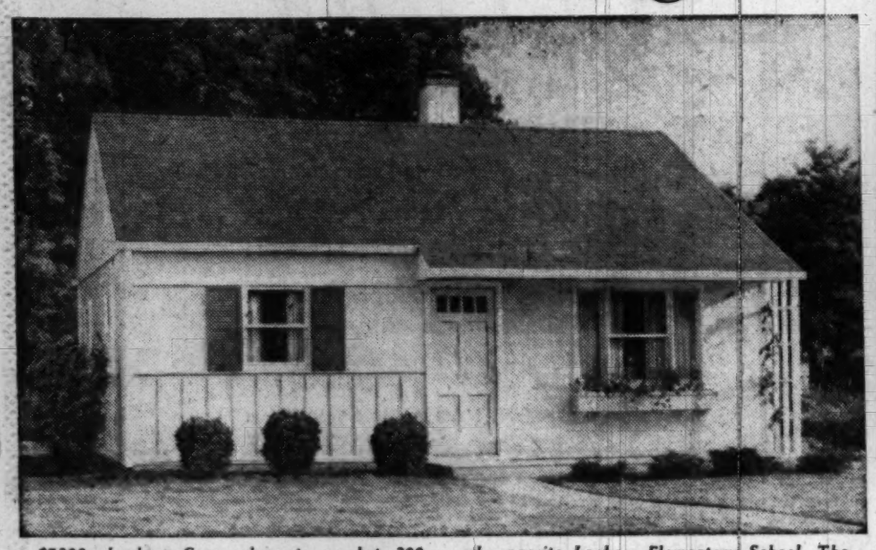
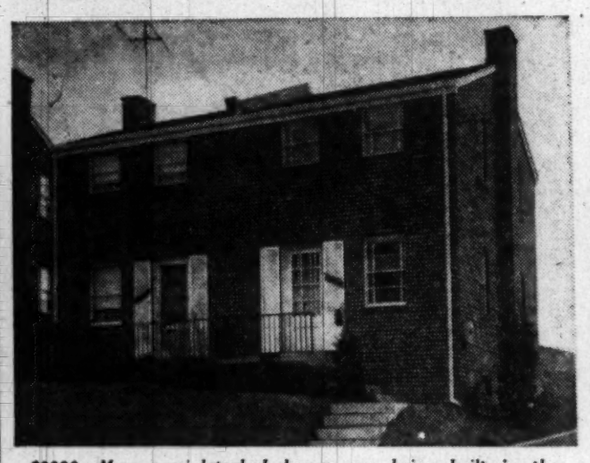
Wide Price Range Promises a Big Year for Home-Buying

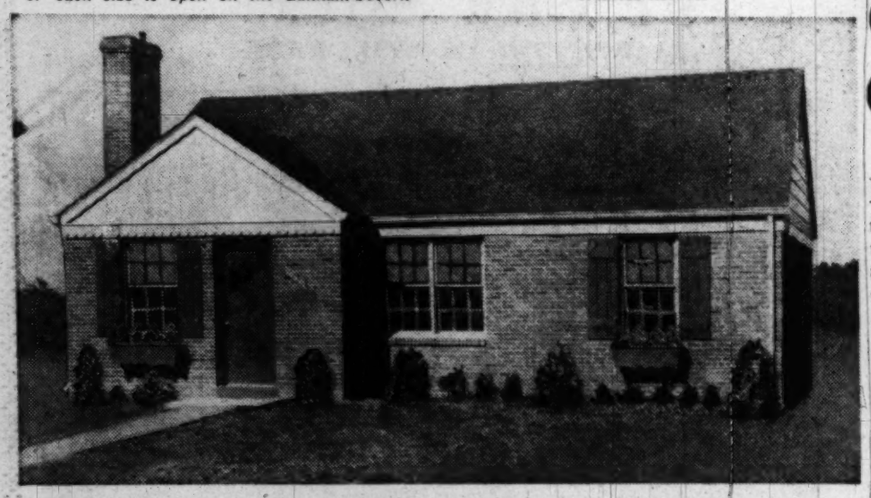


$7300—Lanham Corp. plans to market 300 of these houses in Lanham, Md. Shown is the two-bedroom home. The three bedroom dwelling will cost around $7700. A sample home of each size is open on the Lanham-Severn rd. opposite Lanham Elementary School. The houses are made by National Homes Corp., Largest United States manufacturer of prefabricated homes. Modern kitchen is a feature of these houses.



$9990—More semi-detached houses are being built in the District than any other type, reports Edward R. Carr, who is putting up 200 of them near Texas ave. and D st. se. The price is attractive, and the convenience of living in the District is hard to overlook, he says. The brick homes have full basement, two bedrooms, and full dining room. Within the next 10 days, 52 families will have taken possession

$28,500—Arlie L. Johnson, whose realty firm sold this custom-built house, says there is "definitely a good market this year" for homes tailored to owner's wishes. This one is located at Wisconsin ave. and Enfield rd. in nearby Maryland. Features include two baths, three bedrooms, den, garage and breezeway. Johnson has two similar houses for sale on adjoining land and a $19,450 and up subdivision starting in Springhill, N. Chevy Chase



$15,950—Here's an all-brick rambler at 9412 Ocala st., Silver Spring. It boasts a full basement, three bedrooms. It is one of eight built by Marcus Construction Co. there. Featured is the "dine-a-flo" kitchen—everything at arm's reach, with a breakfast and serving bar between the dining room and kitchen. Four larger homes are about to be built nearby, according to a spokesman for Woodside Realty Co., Silver Spring, agents

Cagier Buyers: Competitive Sales

By Robert P. Jordan

MORE than a million Americans intend to buy homes this year, the Federal Reserve System estimates. Hereabouts, a check of several brokers and builders indicates that the woods are full of potential customers.

But—if you're planning to purchase a house in Greater Washington in 1950, you're a cagier customer than home buyers of the preceding postwar year. So say the brokers.

You're choosier, you're doing more shopping around, you're harder to get. And sometimes, after a long Sunday spent with the wife and kids looking at new homes here and there, you may find yourself wondering if you'll ever locate that dream house.

Even so, indications are that home sales this year will equal—and probably top—last year. Brokers are expecting plenty of business.

Here are other highlights turned up in the survey:

1. Many persons now shopping for homes are those who have given up on waiting for price tags to drop.

2. Construction costs are leveling out, although a couple of brokers noted a continuing, "gradual and slight" increase in building costs.

3. Greatest demand this year will be for homes selling for $10,000 and under.

Edward R. Carr, Washington real-estate man and past president of the National Association of Home Builders, reflected the opinions of several brokers and builders on home sales in 1950.

"Generally speaking," Carr said, "the market is going to be good, particularly in $10,000 and under housing."

Carr said he also expects "a lot of action in the higher-priced brackets—from $15,000 up." He added that there will be "consider-

Competition Increasing

THE difference is, as one realty veteran put it: "You have to go out and get it now." Competition is stiffening, he said.

Large Project Of Semidetached Homes Started

CONSTRUCTION of 131 semidetached houses has just begun at Glassmanor, in Prince Georges County.

The dwellings—to sell in the $10,000 to $11,000 price range—will be of brick construction. Builder is the Stanbern Construction Co.

According to Bernard C. and Stanley Glassman, heads of the company, the project will offer two- and three-bedroom dwellings. All houses will have full basements, they said. A model home will be ready in 60 days.

Opening of the nearby South Capitol st. bridge influenced the company's decision to build semidetached houses at Glassmanor, it was reported. The company built the adjacent Glassmanor apartments.

Record Pace in Dallas

Dallas, Tex., builders, aided by mild weather, started off 1950 by completing 548 new homes the first month. This was 181 more dwelling than were finished in January, 1948, according to a survey.

American Home Spending In '50 May Top Last Year

THIS Nation's citizenry plans to buy houses, automobiles and other durable goods at as fast a clip this year—if not faster—than in 1949.

Except when it comes to television sets, that is. Sales of TV receivers are expected to be twice as large as last year.

Thus a couple of preliminary findings of the fifth annual survey of consumer finances, a study sponsored by the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System and just retained in incomplete form. Here are other tentative conclusions:

People are as optimistic this year about the amount of money they're going to make as they were in 1949. This despite some "increased frequency of lower current incomes than a year ago."

There is a wide-spread belief that prices will fall, particularly for automobiles and large household items. But the number of persons expecting a cost drop "is down sharply from six months and a year ago."

Business Outlook Uncertai

WITH regard to the general business outlook for the next 12 months, consumers show greater uncertainty than at the beginning of 1949.

Consumer plans to buy houses, autos and other durable goods this year appear to be at least equal so far to those expressed in the first six months of last year.

In home buying, the survey found that an estimated one million persons have "definite" intentions to purchase new houses in 1950. Compared to 1949, a "somewhat stronger demand" was evident for homes priced below $10,000.

While more than twice as many persons intend buying TV sets,

Build Stairways For Safety

In home building, more attention should be given stair construction, the Housing and Home Agency says. Building stairs steep to save space can prove a "dangerous economy," it reports.

Stair treads 10 inches deep, with a 1-inch overhang, and risers 7½ inches high are recommended by the agency. Stairs should be no steeper than 30 to 35 degrees, the HHFA asserts.

50,000 Prefabs Slated This Year, Official Says

MANUFACTURERS of prefabricated homes will build 50,000 houses this year, according to Hart Anderson, outgoing president of the Prefabricated Home Manufacturers' Institute.

The record production, he said, will represent an increase of 40 percent over 1949.

Speaking at the institute's annual meeting in Cincinnati, Anderson asserted that prefabs are "the only logical answer to low-cost housing." He also cited the industry's participation last year in rental housing.

Wage Increases Boost Home Costs

Higher prices for lumber and steel may bring a slight boost in home building costs, the National Association of Home Builders reports.

The increase will result from higher factory costs, including recent pension payments won by unions in wage negotiations, the NAHB said.

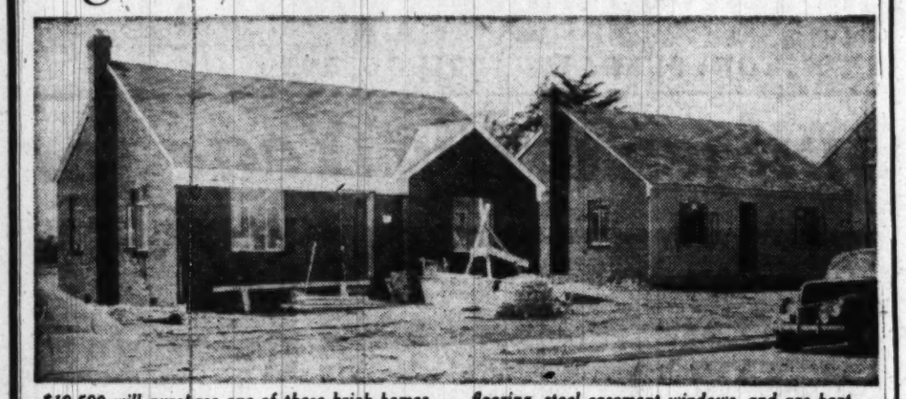
Big '50 Home Sales Forecast



$10,500 will purchase one of these brick homes built at 20th and S. Pollard sts., Arlington. Mae Lindsey, agent, reports 56 are to be erected within 60 days. The houses have two bedrooms, custom-built kitchen cabinets, oak flooring, steel casement windows, and gas heat. Convenience to bus transportation and schools are cited as purchaser pullers. A slightly different exterior style may be had for $10,750. Large market is foreseen in this range able" building of homes to plans and specifications of individual owners.

Semi-Detached Wanted

IN THE District, Carr reported a strong demand for semidetached homes. He has a project of 200 such houses under way near Texas ave. and D st. se. He plans to market them for $9990.

Home building in Washington is mostly given over to construction of semidetached housing now, Carr said. Land is too expensive, generally, to permit single-unit dwellings, he explained.

Popularity of semidetached homes in the District isn't confined to customers in the $10,000 bracket, according to Louis Richman, who plans to build 139 semidetached dwellings near Barnaby rd. and Southern ave. se.

Richman said he will sell the houses for around $13,000. He said there is a large market for semidetached dwellings costing from $12,000 to $15,000.

$7900 Ramblers

CLARKE DANIEL, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, echoed another opinion of brokers and builders: would-be buyers want "a little bigger house for the same money."

"And," he added, "that's what we're trying to do."

In order to tap the less-than-$10,000 market, Daniel's firm, Standard Properties, Inc., has 30 two-bedroom ramblers under roof on Decatur st. in Kensington, Md., and plans to build some 200 in all. Price tag is $7900.

Norman Bernstein, partner in the District real-estate firm of Leo M. Bernstein & Co., asserted that "conditions are much in favor of the seller."

Moreover, he said, the present building boom is having a "tremendous effect on land values"—upward. Land prices have been climbing sharply for the past six months, according to Bernstein.

He said the possibility of an early end to rent controls has brought many persons to invest in commercial and apartment properties, thus helping bring about a seller's market. He foresaw a continuation of the seller's market and a firm price structure through 1950.

Home buyers in Arlington, reported real-estate man Thomas J. Broyhill, know what they want these days and don't mind putting out extra money to get it. Take basements, for instance:

Basements Desired

BROYHILL said about 90 percent of his customers will specify that the home they buy has a basement. It costs them around $1200 more, he said.

Accordingly, he said, the 95 ramblers he will have built soon at Little Falls rd. and N. Powatan st. are going to be equipped with basements. They will cost from $12,500 to $14,750.

Broyhill has found, he asserted, that "most people will put $2500 extra into a $10,000 house" to get what they want. In Arlington, he said, there is a "terrific demand" for homes costing from $10,000 to $15,000.

Houses costing less than $10,000 are "practically precluded" there, Broyhill declared, because of the "high cost of land," building regulations, and so on. He also said that building costs "are edging up a bit," and that the "majority of people are giving up the idea of prices going back to the prewar levels."

Extensive construction of large apartment projects in nearby Maryland and Virginia caused both Broyhill and J. Wesley Buchanan, Washington realtor, to remark that supply may have exceeded demand.

Apartment Tenant Scarcity

BUCHANAN asserted that "certainly plenty—and maybe too many"—garden-type apartments have been built. Some outlying projects, in the days to come, may have difficulty in finding tenants, he said.

Getting back to the 1950 home buying picture, Buchanan cited an "enormous" market for houses below $10,000 that can be "GI'd"—insured through the Veterans Administration. But right now, he declared, the over-all home financing picture is "up in the air," pending signing by President Truman of the housing bill.

He said, too, that the 1950 home customer is doing plenty of shopping around. Consequently, his firm needs listings more than it does buyers, he revealed.

Permit Issued

A 13-home development in Hyattsville is planned by the Boswell Development Co. The houses will be 36 by 27 feet, one story, and of brick and cinderblock construction. Permit has been issued.

1950 Spending Surveyed By Federal Agency

they plan to buy other items—furniture, refrigerators, etc.—at about the same rate as last year, the survey showed.

Cars Bought at Same Clip

PRELIMINARY data on auto purchasing this year, it was reported, showed no substantial change in the number of units from the record 1949.

Income-wise, about three of ever 10 "consumer spending units" expected their total 1950 incomes to be larger than 1949, and less than two in ten expected them to be smaller.

Nearly half the persons contacted in the survey's 3000 interviews thought times are good at present, it was found. But many thought that while times presently are good, they are less favorable than a year earlier.

Somewhat more than half of all employes said it would be difficult, if not impossible, to get another job paying as much as the job they held at the time of the survey. About two in ten believed they could get a job with equal pay, it was reported, but a slightly larger proportion were certain it would be impossible.

Conducted by the survey research center of the University of Michigan, the 3000 interviews were made during January and February in 66 sampling areas over the country, including the 12 largest metropolitan areas. A conclusive report is to be made in June.

Prices Go Down A Bit in Miami

According to the "Asking Price Index" for homes in the Miami, Fla., area, prices continued a slow but persistent downward movement during January.

The index showed that prices dropped three points to 237 from the October, 1949, figure of 240.

This Week in Real Estate

THE Washington Real Estate Board's education committee winds up its series of conferences on real estate subjects at 8 p. m. Tuesday with a discussion of titles and license law.

TO be held at the Washington Gas Light Co. auditorium, the final session will have as speakers E. Spencer Fitzgerald of the Washington Title Insurance Co., and Carey Winston, realtor and member of the District Real Estate Commission.

WRITING in the April Home Builders Monthly, James W. Pearson predicts an increasing market for three-bedroom houses in the years to come.

PEARSON, executive director of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, says that "second, third and yes, even fourth babies" are coming along from that bumper wedding year, 1946 (2,300,000 marriages).

CONNECTICUT'S new 1½ percent interest mortgage loan plan to provide homes for moderate-income families is under way.

A Hartford construction firm M. Shapiro & Son Construction Co., Inc., yesterday agreed to build 300 private dwellings there at prices from $9,300 to $10,900 for sale exclusively to holders of State eligibility certificates. Connecticut has put up a $527,000 loan on the first phase of the program.

TO qualify, a family must be improperly housed, have an annual gross income of less than $2500—with a $600 additional allowance for each dependent—and have an available net cash worth of less that $3000.

IF YOU want your son to learn the real estate business, he can major in it at American University. Among first-year requirements is one making it a must that the student take a part-time selling job.

FOR FURTHER information, the man to contact is Nathan A. Baily, director of the division of business studies, American University.

THE BUILDING Research Advisory Board of the National Research Council is publishing soon after April 21 the proceedings of its January research conference on "Weather and the Building Industry."

JAMES R. PRICE, new president of the Prefabricated Home Manufacturers' Institute and head of National Homes Corp., Lafayette, Ind., reports that the prefab industry produced about 35,000 houses last year.

"OUR CHIEF competitor," Price says in a statement, "is not the builder of conventional houses selling for $9500 or more, but the used car dealer who advertises an auto for $350 down and so much a month. We are both selling terms, easy payments."

ACCORDING to E. G. Gavin, editor of American Builder magazine, persons who build or buy new homes this year may benefit from lower interest rates on mortgage loans. More and more conventional loans are being made at rates of 4 and 4½ percent, he says.

THE BUILDING boom will show up in the May issue of Home Beautiful. The magazine announced yesterday that next month's issue carries more advertising than any other previous May issue in its history.

Builder Opens Sample Home

A sample home of David George, Inc.'s 28-unit development is open for inspection at 707 Oneida pl. nw. The firm is building the homes in the 700 blocks of Oneida pl. and Peabody sts. nw.

According to a spokesman for the firm, 26 of the homes are semi-detached, and two are single-unit dwellings. All are two-story, three-bedroom brick houses, with basement.

Semidetached houses will sell for $16,950. The two detached dwellings and corner houses are priced at $17,950. The spokesman said all but 11 of the homes have been sold.

UNIQUE RIVERVIEW ACRE

This photo was taken from a house site on a lot of approximately one acre about 160 feet above the Potomac River dam facing southwest. Location is one mile from the D. C. line into Montgomery County, Md., 15 minutes from the White House via MacArthur Boulevard, Canal Road and Whitehurst Freeway, with no stoplights until State Department. This acre is one of four or five house sites on property the owner is subdividing. Houses will be built on the other two riverview properties this fall. Community will be served by private road. This acre is cooled in summer by prevailing breezes and warmed in winter by full sun arc. It's perfect for children, and the water flowing over the dam is music to the ear. Trees may be trimmed or cut to your desire for fuller river view. If you plan to build and haven't found the spot, drive to sign at 6675 MacArthur Boulevard, then walk up rocky path to cleared site overlooking river. Price: $9500. (Also available is hillside acre with partial river view for $4500.)

Home Building At All-Time High in 1950

THE greatest home building wave the world has ever seen is under way, reports the National Association of Home Builders.

Preliminary reports indicate that around 110,000 new homes and apartments were started in March, NAHB said. This is the highest number of "starts" ever recorded.

The previous record was 104,300 in October, 1949, peak month of the all-time high year.

The March total is nearly 35,000 above the March, 1949, figure and brings the first quarter of 1950 starts to 270,000, NAHB said.

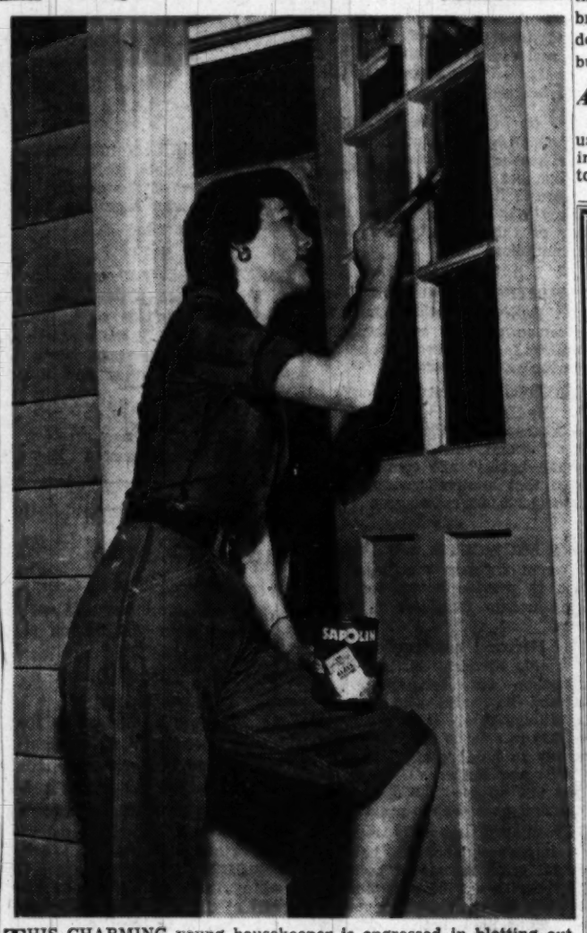
Better than average weather, capacity production of building products, efficient on-site construction methods, coupled with a large demand for homes under $10,000 are major reasons for the volume production, it was stated.

If current financing aids are continued, the building industry will smash last year's record of 1,025,000 new homes and apartments started, NAHB predicted.

Signs of the Times

Newark, N. J.—Sixteen-inch television sets will be built into each home being erected by a Newark builder. He plans to put the TV sets at the 6-foot level, insuring visibility from all parts of the room. It will be built into an interior wall in order not to disburb insulation.

Product Previews



THIS CHARMING young housekeeper is engrossed in blotting out a "next-door eye-sore." Or perhaps it's would-be burglars she doesn't want peeking through her kitchen door. Or—possibly she's after nothing more than an attractive decorative effect. Whatever it is, she's using Sapolin Glass Frosting, which gives a "ground-glass effect with the stroke of a brush." She got it at Kann's department store.

APARTMENT-dwelling television owners, attention: a low-priced device that permits operation of four TV sets from one antenna has been developed by the Brach Manufacturing Corp., Newark, N. J.

And, the company says, by attaching an additional unit to each of the four outlets, up to 16 sets can be operated from one antenna. It is designed for use on apartment houses and other multiple dwellings.

NOW THAT the motor-boating season is at hand, a plastic hood for outboard motors is being made to protect the engine from salt or fresh water spray and from physical damage. It is molded by General Electric Co. for West Bend Aluminum Co., Hartford, Wisc.

EVER CUT your finger while sewing?

Maybe you haven't, but a lot of people have. By an undisclosed method, the Emeloid Co. or Hillside, N. J. discovered that 280,000 persons cut their fingers while sewing.

So the company has invented a system for cutting thread without slicing the digits. You start with the firm's round plastic sewing kit containing eight spools of thread. The thread is drawn through a slot in a plastic window and snipped on a device at the top of the sewing kit.

HERE'S NEWS for lemonade lovers: quick-frozen lemon juice made in the Sunkist Products plant, Ontario, Calif., for Minute Maid Corp. will be distributed nationally within a short time.

The juice is made from tree-ripened fruit. Add a quart of water to 6 ounces of the concentrate and the result is lemonade.

"AMERICA'S First All-Plastic Concertina" is on the way. Turned out by the Magnus Harmonica Corp., Newark, N. J., the concertina is made of bakelite styrene tuned to the key of "C" with seven plastic keys actuating 18 tuned styrene reeds. It weighs 9 ounces, expands from 5½ to 11½ inches.

THE Hilton-Davis Chemical Co., a division of Sterling Drug Co. of Cincinnati, has added a new naphthol called "As-El" to its line of naphthol dyestuffs for textiles.

It is described as a naphthol producing "reds and scarlets of unusual brilliancy, excellent light fastness, and good fastness to chlorine, peroxide and kier boiling."

HERE'S an innovation for change handlers. The Visual Coin Box Co., Metuchen, N. J., has designed a plastic box to go into the cash register to hold pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters in four columns. A scale shows the value of coins in each column. It is made of clear tenite plastic.

A CONTAINER that dispenses toiletries, toothpaste or household creams with a twist of the wrist has been designed by Lippincott & Margulies and is being made by General Cap & Container Corp., both of New York.

The container consists of a hard outer cylinder and an inner polyothylene sac. A cap at the bottom of the cylinder twists the sac and forces out its contents.

Ants Invade Australia

Perth, Australia, (AP).—Ants, the tiny brown Argentine variety, are the big worry of West Australia State today. In the past eight years they have spread along 400 miles of coast. Everywhere they have brought trouble to the people, and forced some to sell their houses, despite the housing shortage. Fires have been started in attempts to burn them out.

Aluminum Roofs, Fences Menace Drivers

Kuala Lumpur, Malaya, (AP).—Unpainted corrugated aluminum sheets used on roofs and fences are proving a menace to motorists here. Blinding flashes of light during certain hours of the day are a great danger to motorists, said the Municipal architect, Mr. C. O. Jennings.

Heating Equipment Now Sold by Dealers

General Electric oil and gas fired heating equipment now is being sold and installed through plumbing, heating and sheet metal contractors instead of by direct sale to consumers.

Hudson Supply & Equipment Co., distributors for General Electric heating equipment here, announced the complete heating line is being distributed through an organization of franchised dealers.

Smaller, But . . .

'50 Manse A Far Cry From 1900's

GRANDMOTHER, who maybe reared six kids and needed a big house in the process, would spot the changes in today's homes in nothing flat. Nowadays:

They're smaller, because the size of families has declined.

They have more conveniences, greater comfort.

They have more architectural variation.

So says the United States Savings and Loan League in a review of home style and design trends in the first half of this century.

The league's survey blames the diminishing size of the American family for the popularity of the smaller home. Around the turn of the century, the average family had 4.8 persons; these days the average is 3.4.

And the trend continues downward, the league says after studying census bureau statistics.

Though grandmother would be aware of the disappearing giant size house, she'd also be aware she missed out on this: increased real estate taxes, a steady upswing in home building costs, more dough for domestic help, and higher maintenance expense.

To offset this—to some extent, that is, the league cites the "livability" of modern homes. They're being built with emphasis on comfort and convenience.

Homes these days are better constructed, the league reports. "The actual physical construction of the 1950 house, in terms of material and processes used, and durability, ranks far above the building at the turn of the century."

Los Angeles Sets Building Pace For Rest of U. S.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., April 15.—Slightly under 9 percent of all new dwelling units constructed in the United States in the past three years have been erected in Los Angeles County.

In disclosing this, the Home Builders Institute also revealed figures indicating the county continued the pace last year and is looking to a new record in 1950.

According to the institute, a total of 69,419 family units were started in 1949. As this year got under way, it was reported, 12,048 new homes were being constructed.

Angeleno Describes Novel Sales Methods

FRITZ BURNS, Los Angeles builder nationally famed for his sales methods, passed a few of them along the other night to members of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington.

Some of his ideas probably will prove as interesting to protential home buyers as they were to Washington builders who packed the Mayflower Hotel's East Room to hear him talk. The occasion was the association's twenty-sixth anniversary celebration.

Burns told the builders that early in 1949 he had an 1100-home development springing up in the San Fernando Valley near Los Angeles. Sales bogged down at the 300 mark. He knew he had to "create a demand" for his homes. Here's how he did it:

First off, he went in for signs and advertising—but not small signs, and not routine advertising.

FRITZ BURNS

He put up huge displays that couldn't fail to arrest the attention of home shoppers. And his ads were so commanding they had to be read.

Model House Decoration

THEN HE turned to his model house. He made sure the interior decorator didn't go "hog wild." After that, he set up an "as delivered" house right smack next door.

As if that weren't enough, he halted construction of a house midway in its erection across the street. That gave people the chance to see the methods and material going into it.

He also ordered that the furnished model house be kept immaculately clean, and put hostesses in it to greet visitors and look after the premises.

His sales organization came in for some attention, too. He invented "a little friendly rivalry." Prizes were offered for top sales records.

Circulars Distributed

HE PRINTED up thousands of circulars and had them distributed door to door in neighborhoods where citizens had shown interest in his houses. And he gave shrubs to residents of his development who submitted names of former neighbors they thought might like to move in.

Workmanship on the homes under construction was improved by placards handed the craftsmen which asserted they had good materials to work with. The placards pointed out it was up to them "to do a good job."

And, finally, he thought up "the convincer." When a couple bought a house, he gave them a document file containing pictures of their home, floor plan, a map of the entire area, directions for finding grocery stores and gas stations, bus schedules, and so on.

The "convincer" also contained a place for the deed to the home, insurance policy, and a booklet telling how to care for the house. Title was "Keeping Up With the Joneses."

After that, Burns said it was up to the house. He price-tagged them around $8000 and sold all of them. In a hurry.

Rent Lifting Brings Small Average Jump

DECONTROL of rents in 100 cities has brought a median overall rent increase of only 6 percent, according to the fiftieth real estate survey of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The survey also found that rents remained unchanged for a median of 75 percent of the tenants, the association reported. Other findings included these points:

1. There is no longer any shortage of used homes in the typical city of any size.
2. There is no longer any shortage of new houses except in the lowest price ranges.
3. Pressure for rental housing is decidedly less than it was a year ago.

"BY UNLOCKING the entire existing supply of rental units, and thus widening the supply available at any given time, rent decontrol brought lower rents on at least some of the pre-1947 dwellings in 43 percent of the reporting cities," according to the association.

The survey also showed, the association said, that rent decontrol resulted in reduction of rents on some of the new construction in 26 percent of the cities.

Prefab Roof Trusses Save Money, Lumber

Definite savings can be made through use of preassembled wood roof trusses in small-home construction, according to the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

The HHFA reports that about $70 can be saved in building a 26x32-foot dwelling by using trusses, along with a 30 percent reduction in amount of lumber as compared with conventional rafter and joist construction.

Information on roof truss construction, with details on savings and advantages, is furnished in the agency's publication, Wood Roof Trusses for Small Dwellings. It is available at 10 cents a copy from the superintendent of documents, Government Printing Office.

Free Standing

Furniture Best Away From Wall

By Ann Pringle

THERE aren't any wallflowers in this season's crop of free-standing furniture. Sofas and chairs designed with a definite back interest, cabinet pieces that are nicely finished in back and "package" sets of free-standing storage pieces are helping the homemaker solve the ever-present problem of wall space.

When you line up sofas, desks, chests and bookcases against the wall you often find yourself with a stiff, unfriendly furniture arrangement that does not divide the room up into convenient activity areas for dining, reading, conversation and studying. These back-to-the-wall tactics do not utilize space to best advantage either, and making good use of space is a necessity in today's small homes.

The Herman Miller Co.'s basic storage components were originally designed so that architects and interior designers could choose their own combinations and have their own frames made. This year the company found that there was a demand for packaged free-standing units.

These "storage screen" packages are all about 6 feet 5 inches high and 18½ inches deep, but their length varies. Prices start at about $570. Elements to choose among to form a room divider package include cabinets, bookshelves, drawers, radio-record player cabinet, speaker panel, desk cabinet and record and storage cabinet.

Choice of a unit will depend on whether it is to be used between a living and dining space or between a living and study area. One sample unit might contain bookshelf and cabinet storage on one side, bookshelves and desk space on the other. Another might contain radio, phonograph and record space on one side, drawers and desk space on the other. All units come in a variety of woods. A large asortment of blank fronts is also offered to fill in blank spaces. BSC packages are available through decorators and architects and can be ordered at New Design, Inc.

Also finished in back, and designed to fit together in room divider groups, are the storage units made by the Huntington Co. One piece features two shelves with a felt-lined silver drawer above. A chest, providing a silver drawer and deeper drawers, can be topped with glass-paneled china shelves. All these pieces are moderately priced.

Among new upholstered pieces with back interest is a three-seater couch with scalloped treatment in back and an open-arm chair with an exposed wood frame that follows around the back. These are part of a new foam rubber line designed by Richard Lischer for the Mason Art Co., and available there through decorators.

Home Show TV Queen Sought; Many Exhibits This Year

WASHINGTON'S fourth annual home show—May 12 through 21 at the National Guard Armory—will have more than 120 exhibitors, it was announced yesterday.

Even as exhibitors were readying their displays, the yearly search for the Home Show Television Queen started, according to James W. Pearson, the show's executive director.

Entry blanks are available, Pearson said, at home builders association headquarters, 1757 K st. nw., Station WTTG, 12th and E sts. nw., and at Lubar's and George's radio and television stores. Entries must be in by April 25.

CONTESTANTS must be residents of the District, Maryland or Virginia, and from 18 to 30 years of age. The contest is open to married and single women alike. Winner will receive a nine-day trip for two persons to the Bahamas, Nassau, Havana and Miami, it was announced.

One of the most colorful home show exhibits will be that of the Chesapeake and Potomac Iris Society, according to Pearson. More than 1600 varieties of iris will be on display, he said.

Other show-stoppers will include the daily fashion show at 4 p. m., and a fully mechanized hydraulic bath and kitchen exhibit.

Output Drops In Building Material Field

By The Associated Press

Output of construction materials declined 8.5 percent in 1949 despite a 3 percent increase in new construction, the Commerce Department has reported.

Inventories in many industries had reached such high levels in late 1948 and early 1949 that production during 1949 was reduced to permit "a more orderly movement of stocks into the market," the Department said.

The department's composite index of production of selected construction materials for 1949 stood 32.7 percent above the 1939 average.

The index was 45 percent above prewar in 1948 and 39.6 percent above prewar in 1947.

Last year has characteried by return of all building materials industries to more normal operating patterns compared with earlier postwar years when shortages of materials, rising costs and empty "pipelines' hampered construction, the Department said.

Cost of producing building materials declined in 1949 from the peaks reached in late 1948, but costs strengthened again toward the end of last year, the department noted.

Producers' Group To Meet Thursday At Statler Hotel

AN INFORMATIONAL luncheon meeting of the Washington Chapter of the Producers' Council will be held Thursday at the Statler Hotel.

The session will feature exhibits and films on the Armstrong Cork Company's building and floor covering products. Speaker will be R. C. Stabern, director of the company's merchandising bureau.

Shelton E. Reynolds, of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co., president of the Washington chapter of the council, will preside.

Acid Soil Locks Up Phosphate

Berkeley, Calif., (AP).—Acid soil locks up phosphate chemically and therefore makes the soil infertile, says John M. Heslep, University of California graduate student. His studies also disproved two old theories as to why acid soil is infertile.

First, manganese toxicity, although present in acid soils does not slow plant growth. Second there is no lack of calcium. Lime applications will neutralize acid and improve plant growth, but they will not improve plant growth by making more calcium available.

Yemen Jews Plan Israel Homes

Tel Aviv, Israel, (AP).—The "Magic Carpet" immigrants—Jews flown to this country from Yemen—are mostly going to have their own little settlements. The Jewish Agency has formulated plans for the absorption of 40,000 Yemenite Jews, most of whom are now in Israel.

Country Club View

For Only $19,500!

Surrounded by homes costing up to $75,000, the value of your investment is perpetually assured! A happy solution to the living problems of families sensitive to their surroundings.

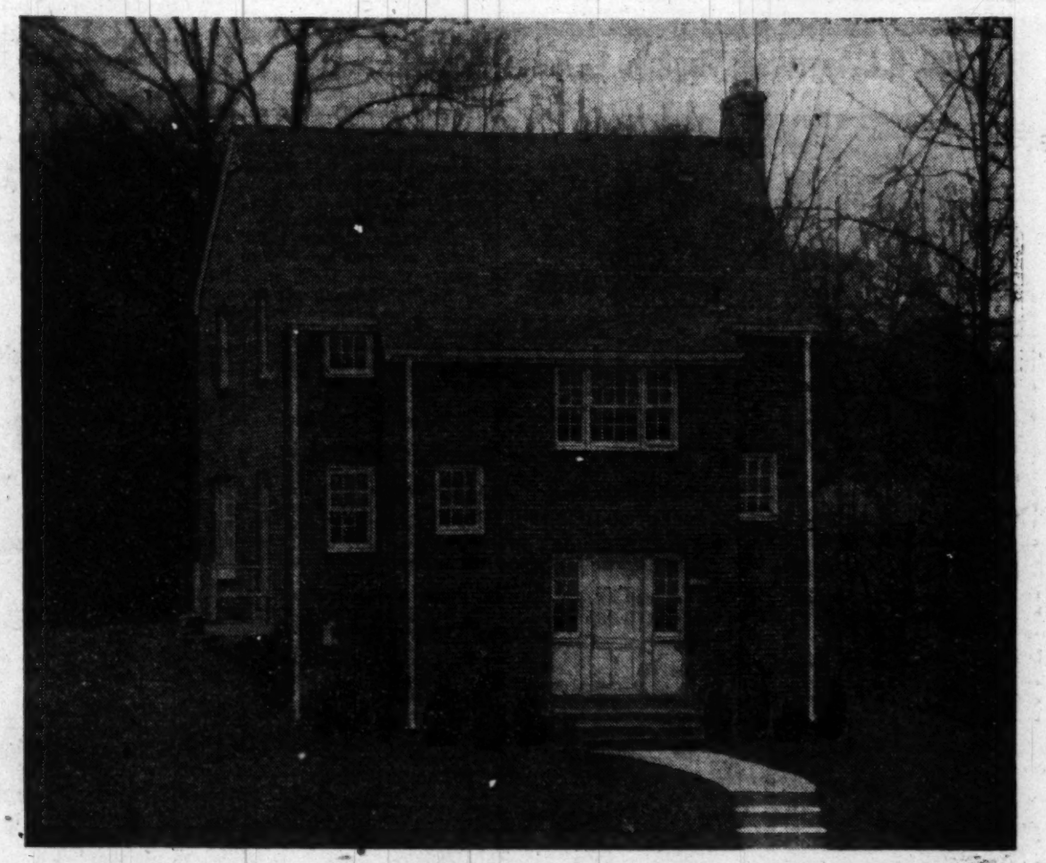
Because your fine family deserves much more than simply a "house," you have probably dreamed of someday owning a family seat . . . a livable, lovable, practical homestead in a quiet, tree-shaded location, surrounded by people of your own stamp! Such a home you could proudly pass along to the generations succeeding yours, comfortable in the knowledge that their pride of ownership will be no less than yours!

Now you can own such a homestead for as little as $19,500 in exclusive, restricted Country Club View. A 4½% first trust of $10,000 can be arranged; a $15,000 first trust for those entitled to Veterans' benefits. And here you can live in peace and security; rearing your children in the company of their peers; enjoying the never-ending grandeur of a magnificent vista from a hilltop high above a lush, rolling countryside!

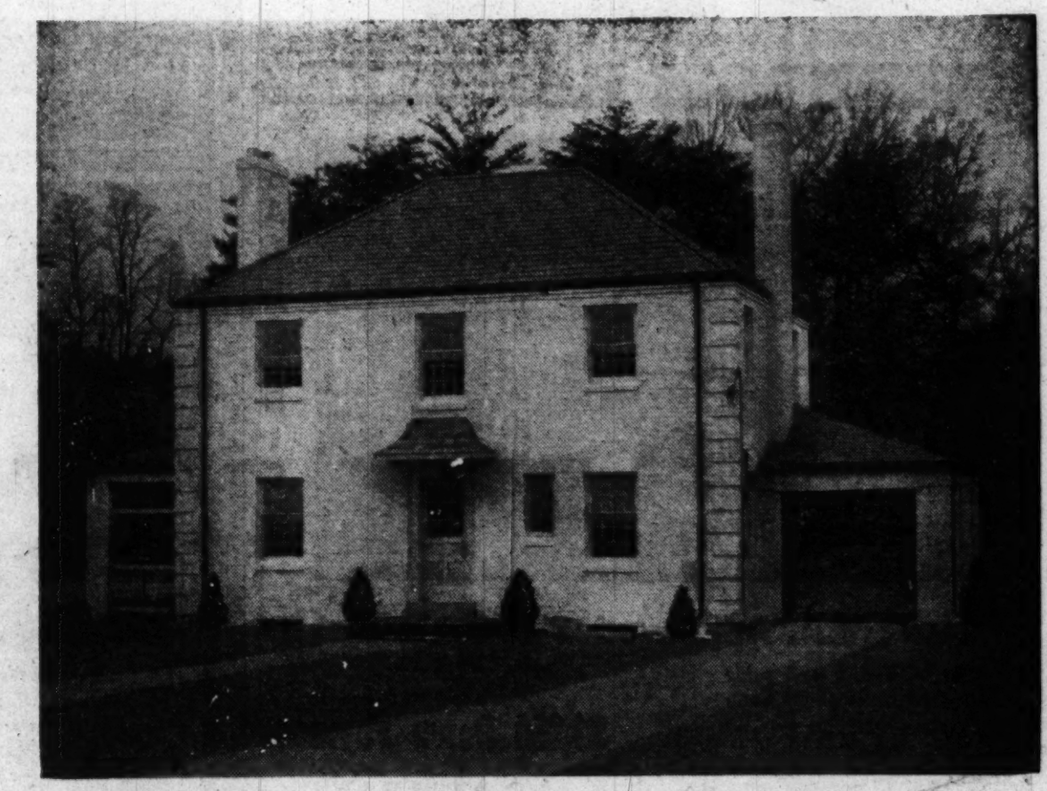
Today or tomorrow, drive to Country Club View and see for yourself that this is your kind of land! Examine the houses now open for inspection; observe the magnificence of the adjoining homes, including the majestic and deservedly famous Broy Hill Estate, located right in Country Club View. And finally, see what careful screening of applicants has done to preserve this garden spot for the enjoyment of families of gentlefolk like yours!

You will be proud to give "Country Club View" as your Address

Only $20,500 for a beautiful one-and-a-half-story, full basement Cape Cod house with garage. 2 bedrooms and bath on 2nd floor, a dining room and full bath on the 1st that can be converted to bedroom use. The large 13'4"x25' living room connects directly with the General Electric Kitchen. First trust, $12,000 ($16,000 for G. I.s). The home pictured here was completely furnished by Miller & Warren, Arlington's smartest furniture store, and decorated by Ruth L. Hodges of Falls Church.



Only $19,500 for this new type of 3-level, full basement home. Spacious and roomy, this striking-looking house has 3 bedrooms and bath on the 2nd floor; a huge living-dining room combination, lavatory and a complete General Electric Kitchen on the first floor. First trust at 4½%, $10,000; ($15,000 for G. I.s.)



THIS TRULY MAGNIFICENT home is priced at only $33,000 (with a $16,750 first trust at 4½%; a $20,750 first trust for G. I.s). The imposing center hall divides a tremendous living room with large open fireplace from a large dining room adjoining the most modern and complete of General Electric Kitchens. Ample closet space and bath also on the lower floor. An unusually distinctive Colonial stairway leads to the 2nd floor, containing three large bedrooms and 2 baths. A spacious garage attached; a large and beautiful porch; full basement with laundry tubs, etc., and a separate outside entrance. This is, indeed, the "home of your dreams"!

Homes Built On Round Lots For Privacy

By David G. Bareuther
AP Real Estate Editor

NEW YORK, April 15. (AP)—A new idea of building homes on circular lots is being tried out in the wooded hills of Westchester County, just north of New York City.

Frank Lloyd Wright, famous dean of modern American architects, is supervising design of 50 dwellings being erected on the round plots, each of which has an area of approximately 1 acre.

Some of the lots touch only at one point. The intervening land is retained for parks and playgrounds. The development now covers 97 acres, but only 50 will become home sites.

This comparatively extravagant use of land is to insure maximum privacy for each home site, to keep all zoning problems under control and to protect against undesirable encroachments. At the same time it underscores the community features of the project.

Cooperative Project

THE Usonia Homes Project is cooperative. Prospective home builders buy stock, instead of land, and lease their home sites on 99-year terms. Thirty-one families have joined in the enterprise.

Fifteen houses—five of them built from Wright's own plans—have been erected so far at costs ranging from $15,000 to $35,000. Various architects are participating, the sponsors of the project having been pupils and understudies of Wright at Spring Green, Wis.

Because of the difficulty of insuring titles for circular lots (due to surveying complications), mortgage loans are being based on an abstract rectangular division of the land, but the circular subdivision is maintained by agreement of the cooperative.

Private financing launched the first houses because of the reluctance of mortgage lenders to participate in unconventional schemes. Recently, however, the cooperative obtained mortgage commitments on 12 houses from the Knickerbocker Federal Savings & Loan Association of New York. The loans, running from 10 to 20 years, were made at 4¾ per cent.

The homes already built and under construction feature extensive uses of glass, wide roof overhangs, large fireplaces, open planning for interiors, spacious terraces and outdoor living facilties. All have radiant heating installations, which for the most part are imbedded in concrete floors.

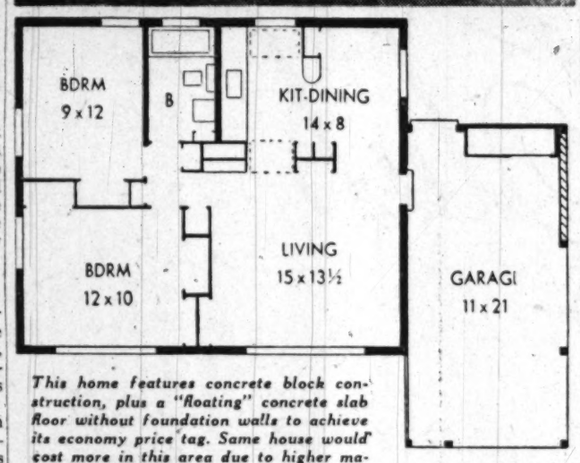
One Acre Privacy

One-story, California design, brick and redwood with steel joists. Three bedrooms, 2½ baths, large beamed living room, dining room and dream kitchen with finest stove, refrigerator, dishwasher, garbage disposal, cabinets and counters. GE oil furnace. Two fireplaces and huge window. Commanding elevation with many trees and room for tennis court. Reasonable price.

To inspect call Mr. Crowell, SL. 6456 or WO. 1966.

Marsteller, McCabe & Co., Inc.

Much for Little



This home features concrete block construction, plus a "floating" concrete slab floor without foundation walls to achieve its economy price tag. Same house would cost more in this area due to higher material and labor costs.

THE Low Cost Housing Research Bureau of Louisiana State University designed this home which cost only $5041.84 and they have been duplicated by a commercial builder for slightly less.

The home contains two bedrooms with 1000 square feet of floor space. A combination of standard low-cost materials used in a way that partially eliminates high-priced labor has produced this low-cost house.

In spite of the low cost, the home offers this space: a living room big enough for seven tables of bridge, two bedrooms, step-saving kitchen-dining room, and a carport that doubles as a porch.

All rooms have big windows; the roof overhangs and trellises protect the windows from the sun and rain.

Here are some of the features that make this house a bargain: a floating concrete slab floor without foundation walls; concrete block walls; roof trusses; few doors; aluminum roof; concrete floors; utilities grouped at the center of the house to save heat loss.

Another of the valuable features of this home plan is that there are 14 closets.

Convenient

Double-Duty Bed Ideal For Child

A CHILD'S playroom-bedroom is a wonderful place to have a double-duty bed. Dual-purpose bedding — sofa beds, studio couches and davenport beds—have found a niche in almost every other room in the house, but this convenient location may have been overlooked.

When a child is sick, a double-duty bed which can be made up right in the child's room is a big help to his mother. Instead of sleeping poorly on a makeshift bed, or wakefully straining to hear from her own bedroom, she can sleep in comfort near the child. She will be right there if he needs her, but can have her much needed sleep the rest of the night.

An extra bed which can be easily made up also makes it possible for a child to invite a playmate to spend the night. Children love to have an overnight guest—and to be one—but few homes have guest rooms and, as every mother knows, two children in one small bed would mean no sleep for either of them.

Equally important, however, is the fact that the usefulness of the double-duty bed isn't limited to the night time. During the day it provides extra seating and lounging space.

It's a comfortable spot, too, for Mother to read a story before dinner or at bedtime.

'Luxury' Homes—At $7990—Slated In New York

A New York building firm has announced plans for 486 new homes there to sell at $7990 with several "luxury house" features.

Living room size, for instance, is 11 by 22 feet. A basement will go with the house, and will provide space for a playroom, workshop and storage. Units will be two-bedroom, with expansion attic and car "porch."

The house can be financed, the National Association of Home Builders announces in its housing report, at "no cash down and $57 per month carrying charges."

Poison Weed Menaces Ranges

Salt Lake City, (AP).—A poisonous weed is spreading in several Western States and causing concern among sheep and cattle raisers. It is called halogeton, a dull green plant. Bureau of land management officials say reports from Idaho, Utah, Wyoming, Nevada and Oregon indicate thousands of sheep and cattle have died after eating the noxious weed.

Building to Be Earthquake Tester

Los Angeles, (AP).—A building on the University of California campus here will be used to study earthquakes. Buried in its structure are instruments to record strains to which the building is subject during quakes. Records will be made automatically.

New Skyscraper Boom in New York

New York (AP).—Construction of new office buildings in New York this year rivals "several of the most fabulous years in the history of skyscrapers," says Lee Thompson Smith of the Home Title Guaranty Co. in the firm's monthly bulletin.

"This year, with 4,208,000 square feet of new office space being placed on the rental market," Smith says, "is way above 1925's 1,474,700 and 1927's 1,185,700. It makes a good showing against 1929's 5,324,000 square feet. He reports that rents in the new buildings range close to $7 per square foot.

Japan Has More People

Tokyo (AP).—Japan's population keeps on going up and up. The Welfare Ministry reports the population on last January 1 was 83,073,518. The population a year earlier was 81,191,604.

At the present rate, the population on these crowded islands will exceed 100 million by 1961.

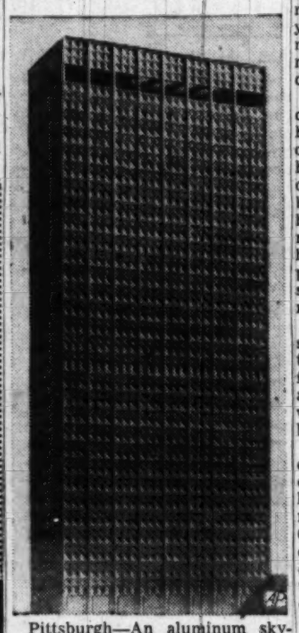
Pittsburgh Gets Tower Of Aluminum



Pittsburgh—An aluminum skyscraper, called the first in the world, is becoming a reality in Pittsburgh.

When it's completed two years hence, the 31-story structure will be, appropriately enough, the new home of Alcoa, the Aluminum Co. of America.

The building's frame, of necessity, will be of steel. But outside it will be sheathed—except for the windows—entirely in a gleaming aluminum skin.

Inside it will be aluminum, too. "The building will be aluminum in every respect where it is both practicable and economical," Alcoa experts say.

Alcoa is building its new home this way to prove a point it has long been trying to get across to architects — that noncorroding aluminum will stand up against the elements.

Combining Old and New Is Easy

IF YOU move into a modern house or apartment, must you discard your old furnishings and outfit each room exclusively with modern things? Must you replace your treasured accessories with modern ones? New owners of modern homes are often bewildered by this question.

The appeal of large picture windows, open room-planning, fluid horizontal architectural lines and other features of the modern-style house is growing stronger throughout the country. The industry is building more and more modern houses. Handling the interior need not be a problem. A feeling for harmony among furnishings; simplicity of line and detail; and absence of clutter are all the rules needed.

Period pieces in simple lines, such as Duncan Phyfe and Sheraton, can live happily with modern furniture. Rich dark mahogany and walnut combine beautifully with modern blond woods such as bleached mahogany.

Accessories such as handsome old American hand-cut glass or even Chinese art objects, are at home in the most sophisticated of modern rooms. T. H. Robsjohn-Gibbings, famous designer who champions modern simplicity, often combines traditional furniture and accessories with modern ones, frequently surrounds antique paintings with modern decor.

IN THE dining room one can give full play to the same bold imagination. A table-setting which combines stark, plain china with undecorated glassware and silver tends to be monotonous. Some pattern on china is desirable with plain glassware. American glassmakers provide a variety of handsome patterns for the modern home. Stemware with a simple square base or foot is one suggestion; or with a reeded column-like stem is another; or with flared bowl and round base joined by a squat ball-like stem is a third.

With hand-cut, hand-etched, gold-bordered or other designs on glassware, china with unobtrusive patterns is best. For table ornaments and centerpieces in the modern dining-room, there are countless choices available in fine handmade American glassware. Bowls in heavy lead crystal, hand-molded in fluid contours, are perfect flowerholders. Figurines in the form of birds, horses, Chinese deities and others combine effectively with flowers to make original centerpieces.

Whether such decorations are mixed or solid colors, are all excellent. Some are shot through with metal threads; some combine open meshlike weave with tight weave; others have a coarse, straw-like texture.

In general, the modern interior, tempered with discretion, is a harmonious combination of old treasures and new ones.

It Took 184 Railroad Cars To Bring Plumbing Material

THE JOB of installing plumbing and heating equipment in the 2106 Shirley-Duke apartments has required nearly 184 carloads of material, reports Wm. Bornstein & Son, Inc., subcontractors responsible for this operation.

William Bornstein, president, estimated the following material was used at Shirley-Duke: 21 carloads of bathtubs; 10 of water closets, 25 of radiators, 33 of boilers, 25 of pipe and 60 of oil tanks.

One standard plan used throughout the six sections by the three different builders aided in making the installation as simple as possible, it was said. Production methods of prefabricating the plumbing and heating installations were very successful.

A constant vigil was kept over these operations to forestall any installation mistakes which would have caused severe maintenance problems in the future, Bornstein reported.

Work schedules were rigidly maintained and at no time were construction schedules slowed because of heating and plumbing installations, it was added.

Home Financing, Savings, at New High Over Nation

SAVINGS and loan associations are setting new records for home financing over the country and also report an unprecedented volume of new savings inflow, according to the National Savings and Loan League.

Home purchase loans, the league said, are running 41 percent higher so far this year than the same period in 1949. Gross increase in savings this spring over last year is 13.7 percent greater.

The league said that the savings inflow in February was the highest for any February on record. It was the third highest month in history for construction loans, the league added.

Bethesda Project Planned

Eleven houses are proposed for construction on Walton rd. and Kenstone dr., Bethesda, by William O. Cooley & Sons, builders and owners. A permit application has been made.

Builders Get Safety Awards

Chicago.—Fifty-one builders here have received awards for accident prevention and perfect safety records for 1949.

Mid-Atlantic Area Building At Fast Pace

Philadelphia, April 15.—Contracts for building and heavy engineering work in the Middle Atlantic States during the first three months of this year totaled $392,183,000, with residential operations accounting for $182,638,000 of that amount, it was reported today by J. T. Little, regional vice president of F. W. Dodge Corp.

The first quarter total was 69 percent greater than last year's first-quarter figure, $232,554,000. Private construction this year showed a 105 percent increase over last year and public projects a 15 percent rise, he said.

Residential contracts awarded for the quarter just ended were more than double last year's three-month total. Apartment building contracts amounted to $43,240,000, and one-family houses totaled $143,412,000.

Nonresidential building contracts were up 28 percent this year from $86,785,000 in 1949 to $110,866,000. Among nonresidential classifications religious and educational projects had the larger percentage increases this year.

Last month's contract awards, aggregating $191,250,000, showed a 112 percent increase over the preceding month and a 9 per cent rise over March, 1949.

Residential projects last month, totaling $88,948,000, were up 85 percent compared with the preceding month and a 119 percent higher than the corresponding month in 1949, he reported.

Next Half-Century Best for Homemakers

FOR homemakers who think they have the best job going—and for hausfraus who sometimes shake their weary heads in wonder—it looks like the task will turn into a flick-of-the-wrist proposition in the next 50 years.

Just fancy, for instance, a supersonic washer. This solution to the Monday morning blues will soak, wash, rinse and dry in a single cycle. It's already made an appearance in Australia.

Or imagine a method of ironing that will do away with hoisting that dead weight up and down for hours. Suggested is a self-adjusting form over which shirts, say, would be drawn and steamed.

These possibilities, and others, are presented by John H. Ashbaugh, vice president of the Westinghouse Electric Corporation. Electricity, naturally, is going to make housekeeping a much easier job in the future, he says.

No More Burned Food

ONE big improvement, Ashbaugh asserts, will be automatic surface cooking, which will permit you to cook without watching. Like the ovens in today's ranges, surface burners will be regulated by temperature control.

This also means, explains Ashbaugh, that smaller amounts of water may be used in cooking—resulting in foods with greater nutrient and vitamin content.

Temperature-regulated surface cooking isn't too far off, he reports. Also being explored is the possibility of an infra-red electric range, one that will cook by radiant heat.

'Well-Stocked' Freezer

SO FAR so good. Ashbaugh now turns to the pantry. If the missus has a well-stocked pantry nowadays, she'll have a "well-stocked freezer" in the future.

"Current trends in refrigerators and freezers indicate that the pantry of today will be replaced more and more by a freezer room or freezer area. Homemakers will shop for fresh and pre-cooked food only a few times a year," he predicts.

The Westinghouse executive also forecasts a more extensive use of built-in appliances. Ranges, refrigerators and other appliances are to be permanently built into the home, even as kitchen cabinets are these days.

Atlanta Home-Building Heads For New Record

ALL signs point to a record construction year in Atlanta, Ga., according to statistics released by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In 1949, a total of 10,240 housing starts broke all records for home building in the Atlanta area, it was reported. But starts for February, 1950, alone—1070—were the greatest number for any February on record.

February marked the tenth consecutive month in which housing activity in the Atlanta area has increased over the same month of the preceding year, BLS said.

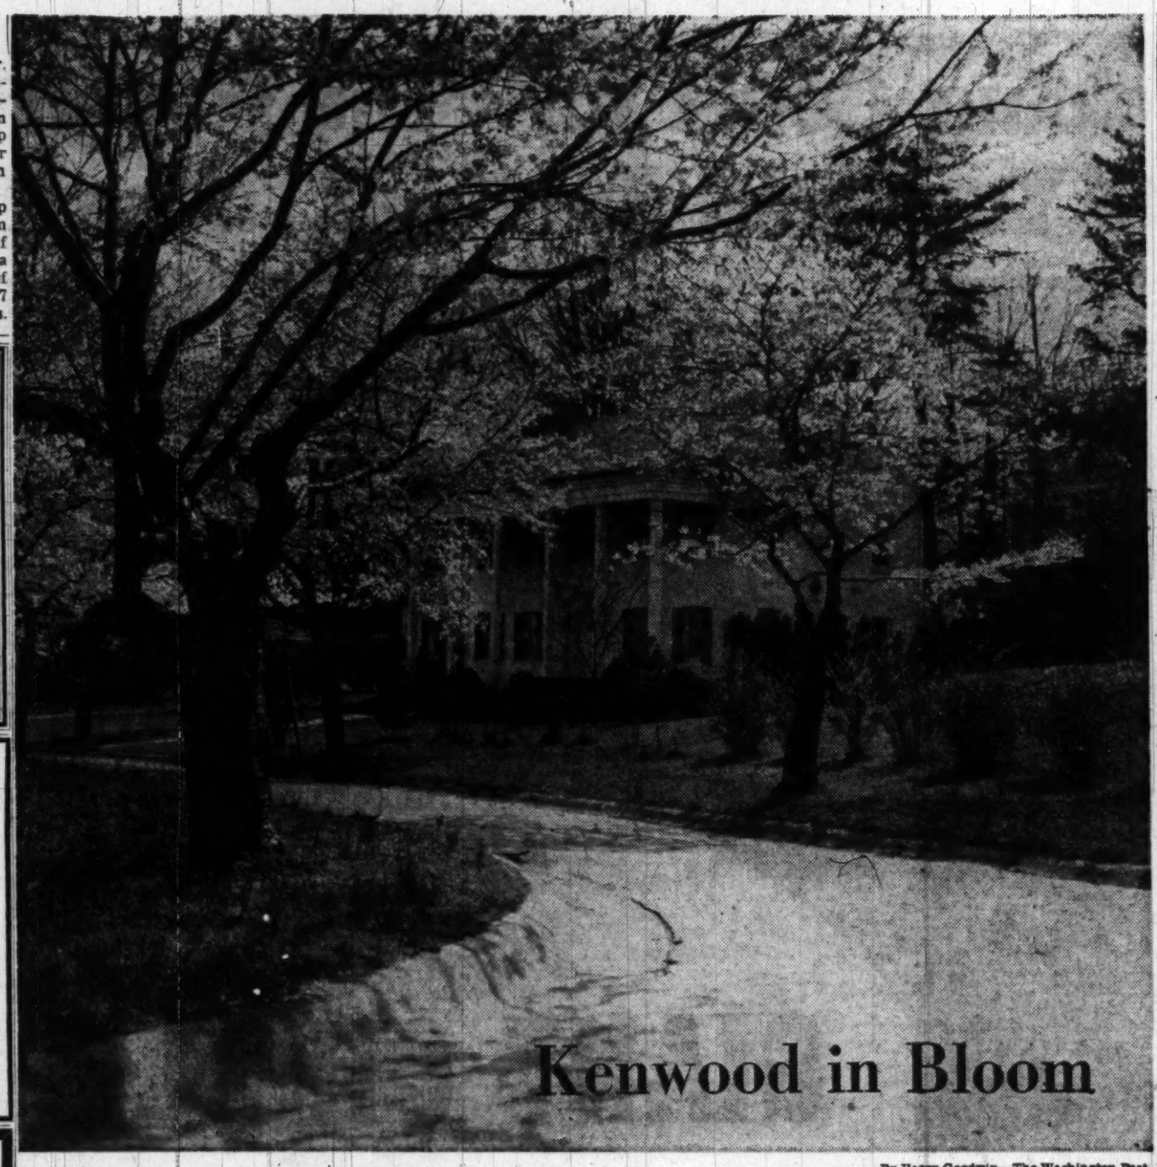
Pack Peaches In Sugar Syrup

FROZEN peaches packed in sugar syrup have better color and flavor than those packed in dry sugar, tests at the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture show. The tests point the way to better quality frozen peaches and more economy in freezing.

Not only were color and flavor better when peaches were packed in syrup, but the syrup proved more convenient. It required less time in preparation and fewer utensils than the dry sugar. Peaches packed in syrup also required less ascorbic acid to prevent darkening of the fruit than those packed in dry sugar. Syrup also held the ascorbic acid better during freezing and storage than did the dry sugar.

The tests showed that syrup packs can be protected from darkening with as little as a half teaspoon of ascorbic acid to a quart of water and 3 cups of sugar—enough syrup for about 7 pint packages of frozen peaches.



Kenwood in Bloom

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

In full blossom once again are the cherry trees in Kenwood subdivision. More than 100,000 persons are estimated to have driven through the nearby Maryland community last Sunday, where the thick blossoms set off the beauty of the subdivision's homes. Help for Home Planners: Cut-outs Show Space Needs

By Harriet Morrison

WORKING on the theory that visualizing space needs for living areas of a house one hopes to build, own or rent is simpler if one can draw up some sort of a floor plan, Cornell University has issued a bulletin called "Cut-Outs, Aids in Home Planning."

This paper-bound booklet has four pages of written information. All the remaining pages are filled with colored drawings meant to be snipped out with shears.

Miss Ruby Loper, extension service architect at the New York State College of Home Economics, planned this book for families wishing to build or remodel a home. She believes that careful planning ahead of building pays off in satisfaction and money saved.

CONVENIENTLY marked sheets for floor plans and cut-outs of furniture are provided in the booklet. Both are scaled one-half inch to the foot.

Cut-out of furniture for the living room include several sizes of sofas, chairs, desks, storage pieces, tables, lamps and pianos, as well as sofa beds. Even cut-out rugs are there. Dimensions are stamped on each cut-out to avoid confusion.

Furniture diagrams for dining rooms, kitchens, bathrooms and bedrooms are as complete as ones for the living room. There are cut-outs for each piece of kitchen equipment, laundry room needs and even hot water heaters, furnaces, sewing and ironing equipment. Furniture for children is included.

Furnishings for different areas of the house are given different colors. This makes identification with each room easier for anyone setting up a floor plan.

Time for Spraying Raspberry Is Now

NOW is the time to apply sprays to raspberry patches. When pruning out the old canes, growers have observed anthracnose spots on the fruiting canes. These are rough dark spots on the cane and branches. The fungus is alive in the over-wintering spots and soon will develop spores to infect the new growth. A spray now will kill or weaken the fungus.

Use liquid lime-sulfur 10 gallons to 100 gallons or 2 quarts in 5 gallons of spray. The same spray should be used on red raspberries to control spur blight which causes bluish spots on the canes. This delayed dormant is a very important spray.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, APRIL 16, 1950

FROSTY: That's the name of the character blond newcomer Ellye Marshall plays in "Champagne for Caesar," though she doesn't seem to make much impression on Art Linkletter. Ronald Colman and Celeste Holm are the stars of this comedy opening Saturday at the Palace

MARLENE'S BACK: La Dietrich, below, plays a musical comedy star in Alfred Hitchcock's backstage murder yarn, "Stage Fright," now at the Warner. Jane Wyman's in it, too

VAUGHN'S BOWING: Vaughn Monroe makes his screen bow in a Western with Ella Raines Saturday at the Metropolitan. The bandsman's movie is "Singing Guns"

On Broadway

Walter Winchell

New Draymas Are Lampoohed; Ditto for Saroyan, Out West

YOUR New York correspondent.

THE BROADWAY BEACON: the week's entries. "CRY OF THE PEACOCK" and "WITH A SILK THREAD," were scorned by the dramassassins . . . They plucked "PEACOCK" (a turkey) feathers and all . . . This play offered a man-bites-cupid note. It was penned by a Frenchman, who denounces sex . . . "SILK THREAD" was greeted with glares and probably will go quietly very soon . . . William Saroyan's latest opus, "THE SON" was trounced by the Hollywood sentinels . . . A new play titled "TEAR UP ANOTHER PAGE" satirizes that genius . . . Mervyn Nelson's "ECHO," "A PARABLE ON CHRIST IN MODERN WORLD," may bring Pauline Lord out of retirement and back to Broadway in October . . . "THE INNOCENTS," a walloping click, cost only $44,000 to produce . . . Shirley Temple may get her wish to turn siren. She has been offered the vixen role in "GUEST IN THE HOUSE" via summer stock . . . Melvyn Douglas dismisses those division-rumors. Traces them all, he reports, to the political enemies of Helen Gahagan Douglas, who is running for the U. S. Senate.

IN THE WINGS: Critic Alec Woollcott panned a Wilson Mizner show hard. The author cornered him the next night and barked: "I never expected it from you. I saw you smiling throughout the show" . . . "Oh," said Woollcott, "I was having a pleasant dream" . . . Mark Goodson and Wm. Todman who produced several audience-participation programs on the air, auditioned a drama for a change.

"It's a pleasure," sighed Todman, "to be working with actors again, instead of people."

THE CINEMAGICIANS: Bing Crosby boots home a winning race track flicker called "RIDING HIGH." His hoss-pay and song-jockeying insures a merry gallop . . . June Allyson and Dick Powell cavort pleasantly in "THE REFORMER AND THE REDHEAD." They make it daffy-taffy . . . "GUILTY OF TREASON" is a pulse-quickening dramatization of the Cardinal Mindszenty case—but for worst-taste-of-the-week, its adverts (in the gazettes) stress sex themes instead of the fact that the holy man fought for democracy and decency. The ads shriek: "BETRAYED BY HER LOVER" . . . "TWILIGHT IN THE SIERRAS" is the familiar saddle-faddle . . . "THE GOLDEN TWENTIES" recaptures the era when gals were flappers, swing was jazz and likker was poison.

STAIRWAY TO THE STARS: The title of Barbara Stanwyck's new film, "NO MAN OF HER OWN," was the name of the picture that brought Clark Gable and Carole Lombard together in 1932 . . . Betty Grable's capers in "WABASH AVENUE" are enough to make any man a curvous wreck . . . Isn't "WABASH AVENUE" a remake of her "CONEY ISLAND" flick of only five years ago? . . . Jean Caufield in "THE PETTY GIRL" must be why they invented the one-piece swim suit . . . The reprise of C. Chaplin's "CITY LIGHTS" reminds you how wonderful he is when making the world laugh . . . instead of arguing about his views . . .

Things that keep me awake nights: Why the film titled "THE BIG HAIRCUT" was switched to "WILD HARVEST" . . . Embryo sleuths and psychiatrists prob'ly can't figure the significance of this: Kirk Douglas took a new $25,000 life insurance policy and made his former wife, Diana, the beneficiary.

THE AIERISTOCRATS: After all those years of trouping on Broadway stages and before Hollywood cameras, Basil Rathbone (one of the top-fliighters) MC'r a Teevy show and was more nervous than a girl on her first lap . . . Franchot Tone put the paprika in Studio One's offering. The actress who played the waitress, has the stardust touch: charm and talent—alas, poor thing, we didn't catch her name . . . The cross-examinations via "MEET THE PRESS" always give off sparks by rubbing together conflicting opinions . . . Billy Eckstein's version of "MY FOOLISH HEART" nestles in the ears . . . Tide mag reports the latest NEILSENU reveals that overall radio has lost only 3.1 percent of its 1947-49 average to Teevy . . . Johnny Long's recording of "CALICOBALL" is bound for Hitville . . . Cugat is whiz with Latin lilts but ah, why does he make with jokes?

THE INTELLIGENTSIA: Michael Arlen (who auth'd "THE GREEN HAT" plus 700 short stories) hasn't written a line since 1939 when he returned to England to enter the service . . . He will elevate NBC to the big time (on the 25th) as narrator of a new dramatic half-hour called "CADS, SCOUNDRELS AND CHARMING LADIES," the longest title in radio . . . Owen Lattimore is expected to quit the Washington scene and lecture in the 48 States . . . The State Department will distribute reprints of Collier's recent story on The Little Church Around the Corner (by Robert Stein) for world distribution . . . Mrs. Alben Barkley's photos and new spring millinery in the Ladies Home Journal are eye-perfume . . . Frank Scully of Variety has a new book called "BEHIND THE FLYING SAUCERS" which Henry Holt will unveil soon . . . Newsman Jack Kofoed (Miami Herald) and Hailey Leyshon collabed on "FRONT PAGE HEADLINE" for nearly seven years between bombings in London and elsewhere . . . There were 10,254 books copyrighted in the last fiscal year.

THE PRESS BOX: Some editorialists are now saying things would look better if Mr. Truman hadn't been in Florida so long . . . They mean if FDR hadn't been in Hyde Park, etc. . . . The reports from Israel said that Yehudi Menuhin needed a guard because newspapers there criticized him for sympathizing with Nazis. He denies that . . . One of the Nazis he went to bat for was Hitler's Geisicking, who was chased out of the United States . . . The Sabbath New York Times mag section fractured an illusion: Hollywood's divorce rate is 30 percent less than the rest of the United States, my dear Senator Johnson

HEADLINES & FOOTNOTES: "Politicians, Gangsters at Binaggio Services." (Watch that comma, kid.) . . . "Russia Fires on U. S. Plane." (Prob'ly the only one we have, too.) . . . "Truman Back in Washington and O'Dwyer Back in N. Y." (Now if we can only get Russia back in Russia.)

Samson Caves in With the Temple

By Richard L. Coe

AS YOU CAN IMAGINE, Hollywood's Old Fakir, Cecil B. DeMille, has a high time with "Samson and Delilah," now at the Capitol.

The trumpetings about this one have been Super Special, but it boils down to the Old Testament story told in terms of 20th century Hollywood. Except for the final five minutes, wherein Samson brings down the Temple of Dagon, it's surprisingly dull and the whole story totally preposterous.

The gimmick about DeMille is always that's he's spent years and kings' ransoms on historical research and that what he comes up with is It. For instance, he's presented 14 years worth of biblical research to the Library of Congress.

Among the "minute details" accepted for the Library by Dr. Luther H. Evans are authoritative details on life in the Near East 1100 B. C., broken down into such headings as: Animals, Bakers, Birds, Caves, Clothing, Cookery, Dinner Parties, Dwellings, Flax, Food, Furniture, Greetings, Hair and Nails, Illumination, Knitting, Millstones, Money, Village Life and Warfare.

Now all this may well be invaluable and accurate, but as for the story cooked up by the Old Fakr and his incense burners, one has only to turn to the book of Judges, chapters 14-16, to see what utter nonsense he palms off as Samson's story.

In Judges some 20 years elapse for Samson's story, but with Massa Cecil it's an obviously brief, if indeterminate, spell with the old sexy triangle stuff to give it the whammy. And Delilah becomes exactly the sort of tortured heroine one finds on radio soap operas.

This yucking-up process is keyed on making the woman of Timnath (In Judges, Samson's wife; in DeMille, a lady he understandably jilts during the marriage ceremony) the sister of Delilah. This means Delilah, instead of being a late comer in Samson's life, is with us all the way. Samson prefers her pouting sister, but Samson is Delilah's guy from the minute she lays eyes on him and for over two hours the lady vacillates between her True Love and the traditional feelings of a Woman Scorned.

SO HALF the time Delilah is all for getting at the secret of Samson's strength and, a la Scarlett O'Hara, being paid for her guile. The other half Delilah is insisting that her victim not be harmed (no trace of this in Judges) and yearning to get Samson away from his enemies and off to the pleasures of Egypt. The finale finds her leading Samson to the fatefully critical pillars. Wicked she has been, but Love guides her into a final act of Righteousness.

And, bowing to the patriotism in us all, not so subtly introduced along the way are the dictatorship-democracy struggles with which DeMille waves an unseen flag. The Almighty is a carefully diluted Jehovah.

So while the research division's work may rate perpetuation in the Library of Congress, the plot and the spirit of this "Samson and Delilah" are essentially up to the Hollywood idea of what we should all think, do and believe.

As for the DeMille mastery of telling a movie in camera terms, while his use of crowds is impressive, it's no more so than John Ford's, Robert Rossen's, Clarence Brown's or Howard Hawks'. Certainly his use of the straight-on close-ups (the camera always in the center of the action) is totally unimaginative and old hat.

THE PLAYING is distinctly Carvel High, a tone set by none other than Fay Holden, whose Andy Hardy has grown up into Victor Mature, as flabby a Samson as you can imagine.

Hedy Lamarr, of course, is sensationally whizbang as the lady barber, splendiferous in all her get-ups, especially in a peacock robe, the feathers of which, one learns, have been "delicately painted" for the benefit of Technicolor. Angela Lansbury has the silliest role of her curious career as the desirable sister and George Sanders is an Edward VIII of Gaza. Robert Wilcoxen is miraculously incompetent as a baffled general.

There's also a totally erroneous impression suggested in the creation of a character named Saul, a young boy who couldn't possibly have been the Saul wily DeMille merely suggests he is.

But it's all, I'm sure, exactly as the Old Fakir planned it and if the Old Testament doesn't live up to DeMille's Delilah, you can thank your stars you're living in the bright-colored, self-righteous twentieth century.

How Much Longer?

Why the Delay In Color Video?

By Sonia Stein

I'VE traded in my Easter bonnet for a steel helmet because I expect to be rapped smartly on the noggin by both RCA and CBS for the just-supposin' I'm about to do.

I'm about to dream up a plan whereby we could have some color television now—or in a few months—at about $10 a year more than black and white would cost over a five to ten year period.

At the end of five to ten years, we could discard this color system for a better one if it had appeared on the scene, and be no worse off than we are today.

Because just supposin' that instead of trying to adopt a standard for color television that would be permanent, the Federal Communications Commission decided to keep things wide open for future change. What if they authorized for immediate use the one system that is ready to be put into immediate use—the CBS system which has already been field tested and for which a number of manufacturers have testified they could begin to supply equipment in 60 to 90 days after the FCC decision.

Even though CBS color is not "compatible" with present black and white sets—that is, it cannot be received even in black and white without adapting the set—it is ready as a color system. While the RCA and CTI systems can be received as black and white pictures with no change in existing sets, they are simply not ready as color systems.

The CTI system is a long way from being ready, and RCA has admitted that it will be one or two years—maybe longer, before the new multi-color single tube receiver, which the RCA system must use to be practical, can be put into production.

(Some witnesses before the FCC—other than CBS witnesses who might be biased—have said the RCA system may have "bugs" in it that will take longer than two years to get rid of. If we were faced two years from now with adopting the CBS system anyway, we'd have a still more complex problem of adjusting to this incompatible system since the number of black and white sets in use, and in need of adapting or converting for CBS color, would have more than trebled.)

In the Meantime—

IN MAKING its decision for one system, the FCC could make it clear that in say, five to ten years, the other systems, or new ones, could present their cases. These rival systems would have to be compatible with either the CBS color sets, or with the old type of black and white sets.

Meanwhile, we could have color. Of course it depends on how badly we want color since there are some hazards and expenses in this kind of decision.

But since only 5 percent or so of the population is color blind, color TV is presumably desirable for aesthetic reasons and because color helps so much in distinguishing between objects that the eye can enjoy a much smaller picture at a farther distance than it can in black and white.

In a survey made by the Television Research Institute of New York, members of the public queried about color TV indicated a desire—backed up by a financial willingness—to have color. Fully 73 percent of present set-owners said they were willing to spend from $50 to $100 to convert their black and white receivers to get a minimum of one hour of daily color telecasts.

Let's see who gets hurt and how, under this idea. Assuming you have a black and white set, you may convert it for CBS color with a color wheel at a cost of about $80 for the deluxe job. If you are willing to settle for a 7½-inch picture you can do it for less: Celomat, Inc., has said it can offer a wheel for less than $10 which anybody handy with tools can install once his set has had an adapter professionally installed for an estimated $15 to $35.

Or you may simply have your set adapted to receive in black and white, the color shows to be produced under the CBS system. This would cost the aforementioned $15 to $35.

Or you may leave your set strictly alone and continue to receive for quite some time the shows you now receive, since to begin with all color shows would be telecast only at hours not now being programmed for regular TV.

Sponsors Reluctant

SPONSORS, dearly desiring to reach as many people as possible, would naturally be reluctant to switch to color until at least a substantial number of the viewers had color sets, or sets which could convert color shows to intelligible black and white ones. So for a long time, there would be plenty of shows being produced as black and white shows.

All new sets, if the manufacturers can be made to

Symphony's Tone Quality, Technical Precision Lifted

By Paul Hume

THERE is a legend that orchestras play the same way under any conductor, once they have achieved a fundamental discipline. The untruth of that statement can be found in listening to the NBC Symphony under other conductors than Toscanini—to the Boston Symphony now in its Munch days after years of Koussevitsky—or to the Chicago Symphony following the death of Frederick Stock.

MITCHELL

An orchestra's playing reflects the concepts and abilities of its conductor—and in a very short time.

Howard Mitchell has concluded his first season as conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra. He has brought about some changes. Today we will discuss technical changes in the orchestra.

The National Symphony remains its customary size. Eighty-six players are generally on the stage during its concerts. Two more battery players and various other extras come in when certain music requires their work.

There have been no unusual personnel changes. The first chairs, leaders of the orchestra, are occupied by the same musicians who held them during Hans Kindler's final season. The only shift is in the cello section, where John Martin moved into Mitchell's former spot.

Yet the National Symphony at the close of its present season is a different orchestra than when it began last foll. The difference lies in two areas: technical precision and tone quality.

There have been times during the past season when the National Symphony has played with a unity of phrasing and inflection that, in its mere subtelty, surpassed mere technical fundamentals. Its account of the fifth and seventh symphonies of Beethoven can be cited here, as well as its Tschaikowsky program.

Another vital matter involving precision is that of accompaniments for soloists. In this field the National Symphony is becoming eminent among orchestras, according to soloists who sing and play with it. These improvements are due both to Mitchell's training the orchestra, and to his prerehearsal sessions with soloists.

In the field of tone quality similar changes have taken place.

What's Coming Up By Way of Entertainment

A COMEDY about Washington and a forgotten Government agency, the Office of Seeds and Standards, will follow "A Streetcar Named Desire" at the Gayety Theater, opening a two-week run a week from tomorrow.

"Two Blind Mice" is the play, Samuel Spewack's observations on our town and a comedy success of the last New York season. Melvyn Douglas, Mabel Paige and Laura Pierpont, of the original cast, head the company, with Douglas directing under the production banner of Harald Bromley and Eunice Healey.

Douglas, husband of Helen Gahagan Douglas, California Representative, has been the star of countless screen hits, but this is his first stage apapearance here in many years. Both Miss Paige and Miss Pierpont have been New York stage standbys for years.

Spewack usually writes in collaboration with his wife Bella; their latest going work is the highly praised book of "Kiss Me Kate."

The author was here during the war for OWI, after which he went to Moscow as press attache for Averell Harriman. After the Moscow conference he was in charge of the Russian division of OWI, which gave him material for his comic novel, "The Busy, Busy People."

DETAIL OF THE FIGURE DAWN from the Medici Tomb completed by Michelangelo as seen in the new art film, "The Titan," story of Michelangelo which will have its Washington premiere next Wednesday at the Dupont Theater

'Oz' to Be Repeated At Roosevelt High

THE Children's Theater of Washington will repeat its three-act ballet, "Adventures in Oz" next Friday night and Saturday afternoon at Roosevelt High School Auditorium.

Students of the Washington School of the Ballet presented this Oz version three years ago and it is being repeated this year, with several new scenes, by popular request.

Seats for both performances are on sale at the Snow Concert Bureau, 1108 G st. nw.

Shrine Circus Offers Stars From Europe

THE Shrine Circus will open a week's run at the Uline Arena a week from tomorrow night.

Features in this Hamid-Morton production are aerial stars from all over the world. Returning to Washington will be Francine Volante, who does a daring, dangerous stunt known as "The Leap of Death." She jumps from a small platform high above the arena into nothingness, heading for a faraway trapeze. She hasn't missed yet.

Another feminine star will be Myriam France, from the Circus Medrano of Paris. La Paloma, despite her Spanish name, is the Netherlands' contribution to the high wire. From Norway comes "The Great Smetona," slack wire artist, and from Austria, the five Amandis-Ricardis, teeterboard artists.

Dogs, horses, ponies, elephants, seals and clowns are on the bill.

Seats are on sale at Almas Temple, 1315 K st., and at Mrs. Stabler's Ticket Mart, in Brentano's.

'Warrior's Husband' To Wind Up Year

THE George Washington University Players will present their final play of the year Thursday through Saturday nights at Lisner Auditorium, "The Warrior's Husband."

This comedy by Julian Thompson makes sport of the Trojan war and the legendary Amazons. Originally the play focused attention on a new actress named Katherine Hepburn.

Charles Vorbach and Marilyn Earls have the comedy leads with Lawrence Strawbridge and Davie Rogers as the romantic couple. Others in the cast, directed by Andrew Nilles, include Gay Fullerton, Pat Sellers, George Lytle, Edmund Vertner, Clyde Stallings, William Cain, Terry Gallegoes, Pericles King, Ann Miller, Joan Gans, Joan Hagg, Mary Mangum, Mary Will Clemens and Elizabeth Johnstone.

Stan Kenton Plays Here Tomorrow

STAN KENTON and his 40-piece "Modern Orchestra" will play a one night stand tomorrow night at 8:30 in Uline's Arena, hs only stop here on a three-month tour.

The bandsman went into temporary retirement over a year ago, but re-formed his band to cater to what he feels is a new, untried field—modern music, concert style.

Featured performer will be blonde June Christy, who rose to fame as a songstress with the original Kenton group. Seats for the "Innovations of Modern Music for 1950" are on sale at the Super Music Stores and at Champion Sports, Inc., 816 13th st. nw.

Hillbillies Planning Armory Weekend

"A HILLBILLY WEEKEND" will get under way next Saturday night at 9 o'clock in the National Guard Armory under sponsorship of Connie B. Gay's Radio Ranch. It will continue until 1 a. m. Sunday, resuming Sunday afternoon from 3 till 6.

Star of the Sunday afternoon session will be Hank Snow, "The Singing Ranger," from Nashville's Grand Ole Opry. Born a Canadian, he's said to be the Tennessee radio show's latest sensation.

Making its first appearance in these parts will be a new 12-piece Western Swing band.

Familiar faces for hillbilly fans will include Grandpa Jones, Pete Cassell, and Lily and Curly.

Movie Will Depict Latin America

"PROGRESS in Latin America" is the fourth in the series of films to be presented by the Washington World Affairs Center in the Interior Department auditorium tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

On the program will be "Paracutin," an Air Forces film; "Rising Tide," from the Canadian National Film Board, "Health Center" and "Winged Scourge," two Walt Disney films made for the Institute of Inter-American Affairs, and "The Rugged Road to Cape Horn," the story of an automobile trip from Washington to Cape Horn.

'Good News' Goes On Stage Tonight

THE Sacred Heart Players will present the Schwab-Mandel musical comedy, "Good News" in their auditorium, 1625 Park rd. nw., tonight through Wednesday night at 8:30 each evening.

Mrs. Dan O'Brien has directed the cast of 35, with George Bishop in charge of the musical numbers. Tom Sweeney and Ann Brozenski have the romantic roles, with Donald Leighton, Courtney Werner, Mary Margaret Collins, Dan Nichols and Fanny Bachman in the other leads. Maura Buckely and Joan Sant Ambrogio will do specialty dances.

Novel by Lewis To Be Enacted

THE MASQUERS of Roosevelt Center, the District Recreation Department players, will present "Dodsworth" on April 27 and 28 at Roosevelt High auditorium.

Pauline Eaton Oak is directing the Sydney Howard dramatization of Sinclair Lewis' popular novel, with Samuel Sherwood, Vivian Barrett, Juanita Coe and Maud Howell Smith in the leading roles.

Others in the cast of 50 will include Edwin Beitzell, Kathryn Davis, Dayton Harrington, Lillian Watts, Rhodes Scherer, Gladys Schmit, Herbert Marlone, Nels Benson, Thomas Keenan, Helm Lyon and Verna Withey.

Thespians to Hold Conference Day

THE Thespian Study Club of Washington will hold a one-day conference on "The Theater Today" Saturday at Kappa House, 1708 S st. nw. Among the topics are "The Status and Trends of the Theater Today," "Critical Looking and Listening," "Play Production and Direction" and "Makeup."

get over an initial distaste they seem to have, could contain a built-in adapter which would make it possible to get the CBS color shows as well as regular shows in black and white. Cost for this hasn't been established, but it is bound to be less than the external adapter which has been estimated at under $35.

Most new sets would be entirely equipped for color, and would cost perhaps 25 to 30 percent more than comparable black and white sets.

By the time RCA has its tube ready for mass production, or any other company comes up with such a finished multi-color kinescope tube, in perhaps two or three years' time, the tube could be built in sets meant to receive CBS color shows, since all color systems seem able to make use of this piece of equipment with equal ease.

By that time, if it appeared that the RCA system or any other similar system were perfected (and proved to give superior performance) and likely to be adopted at the end of the period the FCC had set up for CBS color, a duplicate set of circuits could be installed at a cost of perhaps $50 to make the new sets easily adjustable for the impending system in case it ever came.

To save the expense of such duplicate circuiting, the multi-color tube sets could be built to accommodate the CBS system only, and could be adapted later—if necessary—by means of an external adapter.

What would become of sets which did not contain the multi-color tube at this future possible changeover date? Black and white sets—whether or not they had ever been converted or adapted to conform to CBS color—would get the new system as black and white which is all RCA is offering anybody for two years or so, even if its system were adopted today.

Most of these older sets would be somewhat outmoded, perhaps unusable since electronic equipment has an estimated practical life of about 5 years, and ready for retirement to the game room, anyway.

All new sets—less than five years of age—would probably contain the multi-color tube, and therefore be ready for quick conversion to the new method by the addition of the external adapter or the simple automatic switching to a built-in circuit providently placed there by the manufacturer.

And if none of the new proponents had a system at that time any better than the CBS system, there would be no need to change at all.

Symphony Lifts Tone Quality

The National Symphony has some superb wind players. All season the playing of the oboes, clarinets, flutes, and brass has been of high quality. In choirs and singly, their playing has formed a bright nucleus at every concert.

The French horns remain a problem. Their breaks and bloops at crucial moments have been embarrassing on several occasions. If the Bampton concert was the worst, the evening with the Mendelssohn Italian symphony was little better—and months later, the Mendelssohn brought out the same horn slips again.

The strings of the orchestra have acquired a fine tone at times, and a high degree of precision, yet they have still to achieve a dependable "togetherness" and solidity. The concertmaster is not the model of style and leadership he should be and it is reflected in the work of the other violins.

These matters would be improved immensely if there were more money available to pay higher salaries to retain the best players in the orchestra. The first oboe has left for Cleveland where he will play a longer season at higher pay, with a substantial recording contract in addition. That kind of competition can only be met with more money for the orchestra here.

If the National Symphony could be increased by one trombone, one trumpet, one bassoon, one clarinet, one oboe, one flute, and four string players, bringing its regular strength to 96, it would have a wholly enriched sound—a sound needed for the proper exposition of three-quarters of its repertoire.

The first step in producing a great orchestra is to provide it with the technical finish needed for correct playing.

Mitchell has gone far in his first full year to build a fine technical body in Washington. Next week we shall talk of his gifts as an interpretor—and of the music he chooses to interpret.

Potter Lectures

Students See What Makes 'Streetcar' Go

STUDENTS of Theatrical Management and Public Relations at George Washington University are getting a chance to see the inner workings of "A Street Car Named Desire," playing at the Gayety this week. Classes have been moved from the campus to the upstairs of the theater, and the show's manager, John H. Potter, is lecturing the group in the absence of their regular teacher, Bess Davis Schreiner.

Mr. Potter, a Princeton graduate, once managed a tour of the famous Triangle Club production, and later became company manager for all of Gertrude Lawrence's recent shows.

Budapest Quartet Salutes Kreisler

THE Budapest Quartet honors Fritiz Kreisler this week, playing his only string quartet. They honor him further by placing his composition between Mozart and Brahms, two composers Kreisler has long played with unique art.

In September, 1950, the Friday Morning Music Club Foundation and Patrick Hayes Award of $1000 will be given for the first time. Candidates must not have reached their twenty-fifth birthday by December 31, 1950. Each must offer from memory 15 representative compositions from the classic, romantic, and modern schools.

Applications must be in the hands of the chairman by midnight, July 15, 1950.

Candidates must be American citizens. For further information and application blanks, write Kathryn Hill Rawls, chairman, 1805 37th st. nw., Washington 7, D. C.

Finalists in the Hamilton National Bank High School Musical Talent Contest will meet in Constitution Hall on Sunday afternoon, May 14. Winning vocalist and instrumentalist will receive college scholarships from the bank. Other awards will go to runners-up and for best school and group performances.

Toscanini tickets range from $3 to $7.20. Two to a customer, with no telephone reservations or mail orders. They go on sale Saturday, April 29, at 10 a. m. at the Hayes Bureau. The program, to be played May 25 is not yet announced. The opening program in New York includes Beethoven's Eroica symphony, Strauss' Don Juan, and Debussy's La Mer, with a Rossini overture.

FRITZ KREISLER
. . . between Mozart and Brahms

Tomorrow night Stan Kenton plays Uline Arena. He is trying to show positive values from jazz in symphonic music. In addition to his former band, he carries added strings and winds. Much of the music for the concert has been written particularly for his tour. He opened in Carnegie Hall several weeks ago.

Delphine Desio, blind Philadelphia cellist, gives a lecture recital at Mount Vernon Seminary on Wednesday evening, April 19.

Coming events: Iturbis, Amparo and Jose, play Constitution Hall next week; the Philadelphia Piano Orchestra of 12 pianos and 24 players comes to Lisner Auditorium on May 1. Program: you guess what will be played by that combination.

Howard University announces its annual Fine Arts Festival for May 2, 3, and 4, with details to follow shortly.

This week's concerts include some outstanding items: Ned Rorem's sonata today at Phillips Gallery; Florence Booker's singers tonight in the National Gallery; Jules Zabawa's recital tomorrow with Theodore Schaefer in his first Washington concert this year; American University's contemporary chamber music Tuesday, and Paul Callaway's chamber chorus Thursday.

Above all these stands Hindemith's great song cycle, Wednesday evening, at the Institute of Contemporary Arts. "Das Marienleben" will receive its Washington premiere at that time. It is a tremendous conception of music and poetry. Mary Alyce

Quick Composition

STEVE NELSON, the composer of "Bouquet of Roses," used to tell his little boy a story every night about a wonderful rabbit. One day, while riding with his family along the Henry Hudson Parkway, Steve was suddenly struck with the idea of writing a song about the fabulous bunny. He turned the wheel of the car over to his wife; and ten minutes later he had written the country's current top hit, "Peter Cottontail."

ON RECORDS

Let's Go to Church Next Sunday

MARGARET WHITING-JIMMY WAKELY, Capitol: When the history of 1950 is written, it must surely be recorded that this was the year that the musical public took a decided fancy to novelties. A novelty, of course, is good only so long as it's novel; and songs such as "I'd've Baked a Cake," "I Said My Pajamas," and "Chattanoogie Shoe Shine Boy" are fun when they are first presented, but are not able to withstand much repetition. Many lovers of beautiful melodies have taken exception to the novelty fad, and have nominated "Music, Music, Music" as the triple misnomer of the year.

This year also marks the discovery of a new trend in popular music far removed from the novelty fad, which I'm sure many of you will find heartening. It all started when Jo Stafford and Gordon MacRae recorded "Whispering Hope," a composition by Alice Hawthorne, the writer of "Listen to the Mocking Bird."

Soon followers of matters musical were treated to the unusual phenomenom of a great demand from the popular music public for a number that was essentially a religious song. Much of the success of "Whispering Hope" was due to the Stafford-MacRae rendition, wherein they employed a simple, old-fashioned type of harmony which is often found in hillbilly duets, and which might be described by a paraphrase on a current song title, "We're Just a Third Apart."

"Whispering Hope" was soon followed by another song of faith, again recorded by Jo Stafford and Gordon MacRae, "Beyond the Sunset," written by a husband and wife team, Virgil and Blanche Brock.

Taking an example from the "Thought for the Day" featured in the last minutes of our Sundial broadcasts, the publishers of "Beyond the Sunset" have included as part of the sheet music a poem which is in the spirit of the song, but which is not contained in Jo Stafford and Gordon MacRae's record, titled, "Should You Go First." I am happy to say that the popular music lovers lost no time in taking this song to their hearts, too.

Realizing the similarity in the duet style of the above records to hillbilly harmony, Capitol has taken a fine new song, "Let's Go to Church Next Sunday," and recorded it with a top Western star, Jimmy Wakely, teamed with the always popular Margaret Whiting.

You'll enjoy the whistleable melody, the spirited performance of the two artists, and the beautiful sentiment of "Let's Go to Church Next Sunday" as expressed in such lines as "Our love will grow each Sunday morning if we have the Lord as our guide."

The wise gentlemen of Tin Pan Alley have only recently discovered that popular music fans enjoy hearing songs of the spirit. It's too bad they didn't ask me, or any of the thousands of Sundial and Moondial listeners whom I hear from through the mail. We could have told them that long ago.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9:30 a. m.; Moondial, 11:20 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

The Record Player

Berlin St. Matthew Passion Choice of Modern Versions

BACH: St. Matthew Passion. Choir of the Berlin Radio, with Boys Choir of St. Hedwig's Cathedral, Berlin Radio Orchestra and soloists under Fritz Lehmann. VOX DL 6070 (4-12" LP records). $24.75.

Dimitri Mitropoulos told me recently that, in his opinion, more large works of the repertoire would find their way to records only if recorded during actual performances.

The record library of many collectors is already impressively augmented by albums of records made during real concerts. Schonberg's "Gurrelieder," Mahler's "Das Lied von der Erde" and his Ninth Symphony, the Toscanini-Rubinstein version of the third concerto of Beethoven, and many more sets were recorded at the moment of playing in public.

With rising costs, union, technical and artistic, Mitropoulos is no doubt corect in his prophecy.

Today we consider such a recording. With the problems incurred under such circumstances, it is my choice for the St. Matthew Passion of the four modern versions of the work now available.

It is in German, it is complete, with no cuts, and it possesses stylistic and technical virtues which outweigh its shortcomings. Other performances include the nearly complete versions in English by the Boston Symphony under Koussevitsky, now deleted from Victor's catalog, English Decca's in English, also nearly complete, and two German versions made during the war, neither complete.

An HMV set, German, boasts Tiana Lemnitz and Karl Erb, directed by Gunther Ramin. Other soloists and the chorus are somewhat unclear. Lemnitz and Erb are superlative. Ramin is now organist of what was Bach's church. Yet this does not give him a particularly relaxed or expressive sense of phrasing.

The Boston version is undistinguished in most respects and, in some ways, very bad.

The new VOX set possesses a beautiful tenor, Helmut Kreps, as the evangelist and in the solos. Their soprano, Elfriede Troetschel, is also generally quite moving. Diana Eutrati, the contralto, has rhythmic problems at times, but remains one of the most impressive singers in her assignments we have had in years. Jesus is sung by one Fischer-Dieskau, who alternates some strident vocalism with very expressive work.

The chorus is above average, and the recording of fine caliber. The recitatives are accompanied by organ in "secco" style, with no sustained tone under them. This is a strange tradition, seldom followed these days, but not disaffecting. Altogether, the recording gives one a real feeling of the spirit and content of the work—with fewer drawbacks than any of the other possibilities.

We will hope for a complete version from Victor with Robert Shaw in charge, at an early date. They are preparing the St. John Passion for Victor at the present time.—HUME.

Pen Women Plan Exhibit

Work by artists of Montgomery County will be shown at Ginn's in Silver Spring beginning April 23. The jury for this event is composed of Washington Artists Theodora Kane, Robert Gates and Omar Carrington.

Next show at the United Nations Club comprises a display of pastels by Jules Pascin, obtained from a New York collection.

In mid-April the Watkins Gallery at American University will open its spring annual exhibit of works purchased for the permanent collection established in honor of the late C. Law Watkins.

The art department of Catholic University is showing Persian and related textiles on loan from the Bershir galleries in New York, in the art gallery, Salve Regina Building, until April 10. (Hours 9 to 6, Monday through Saturday).

"The Titan," Robert Flaherty's motion picture presentation of the story of Michelangelo, produced abroad, opens April 19 at the Dupont Theater. It is one of the best art films yet to be produced.

Artist Has Worked At Nearly Everything

Rochester, Minn. (AP).—Enrique Arguelles has had a varied vocational career, but through it all has run a consistent painting career that started with his high school days in Spain. Currently, he is completing murals on the walls of the taproom in the hotel where he is employed as a bartender. The 47-year-old artist has worked as a hospital cook, a police officer, a machine shop foreman and for five years was a special administrator for President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico. His interest in art is strictly a sideline.

Much of his work has been exhibited. He has painted scores of landscapes and florals. Four of the latter were exhibited several months ago in the Rochester Art Center.

Institute Plans Art Competition In Market City

IN SEARCH of talent, the Institute of Contemporary Arts has announced a competition for painting, drawing, prints, sculpture and crafts to be exhibited at the Center Market City in May. Eligible is anyone residing in the Washington area—amateur, professional, student.

Judges will be Beatrice Rudes, dean of the Institute of Contemporary Arts, Jose Gomez Sicre, chief of the visual arts division of the Pan American Union, Professor James V. Herring, head of the art department at Howard University, and William Calfee, head of the art department of American University.

A one year scholarship will be awarded to the best work submitted by a student of a District High School, consisting of one year's tuition plus materials. Entry blanks may be obtained from teachers or from the 4th floor office of the Institute of Contemporary Arts, 1322 New York ave. nw.

New Rosenwald Additions

Fragile Drawings Steal a Show

By Jane Watson Crane

THE rare, the odd and the beautiful nudge each other on the walls of the National Gallery display room, where a special exhibition of recent additions to the Rosenwald Collection is shown.

While the bulk of the assemblage consists of prints which range in time all the way from the fifteenth to the twentieth century, there is a section devoted to leaves from illuminated manuscripts which go back to the eleventh. A small group of drawings bought from Prince Liechtenstein since the war are so fragile and unobtrusive they could be lost in the shuffle. But in fact they steal the show.

Why should there be such a difference between the line that is captured for reproduction and that which flows freely from the hand of man?

Among the Liechtenstein drawings is a very beautiful silver point of Franco-Flemish origin dating from the fourteenth century, and a delicately fanciful "Saint George" which is claimed, with the cautious addition of a question mark, to have been drawn by the Flemish artist van der Goes.

By Same Artist

IT IS fun to compare prints with drawings by the same artists, as, for example, the German Wolfgang Huber's woodcut of the "Crucifixion" with his pen sketches, "Annunciation to Joachim" and "The Rapids of the Danube." All three have an air of immediacy, for the landscapes are not remote accessories but part of the artist's visual experience. This is particularly true of the "Joachim," the miracle of the annunciation occurring in a Danube valley with shepherds and even the animals looking to the sky.

Again, compare the Italian Domenico Campagnola's drawing of the "Landscape with Boy Fishing" with the stagy "Massacre of the Innocents." The former has some of the quality of the Venetian landscapes by Titian and Giorgione. And here the boy fishing comes alive in a way the writhing figures in the latter miss altogether.

Massacres seem to have been a highly popular subject with medieval printmakers, and the contest seems to have centered on making the most superficial rendering.

Melodrama is present with dramatic effect in Burgkmair's "The Lovers Surprised by Death." Wechtlin's use of "The Skull" recalls Cezanne's more profound handling in a later era.

Unity Not Intended

THE show does not hang together in effective unity—nor is it meant to. It proceeds from early German, Italian and Flemish to a few sixteenth and seventeenth century works (strangest of all these are "The Resurrection" by Pieter Breughel the Elder and the modish "Three Marys at the Tomb," by the Frenchman Jacques Bellange, the latter not unlike the stylish treatment of angels in contemporary Christmas cards).

There are several Rembrandts, including "The Young Haaring," a self-portrait, and another impression of the well-known "Christ at Emmaus," which leads one into the finer points in the game of print collection. There are some notable nineteenth century additions and a few works by the German expressionists. Picasso's head of the bull in "Minotauromachia" stands out with powerful effect in the composition which has moved imitators from Buenos Aires to San Francisco.

The assemblage is arranged in chronological order, with the early religious miniatures at the entrance. One finds religions again where one least expects it—among the contemporaries. Georges Rouault and James Ensor are eloquent spokesmen for a spirit which many claim to be dead or dormant today.

Collector's Passion

THE Lessing Rosenwald Collection was given to the National Gallery in 1943. It turned out to be not a finality but a beginning. For the generous donor has been augmenting and improving it ever since.

Behind the present selection is the collector's passion for seeking out and acquiring the hard to find and the best available. As a result, the show is somewhat heterogeneous, and the reasons for inclusion of some items will escape the casual observer.

However, the majority of observers, who do not care to wander off into matters of origin, rarity, print impressions and the like, will find much to enjoy for its own sake.

Venice Art Show

Venice, Italy (AP). — Britain, France and Belgium have announced plans to participate in the twenty-fifth international art exhibit here in June.

Art News in Brief

THE Washington Fine Arts Society has given "Peasant Mother," a carved sculpture in teakwood by Heinz Warneke, to the Corcoran Gallery of Art in memory of Miss Leila Mechlin. The presentation will be at the Gallery today at 3 p. m., with Albert W. Atwood making the presentation and Corcoran Thom receiving the gift.

AN EXHIBITION of pottery by Audrey Hayden and various other members of the Washington Kiln Club will be held in the Dogwood Valley Pottery Studio, 7241 Brinkley rd. se., Camp Springs, Md., through April. The opening tea will be held this afternoon from 4 to 7.

THE ARTS CLUB is exhibiting works by members of the Washington Water Color Society. Exhibitors with water colors which stand out include Richard Collins, Eliot O'Hara, Josephine Danforth, Carl Nyquist, Rudolf von Huhn, Theodora Kane, Ruth Perkins Stafford and Mary Etta Sharpe.

HERMANN WILLIAMS, Jr., director of the Corcoran, is back from a trip to England and the Continent, where he gathered material for the coming historical show to be held this summer in conjunction with the Sesquicentennial. Bernice Cross has a one-man show of recent paintings at the Whyte Gallery, her first in Washington for some time.

COMING TO WASHINGTON eventually is the exhibition of work by the Norwegian painter, Edvard Munch, which opens this week at the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston. The show is the first retrospective to be held in this country of the work of the Scandinavian painter who contributed so greatly to the expressionist movement. When seen here in Washington, his work will be at the Phillips Gallery.

A MONOGRAPH on Edward Hopper, contemporary American artist honored this season with a retrospective show at the Whitney Museum in New York, will be published April 21 by Penguin, British firm. Author is Lloyd Goodrich.

ABBOTT ART SCHOOL in Washington has issued a prospectus outlining courses for its summer school.

THE INSTITUTE of Contemporary Arts is sponsoring a competitive exhibit to be held in the Center Market City in May. Beatrice Rudes, dean, heads the jury of selection. Aim is to discover and promote new talent in modern art. Anyone may compete, student, amateur or professional. For further information address the institute, 1322 New York ave. nw.

Exhibit to Chicago

The exhibition of work by Polish children, shown here at Howard University, has gone to Chicago for display there. It will be included in the Denver international children's show. The paintings come from art centers in Poland, where classes are conducted by artists for adults and children. The work, which is of high caliber and interest, was well received here.—J. W. C.

CONTEMPORARY ART

Not all modern art is abstract, incomprehensible and expensive. We will be pleased to show you great art works at prices that definitely do not require a fat bank account. For example: Original etchings and lithographs signed by BENTON, GROPPER and other greats of American art . . . $5. Unexcelled reproductions of PICASSO, CURRY, WOOD and others . . . $7.50. Framed miniature reproductions . . . $3 to $4.75.

Mule Has Role in 'Loyalty Probe'

Synopsis: Maureen Van Gelder, very beautiful indeed, popped up in camp and fell for the lieutenant. He told her about Francis, the talking, flying mule, and they went out to see the strange animal. Maureen and Francis clash at once, and Francis told her he could see through her "like a book."

By David Stern

MAUREEN whitened. It was most becoming. "Don't you like me." She spoke in a tiny voice that cut through me like shrapnel.

The mule turned. "You trust her, don't you, lieutenant?"

"Certainly he trusts me." Maureen flickered an eyelash.

"Just what are you leading up to?" I asked.

"I'm leading up to the point," said the mule, "that Maureen Van Gelder is an Axis agent."

"Is a what! . . ."

"The animal is insane!" said Maureen. "If you and I aren't insane for believing it can talk."

"Be that as it may," said Francis, "the young lady is still an Axis agent."

"Please make it stop saying such frightful things," Maureen gazed up at me, and her eyes were wide with innocence.

"Francis," I said, "I ought to get a club and beat you within an inch of your life."

"But you won't," said Francis.

"Why won't I?" I was furious.

"You won't," said Francis, "because when my CO asked why you were beating me, you'd have to tell him. Then the lady would be investigated."

"You mean you think they'd investigate Maureen just because you said she was a spy?"

"Not at all," said Francis. "They'd investigate her because you said she was a spy. They'd figure you said a mule told you just to be funny. Then, later, they'd investigate you."

Hands Clinched

MAUREEN was standing very still, and I noted that her hands were clenched into little balls. She looked up at me again.

"Please make it stop saying such frightful things." Maureen gazed up at me and her eyes were wide with innocence

"Your mule is so cute," she said. "But I think we have talked to long enough. Shall we go"

I glanced at my beautiful vision, then at Francis. "Why do you believe this girl is a spy?" I asked.

"Analysis," Francis said.

"Your mule is just trying to be clever." Maureen's hand was in mine.

"Deductive analysis and good, old-fashioned mule sense," Francis said.

"What do you mean, "mule sense?" I asked.

"Something a second lieutenant wouldn't understand," Francis snorted. "But it's extremely reliable."

"Shall we go now?" asked Maureen. "I've really heard all I want."

"Just a minute." I was too wary of the mule to brush aside the accusation. "Francis, have you anything more than just a suspicion?"

"Most certainly," said Francis.

"On what do you base it?"

"Look at the facts," said the mule, "just look at the facts. One white woman in the entire western end of Burma. Thousands of officers, generals, colonels, majors, all for a dime a dozen. The lady has her choice. And what does she pick? A second lieutenant who has just been transferred to G-2. Does that add up?"

Direct Hit on Toe

SUDDENLY the mule moved sideways. One hoof shot out. It came down squarely on Maureen's dainty toe.

"Gott im Himmel!" screamed the lady.

"There, I told you," said the mule, regaining balance.

Maureen was standing on one foot, grasping her other foot with both hands. She was obviously in pain. Never was a junior officer in such a predicament.

"Mein Fuss, mein Fuss."

"'Mein fuss' is right," said Francis.

Maureen tested her shoe on the ground and found she could stand.

"Fool," she said, "stupid American fool! Think you tricked me, don't you? Well, it won't do you any good!"

Maureen was facing me. Her right hand darted into her handbag, emerged with a tiny revolver. It was pointed directly at my midriff.

"Don't move," the girl ordered. "it's a shame to waste bullets on such a Dummkopf. If you have any prayers to say, be quick about them."

"Here we go again," said Francis almost with a sigh.

"And I'm not being fooled by any more animal tricks," said Maureen.

The revolver rose slightly. The girl steadied her arm.

I saw Francis' rear legs swing in a beautiful arc. They caught the lady flush behind the banyan tree.

The entire G-2 was delighted with the capture of Maureen Van Gelder.

My new colonel sent for me. He was profuse in his praise, suggesting I had devoted so much of my time to the lady in the interest of the service. He requested a detailed account of what had happened.

I told him.

Two hours later I was back in the neuropsychiatric ward.

For two weeks I was bumped and thumped, tested and observed. My cranium was measured and lights were flashed in my eyes.

When the doctors asked me about Francis, I said I didn't know what they were talking about.

I was dismissed from the neuropsychiatric ward and told to report for duty.

'Paid Our Dues'

Champions Leave Video For Movies

IF YOU think television is a new medium, forget it. It's so old entertainers are now leaving it for other mediums. Marge and Gower Champion, the delightful dancing couple who lent so much to the Admiral Shows on NBC-TV, have given up TV entirely for two years in order to get a good toe-hold in that creaky old medium—the movies. Their contract with M-G-M, for whom they've made "Mr. Music" with Bing Crosby, prohibits television appearances for that period.

The Champions felt pangs about signing such a contract. "We owe more to television than to any other medium," Marge admits, "but I think we've paid our dues. We used to rehearse six days a week, eight hours a day for the television show."

The Champions, who were here recently dancing at the Statler's Embassy Room, exchanged a chortle with Dick Pribor, their musical accomplice, "Remember when they used to lock us in a room at 10 a. m. and let us out at 6 p. m.?" Marge recollected. "They'd come in every hour to ask if we had the dance routine and music ready," she added.

If it weren't for a backlog of about 10 TV-type routines the Champions never would have survived the 17 weeks of the Admiral Show, they maintain.

Both Champions get a kick out of the way they are now recognized in department stores and on the street. "Television did it," they claim, since they've both done nightclub and stage shows without getting their faces known beyond the Times Square area.

Jody Miller is another TV asset who has deserted the medium. Jody, our Miss Washington of 1948, has been singing at the King Cole Room, and then later added the Hecht Co.'s Monday, Wednesday, Friday television show to her chores. Now she ups and leaves Washington to go on the road for a chain of hotels.

It's too bad for us. When Jody did some shows for the CBS color television people, they had a fit over her high, rounded cheekbones—they worried that people would think the round shadows came from something strange about color TV. But on black-and-white TV, where nobody worries about such trivialities, Jody was telegenic in the extreme.

Faye Emerson's television show has moved to NBC-TV. Now heard at 10:30 p. m. Saturdays, immediately following the 2½-hour "Saturday Night Revue," it's a shortie. Just 15 minutes of Faye and guests

"GREAT EXPECTATIONS," starring lovely Joan Fontaine, (above) Richard Todd and Francis L. Sullivan, will be the presentation tonight of "Theatre Guild on the Air" WRC, 8:30 p. m.

Receding Hairline Harasses Henry

TELEVISION certainly hits the audience between the eyes. Jackie Kelk, who has been playing Homer on "The Aldrich Family" radio show for 11 years and has been playing him on the TV show for only "26 long, hard weeks," suddenly finds himself the object of double takes. Jaws drop, youngsters climb all over him for autographs.

Ezra Stone who has been radio-acting the leading unfortunate, Henry Aldrich, for more than 11 years—minus a few years in the Army — can't play the teenage Henry on TV because of a receding hairline and an expanding waistline. So star or no star, he gets overlooked while the autograph hunters ogle Homer. Still, somebody stopped Stone at the Mayflower Hotel recently when he was here to emcee some cherry blossom festivities. But it was short glory — he'd been mistaken for Columnist George Dixon.

Garroway Sells

Dave Garroway, upsetter of traditions in television, upset another recently. Blessed at last with a sponsor for his NBC show, he purchased 100 shares of stock in the company. Sold by his own commercials, probably.

Westerns Every Day

To cater to fans of Western films on television, WMAL-TV has added a Sunday program "Range Riders" from 4:30 to 5, rounding out a seven-day presentation of Westerns.

Opera Done in Essen

Plans 13 Shows a Season

Hope's TV Plunge Spurs Eddie Cantor

By C. E. Butterfield

NOW THAT Bob Hope has made a $40,000 plunge into network television, Eddie Cantor has begun to think more seriously about his plans to drop radio for TV next fall after a vacation.

Cantor plans to do only 13 shows a season, spaced about three weeks apart. He thinks a performer tends to wear out his screen welcome faster if he does a show more frequently. Furthermore, he expects to need that much time to get a good program together.

As to the type of telecast, Cantor is not too definite. It won't be variety, but he plans to form a stock company for his productions under NBC contract.

Eddie ends his current radio assignment as MC of "Take Or Leave It," on June 4 after 19 years of broadcasting. After he gets into television, he intends to confine his radio to a strict guest appearance basis.

Because his telecasts will be produced in New York, and also to give two of his daughters, Janet and Marilyn now in the East, a "nicer place to live," Cantor is investigating the possibility of buying some New York real estate. Before transferring activities to Hollywood he had quite a Long Island estate.

Cantor has been spending considerable time in New York lately as part of a personal appearance tour. Among other activities, he has been sitting for a portrait. Eddie explained that his only object was to help out a young artist.

REACTIONS to Bob Hope's introduction to network television brought comment ranging all the way from "fairly good" to "excellent." The show, as was to be expected, was crammed with "Hopeisms." To some it may have seemed like a cross between the Milton Berle type of variety bill and the current Saturday Night Revue.

Opinions differed over how much of a threat Hope might turn out to be to Berle's title of "Mr. Television." Most thought, however, that Berle still was well-established in that category.

THE annual program problem brought on by daylight again is being solved in network radio by setting up the system of double operation television hookups will switch entirely to daylight. The "fast" time will go into effect two weeks from Sunday, to continue through the last Sunday in September.

The radio networks will transmit programs first on daylight time, then relay them again from transcriptions an hour later to stations on standard time.

Television networks are going to a full daylight schedule because most of the communities served operate under daylight. The comparative few stations which stay on standard are expected to rearrange local schedules to fit in the network shows.

AMERICAN televiewers soon are to get a chance to see an English version of a variety show. Patterned after the BBC's TV "Cafe Continental," a 13-weeks series has been put on film in London for distribution to eight big cities. Each section runs 15 minutes.

The program is built around an American singer, Isabel Bigley of New York, who has been in London since 1947. The producer is another New Yorker, 30-year-old John Nasht.

A TELEVISION version of Beulah, CBS radio skit five times a week, is being set up for next fall, but to be carried by ABC-TV. Ethel Waters will play the lead as Hattie McDaniels continues in the radio version. The same sponsor is putting on both series, the TV to be on motion picture film.

Natural Bridge Is One Of World's Wonders

PERHAPS the most famous patch of sky in the world exists over Rockbridge County, Va., along U. S. Highway 11, says the Virginia Travel Council. Although hundreds of thousands see it annually, this sky view is rarely observed for itself, however, for it is framed by one of the seven natural wonders of the world, the Natural Bridge.

When the visitor stops at the luxurious Natural Bridge Hotel, the newly completed motor lodge, or Gate House, there is a tingle of anticipation. And that feeling increases after passing through the Gate House and walking down the dogwood lined path beside a chuckling stream and past gnarled, twisted arbor vitae trees estimated to have been growing a thousand years before the discovery of America.

Natural Bridge can only be done justice by actually seeing it. Except for the ceaseless chatter of Cedar Creek which flows under the massive stone arch, a hush of incredibility falls on the groups of visitors when first viewing this handiwork of God.

Legend says Natural Bridge was discovered by Indians, who had been praying for an escape route over the sheer walls of the canyon which it spans. Indian women and children were supposed to have tested its strength by crossing before the nonexpendable braves. The bridge is estimated to weigh more than 36,000 tons. It is more than 40 feet thick, 215 feet high—some 55 feet higher than Niagara Falls, —and averages over 80 feet wide.

Natural Bridge is open the year around. At night it is spectacularly lighted by concealed beacons while a recorded voice intones the Bible account of creation, accompanied by choral and organ music.

Shuttling from the gate house to the bridge, stubby little buses carry the old, invalids and the weary along a short winding road, paralleling the beautiful walkway.

Through the giant stone arch and back along a path that parallels Cedar Creek, the visitor will see Saltpetre Cave, the Lost River whose source and destination have never been found, and finally beautiful Lace Falls where the creek flows into the gorge.

Just completed is a large auditorium and convention hall. Natural Bridge is convenient for visiting other natural and historic attractions in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley.

Natural Bridge Is Just a Job

NATURAL BRIDGE, Va. (AP).

"Everybody says this Natural Bridge is so wonderful. Well, mebbe so, I ain't never been nowheres else," says Joseph Mitchell. He was born at Natural Bridge July 12, 1871. He began work at 10 as a stable boy, but was soon apprenticed as a gardener. He has been at it ever since.

"I guess nobody's told me to do anything in 10 years. If I didn't rummage around and find something to keep busy at, I guess I'd just vegetate," he says. Asked advice on how to keep a job 68 years, he said: "Keep out of the boss' sight."

Appalachian Trail Is Handy to Washington

By George E. Huber

A HIKING and camping trip along the Appalachian Trail near Washington—or along any section of this 2050-mile mountain footpath stretching from Maine to Georgia—affords an outdoors vacation for those looking for something different this summer.

An Appalachian Trail trip is ideal for the occasional hiker. It doesn't require the heavy equipment or long back-breaking hauls necessary for some "back to nature" trips. The AT is a well marked and well maintained footpath along the Eastern mountain crests, frequently crossed by roads and public transportation routes. Trips can be as long or as short as preference dictates.

Only one man, in fact, has done the entire 2050 miles in one trip, but thousands use it regularly for hikes of a few days to a few weeks. The trail is maintained by 20-odd clubs along its route which are members of the Appalachian Trail Conference, and the 225-mile section near Washington maintained by the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club is considered one of the best, both from a scenic standpoint and for the condition of its trails and shelters.

The PATC section—which of course can be used by non-members as well as members—stretches from near Harrisburg, Pa., on the Susquehanna River to Rockfish Gap at the southern end of Shenandoah National Park where the road between Charlottesville and Waynesboro, Va., crosses Skyline Drive.

One big advantage of this section is that it contains a complete chain of lean-tos or shelters for overnight stays, making it unnecessary to carry a tent and right away getting rid of one big and heavy piece of equipment.

Lean-to Is Substantial

AN APPALACHIAN Trail lean-to is something more than the word implies. It is a roofed, three-sided, open-faced structure of stone or heavy timber. Inside are hardware cloth (wire) bunks, or in some cases spring bunks, with the usual capacity of six. A fireplace is in front and a spring is always nearby, also a latrine and garbage dump.

In the PATC section these lean-tos are spaced an easy day's walk apart, usually from 5 to 10 miles and very rarely as much as 15. All the PATC asks is that users clean up trash and garbage after them and leave the shelters in good condition for the next party.

An AT hiking trip is an inexpensive one, but should not be considered a cheap one. Good equipment is necessary, but once purchased it will last for years.

Footwear is the most important clothing item. Shoes should be high enough to support the ankles, and wool hose, or wool over silk, is standard wear. Shorts and skirts generally are impractical—too much chance of being scratched by briars. Best are cotton or denim slacks and a cotton or lightweight wool shirt for summer. A sweater or jacket should be taken for the cool days and cold nights encountered in the mountains. For rain protection a large lightweight poncho is best; it also can be used as a ground cloth under a sleeping bag and will serve as an emergency tent.

Most important other item is the pack. It should be a frame pack designed to support the load high on the shoulders and away from the small of the back, or better still a pack board. Both are inexpensive. A pack that rides low or which does not keep the load away from the back will be uncomfortable and should be avoided. Cooking and eating utensils should be of light weight.

A good night's sleep is a prime requisite for an enjoyable hiking trip, and a sleeping bag—lightweight and filled with down or part down and part duck feathers—will be found more comfortable than blankets. The sleeping bag likely will be the most expensive individual item. Other items include a compass, canteen, flashlight, a good hand ax, a first-aid kit, insect repellant and maps of the area through which you plan to hike.

Food Is Important

REMEMBER that everything you take will have to be carried on your back, so take only items you use every day. Equipment used only occasionally is not worth carrying.

Food naturally is of prime importance. A hiker needs good food and plenty of it, but it is impossible to carry too much weight and still enjoy a trip. Avoid as much as possible liquids and canned foods. Dehydrated potatoes, dry milk, powdered coffee, sugar (some use saccharine as a lightweight substitute), chocolate, dried soups, vegetables and fruits, biscuit flower mixes, pancake flour, powdered desserts and so forth are good items.

Meats mostly will be canned—such as dry beef, which is a lightweight staple—and corned beef and bacon.

(Further information on the Appalachian Trail near Washington is available through the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club, 1916 Sunderland pl. nw., open from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m., Mondays through Fridays. Experienced members will advise those planning trips. A booklet giving locations, approaches and descriptions of lean-tos is available for 10 cents, plus postage if requested by mail. Colored contour maps plus literature on hiking, camping and trail work are available at cost.

(Information on other sections of the trail is available through the Appalachian Trail Conference, same address.)

Virginia Has Special Lure For Freshwater Angler

VIRGINIA'S trout streams have a special appeal. They pitch down from the Blue Ridge and Alleghany ranges all the way from the Potomac to the Tennessee line. Brook and rainbow trout are stocked regularly by the State in 132 streams. Many of the fish run to 18 and 20 inches.

A high percentage resists the embellishments of thousands of fishermen. The season opens April 20, and in the summer the streams are stocked again. The season closes September 15.

With increased popularity of artificial baits—particularly flies—the fishing for warm-water species is becoming more and more popular in the Piedmont and Tidewater sections. In the ponds and tidal rivers, largemouth bass, bream and crappie are unexcelled in the East. While many of the best lakes are in the hands of private clubs, there are nearly 100 public ponds, and the rivers and their tributaries are always open.

A sport with particular appeal, especially in the spring, is angling for bluegill with light fly tackle. Bream grow unusually large in many of the waters of this State and the surface lures are particularly effective. Rock bass, crappie, yellow perch and other game fish also are taken in this style.

Virginia is divided, roughly, into three fresh-water fishing belts. The mountains are noted for trout fishing, with smallmouth bass in large numbers inhabiting the slower streams. In the Piedmont region there is excellent fishing for smallmouth bass, long-eared sunfish and rock bass. The warm Tidewater ponds and streams, with their sandy bottoms and dense vegetation, are ideal for the largemouth bass, bluegill and other sunfish.

In most cases, no guides are needed. On the public ponds, boats are available at moderate cost, and along the streams there are innumerable boats for rent at nominal fees.

The weather is normally mild and a great many large bass and pickerel are taken with natural baits in winter. Fishing on Sunday is permitted.

Directory Lists Oregon Glaciers

Salem, Oreg., April 15 (Spl.)—Something new under the travel sun is reported for the Oregon alpine country, of especial interest to mountain climbers.

The Oregon highway commission travel information department explains that a new type of directory—a glacier directory—has just been compiled by the United States Geologic Survey, giving size and location of each of Oregon's 36 glaciers.

Mt. Hood, 11,245 feet high, the State's loftiest peak, heads the list with eleven. Research reveals that all the glaciers, remnants of ageless ice fields, are in the process of recession. However, in their recession, some continue of great size and offer unusual beauty.

'Bettie-Coed Tour' Set This Summer

A new European travel service, "Bettie-Coed Tours," will be inaugurated this summer. The trips will include student tours, economy jaunts, European ramble travels and art and education trips.

They will be organized by Bettie McNamara, Times Herald reporter, and Laura Waters of the Waters Travel Agency.

Miss McNamara will leave May 9 on a two-month tour personally conducted by Mrs. Waters. They will sail on the Queen Mary. They will visit England, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy and France.

Credit Unions Join Airline Tour Plan

THE 80,000 members of credit unions in and near Washington may have their summer vacation problems solved painlessly through a plan announced by the District of Columbia Credit Union League in co-operation with National Airlines.

Miss Madeline M. Guinnane, president of the Credit Union League and treasurer of the FHA Employment Union, said that every member of the 130 unions in the area is now eligible for financing of exceptionally low all-expense trips on a "travel now, pay later" basis. The plan will be in effect throughout the spring and summer.

Under this arrangement Washingtonians can get a packaged vacation trip to Miami Beach, Florida, of six nights and seven days for only $103.45. This includes the air travel to Florida and back on National, a room in a luxury hotel, sightseeing tours and entertainment — everything except meals. This is made possible, it was explained, by National Airlines' club coach fare and Florida's energetic bid for summer vacation business which will reduce luxury hotel rates as much as 80 percent.

Complete information on the travel plan is available at all credit union offices where the financial arrangements will be made. All the vacationer will need to do is make his own reservation with National.

National Airlines observed that in pioneering summer excursion fares last year, it had found a need for deferred payment plans by people who wanted to buy beach clothes, luggage and other equipment and still take advantage of a summer vacation in Florida.

The Wild West Is Revived In Big Bend, Deep in Texas

THE wild, primeval West has staked out a man-sized claim for itself at Big Bend National Park, deep in the Lone Star State.

This newest of the country's recreational preserves, due for official dedication in the autumn, almost matches the size of Rhode Island, the National Geographic Society notes. It is named for the wide loop of the Rio Grande outlining the great scallop of west Texas which dips toward Mexico.

Although the area is believed one of the first in the United States ever traversed by white men—the Spanish conquistador, Alvar Nunez Cabeza de Vaca, passed this way in 1528—much of it remains unexplored four centuries later.

With the exception of a few roads and a small cluster of tourist cabins, the dramatic appearance of the reservation has changed little since Cabeza de Vaca's day. The same jagged pinnacles of the Chisos (Ghost) Mountains tower like rough skyscrapers above the flat desert floor, and the sun fires them with shifting color from dawn until dusk.

The normally low and sluggish waters of the Rio Grande, a silver ribbon when viewed from the Chisos, belie the once awesome might of a river that aeons ago gouged out the spectacular canyons of the park's rugged scenery. One—the Santa Elena Canyon—is some 12 miles long and over 1,500 feet in depth.

Bygone marauders and badmen found the wild and remote character of the region almost ideal for their lawless purposes. The Comanche Indians used the Big Bend country as an escape route after their savage attacks on Mexican haciendas. It served too, as a hideout and operating base for six-shooter desperadoes who looted banks and mail trains.

Legend has it that the area is dotted with "lost" mines, sealed up by fleeing Spaniards or dying Indians. Prospectors still seek these elusive treasure troves despite repeated disappointments. Caves, however, have yielded valuable artifacts of the early Texans, the pre-Basket Maker Indians. On the great rocks of the Chisos Mountains are picture writings which may have been made about the time of Christ.

Fossils of clams, some four feet long and three feet wide, and other relics of a prehistoric sea also have been found there, along with remains of dinosaurs.

Upturned mountains, giant cracks in the earth and rainbow colors on the walls of sheer rock complete the picture of a region battered by nature's every weapon—invading oceans, volcanoes, earthquakes and endless erosion.

Golf Tournament Heads Wildwood List of Events

Wildwood, N. J., April 15.—The first of a series of major sporting events at Wildwood is listed for Friday, April 21—the twenty-seventh annual Eastern States Inaugural Tournament at the Wildwood Golf and Country Club. Golfers will compete for the C. A. (Gus) Heil, jr., memorial trophy.

Provisions are being made for six 16s, and players will qualify in their own handicap. Friday will be featured by qualifying round 18 holes medal play, and on April 22, match play, two rounds will take place. Semi-finals will be held April 23 in the morning, with finals in the afternoon.

Improvement to Ottens Harbor, at a cost of $85,000, was announced last week. The State has allotted funds for dredging.

A brochure for fishermen is available from the Bureau of Public Relations.

It contains the names of party boats and their locations, tides for June, July, August and September, bait to be used and where the species may be found.

Wildwood will be the scene of the annual South Jersey marbles tourney May 27.

Bangtails, Baseball, Boxing, Or Just Relax at Miami Beach

SPRINGTIME is relaxation time in Miami Beach. The springtime visitor finds the tempo and the temperature just right for a vacation under the sun.

Gentle breezes and the mild climate lend themselves to sunbathing, swimming, fishing, tennis or spectator sports.

As a spectator, the Miami Beach visitor has a choice of thoroughbred horse racing at Gulfstream Park, baseball, boxing, wrestling or greyhound racing.

Golfers will find Miami Beach's two city-operated courses—Bayshore and Normandy Shores. Both have complete clubhouse facilities.

Tennis may be enjoyed at the city's parks or on hotel courts.

Fishing is to be had along the 30 miles of Miami Beach's inland waterways or in one of 50 charter boats.

For the feminine visitor, there is window shopping along Lincoln Road, the famous shopping center which crosses Miami Beach from the Atlantic Ocean to Biscayne Bay.

Rough It or Swank It— Colorado's a Versatile State

COLORADO is prepared for a big travel year. Fishing lodges, motor courts and resorts have been improved and many new accommodations have been built.

Excellent accommodations are found high in the Rockies, or in picturesque resorts near the mountains, adjacent to beautiful beaches, medicinal hot springs, timberline lakes, trout-filled streams; national forests, monuments and parks. Visitors who prefer to "rough it" can get along with a sleeping bag; others may find well-equipped cabins in fishing areas; modern, reasonable motels; streamlined metropolitan hotels in cities and towns or luxurious resort hotels.

Dude ranches are ready to entertain the Nation with roundups, pack trips into the wilderness where trout fishing in a secluded Alpine lake is as exciting as the trail itself. Colorado guest ranches offer the finest saddle strings obtainable, and ranch life is informal.

The hardy outdoor visitor will enjoy real camp life—a sleeping bag, a Colorado moon, the tang of cedar and sage.

LOTS OF PEOPLE Go Now

VACATION COSTS REDUCED!

Ever think of why so many people take spring vacations in the South? There are many sound reasons!

All nature is bursting into exotic semi-tropic splendor. Coming at winter's end it shortens the time until summer. Preceding summer, it lengthens that enjoyable season. Then, too, hotel rates and living costs are much lower! Your vacation dollars buy so much more.

And carfare by Coast Line train costs less than you probably think! For instance, consider how little a reserved seat costs on a streamlined coach! From Washington to Miami, $29.13; to Orlando, $23.63; to St. Petersburg, $26.26. (Plus Federal tax.) Other fares equally low. And you can save by buying round trip tickets.

Yes, there are sound reasons why so many prefer spring vacations. And why they prefer to travel by Coast Line train!

FIRST IN FLORIDA TRAVEL

More people travel to and from Florida by Coast Line than by any other railroad serving the State. With the newest-type Pullman, Coach, Tavern and Dining cars and with new, smooth, safety-protected roadbed, Coast Line is setting new high standards for Southern travel. So when making reservations and buying tickets, be sure to insist upon a Coast Line train by name.

Vacation Fun... is a family affair in Cool NEW MEXICO
THE LAND OF ENCHANTMENT

Travelers who have "seen everything" thrill anew to New Mexico. For some the thrill comes from the picturesqueness of the real Indian Country, the colorful costumes and the pagan ceremonial dances. For some it is the glamour of the Old West, still real and genuine in New Mexico. Some love the romance of the state that was once New Spain, and that today still holds to the culture and graciousness of its Spanish forebears. For many it's the glorious climate of sunny days and blanket-cool nights, the magnificence of the scene—wide sweeping mesas and cloud-piercing timbered mountains. And for others it is the great store of history—prehistoric cliff ruins, centuries-old Mission Churches, ancient records carved in stone. Whatever lures you—whatever romance means to you, New Mexico will give you.

Skiing Still Good In New Hampshire

High altitude snow bowls in New Hampshire are providing extra good spring skiing this year, and are expected to keep on furnishing enticing corn snow conditions through April. Most of the lift and tow slopes will be "washed out" long before the sheltered snow bowls and pockets give up their ski stuff.

Dependable late skiing areas include Waterville Valley, Mount Moosilauke, summit of Cannon—and of course there's always Tuckerman Ravine, high on the east slope of Mount Washington, where the ski season is just beginning.

Six Glaciers in Colorado

There are six glaciers in the Roosevelt National Forest in north central Colorado, the largest of which, Arapahoe Glacier, is approximately a mile and a half long, nearly a mile wide and from 100 to 500 feet in depth.

West Virginia Offers Scenic Treats

THE TRAVELER in search of evidences of spring will find a treasure chest of scenic beauty in West Virginia.

A prime springtime attraction is the blossom season in the great apple and peach orchards in the Eastern Panhandle and South Branch Valley regions. In mid-April these rolling fruit belts become huge masses of pink and white blossoms. On "Apple Pie Ridge," near Martinsburg, fragrant orchards line the highways for miles.

Nature adds resplendent beauty to the mountain areas of Monongahela National Forest and the numerous State parks and forests in West Virginia.

The 1,700,000-acre Monongahela Forest includes a number of State-supported recreation areas. One of these is Watoga State Park, largest in the State system. Located near Marlinton, the park offers vacation cabins, a lake, where trees and flowers may be studied in their native habitat.

In Blackwater Falls State Park, near Davis and not far from Elkins, the amber waters of a mountain stream cascade over a 63-foot ledge at the head of Blackwater Canyon.

Other interesting features are: Spruce Knob, in Pendleton County, the highest point in the State (elevation 4,860 feet); Cranberry Glades, near Mill Point, a strange tract of misplaced tundra which produce orchids and other rare plants; Seneca Rocks, on U. S. 33, a gleaming tower of white quartzite; and Stuart Memorial Drive. The Drive, a U. S. Forest Service road, begins on U. S. 33 near Elkins and climbs to the summit of Bickle Knob, affording a breath-taking view.

West Virginia has two large reservoir lakes, both stocked annually with game fish and open to anglers the year around. Tygart Valley Dam, near Grafton, has facilities for camping and picnicking. Bluestone Dam, in the southern section of the State, provides a variety of water sports.

Skis Flash as Vermont Sap Flows

MONTPELIER, Vt., April 15.—Four million Vermont maple trees will yield 2,131,200,000,000 drops of sap this spring. What this boils down to (literally) is about one million gallons of maple syrup.

The best skiing of the year is reported at high altitudes as the first thaws introduce the sugar season.

With scattering reports from maple producers, Vermont authorities refuse to predict a season trend, but farmers hope 1950 will put an end to the below-normal output of recent years. Vermont produces more than 11 million pounds of maple products.

Niagara Falls to Have Split Personality Soon

ONE of the scenic wonders of the world is developing a split personality.

Niagara Falls—twin cataracts separating the United States and Canada—can be expected to put on their usual spectacular show during daylight hours for some 3 million visitors this season, but after dark much of their tumbling waters will be diverted to produce electric power.

The double-shift schedule for Niagara is posted in the new U. S.-Canadian treaty which is designed to please both honeymooner and industrialist alike. It makes possible a heavy increase of power output and at the same time provides adequate safeguards for preserving the beauty of the famous falls, the National Geographic Society says.

Of the estimated 200,000 cubic feet of water that normally would pass over the falls each second, henceforth 100,000 cubic feet will be reserved for the cataracts' daytime flow during spring and summer months. At nights and in the off-season for tourists all but 50,000 cubic feet per second is expected to be diverted above the falls for hydroelectric use.

Before the land surrounding the falls was made a State park in 1883, every possible view of the spectacle was controlled by private interests. Side shows—featuring tattoo artists, animal freaks, fortune tellers, fat ladies and other "come-on" attractions—lined the sides of the river.

The prohibition era produced another strange chapter, with the entire Niagara River a hot spot for rum-running and hijacking. The innocent sightseer found it safer not to stroll in the vicinity after dark.

Today Niagara Falls are at their peak as a well-controlled natural beauty spot. The new international treaty not only provides for an adequate flow of water over the falls. Remedial dams upstream and other measures also are planned to prevent erosion.

Myrtle Beach To Honor Queens

Myrtle Beach, S. C.—A balanced program of entertainment and rest is planned here for the visiting queens of Charleston's Azalea Festival when they arrive here for the weekend of April 22-23.

Oliver Miller, chairman of the entertainment committee, said that ample opportunity would be given the queens to relax, swim and sunbathe on Myrtle Beach's broad strand.

Planned entertainment includes a street parade on Saturday and a dance that night in the open air patio of the Ocean Forest Hotel. The queens will be guests of Holcombe Manor.

Railroad Oddly Named

The Sante Fe railway was named for Santa Fe, N. Mex., but never ran through it. Instead, a spur line serves Santa Fe, capital of the State.

Age of Wye Oak Placed at 400

Maryland's choice of the white oak as the official State tree is credited to the majestic Wye Oak at Wye Mills, Talbot County, on the Eastern Shore.

One of the Nation's largest, the far-spreading Wye Oak is 95 feet high and about four centuries old, says the National Geographic Society.

Williamsburg Presents Arms Of Revolution

ONE of the most complete collections of colonial weapons and military stores in this country is exhibited in the Eighteenth Century arsenal in Williamsburg, Va., which supplied George Washington and George Rogers Clark.

The octagonal magazine with the adjacent guardhouse, located near the center of restored Williamsburg, is one of seven major exhibition buildings maintained by Colonial Williamsburg. Daily hundreds of visitors tour the Eighteenth Century storehouse, guided by guardsmen in Colonial dress.

The arsenal includes cannon, muskets—many from the Tower of London which supplied the magazine — cartridge-making equipment, pistols and the equipment of the armourer.

The magazine figured prominently in early American history when, within 48 hours of the "shot heard around the world" at Lexington and Concord, the Royal Governor of Virginia ordered the powder secretly removed under cover of night to a British warship in a nearby river. An irate citizenry rose up in angry protest upon discovery and Patrick Henry led an armed band of volunteers in a march on Williamsburg until the Governor made restitution in the first physical resistance of the Revolution in Virginia.

Carvel Hall to Be Run On American Plan

Carvel Hall, Annapolis, Md., has been sold by the Sheraton Corp. to Harold K. Wolfson. He plans to operate it on the American plan this summer. Comfortable rooms, good food, golf, swimming and fishing will be available.

Dr. Freeman To Be Narrator At Appomattox

THE CONFEDERATE Army's last stand will be described by a historian of the Civil War at Appomattox at the dedication of the McLean House.

From the restored porch of the house where Gen. Robert E. Lee surrendered to Gen. U. S. Grant on April 9, 1865, Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman will describe Lee's retreat from Richmond and his ultimate surrender. Dr. Freeman is author of a four-volume biography of Lee and a four-volume history of his staff members, "Lee's Lieutenants."

The McLean House has been made a shrine in the 970-acre Appomattox Court House National Historical Monument. The original farmhouse was torn down in 1893 with the idea of reassembling it in Washington as a war museum. The plan was never carried out.

The brick building will not be completely furnished for the occasion. Many patriotic organizations in both the South and North will decorate and furnish the house.

The McLean House is one of several buildings on the site of Old Appomattox Court House. The National Park Service has undertaken extensive reconstruction of battlefield relics since the area was taken over in 1935.

Appomattox is 175 miles southwest of Washington and 90 miles west of Richmond. Lee's troops abandoned their Richmond-Petersburg lines on April 2 and joined remnants of the Confederate Army of Northern Virginia at Appomattox on April 8. The decision to surrender was made that night, and terms were agreed upon in the McLean House.

American Adds Chicago Flight

Effective May 1, American Airlines will add a third nonstop flight to its schedules operating between Washington and Chicago, Herbert D. Ford, sales manager, announced. The new nonstop flight will leave Washington at 9 a. m., arriving in Chicago at 11:05 a. m. This new flight also will provide a second one-stop American Airlines flight to Los Angeles with arrival there at 3:55 p. m. daily.

The additional schedule gives American Airlines morning, afternoon and night nonstop flights between Washington and Chicago. The afternoon flight leaves at 2:30 p. m., while the night schedule departs at 5:30 p. m.

Eight-Day Nassau Trip Costs Less Than $200

By Robert E. Hall

A HOLIDAY in Nassau on less than $200?

Eight days in Nassau proves that it is not only possible but that this exciting place with its old-world charm and atmosphere is now catering to the economy-minded vacationist. The present relaxing atmosphere contrasts with the days, after the British had attempted to colonize the area in the Sevententh Century, when pirates established Nassau as their headquarters.

Taking the airlines' low-priced coach, the Washingtonian reaches Nassau within a few hours. The most striking feature of the flight approach to this archipelago is the vivid contrast of the hues in the water, changing from a deep, azure blue to cool turquoise. Landing, the visitor is offered, as a courtesy, his first taste of the Bahamas—a refreshing Planter's Punch. Customs regulations take but a few minutes and the wise vacationist, who has made reservations in advance, is sped towards the city via station wagon sent by his hotel.

Devaluation of the pound means in most cases that the dollar is worth 30 to 40 percent more this year. Beginning this month, many of the hotels will reduce rates as much as 50 percent. This means the European plan (no meals) costs two to four dollars a day for a single room.

In line with devaluation and to celebrate its ninetieth anniversary, one hotel on the hill near Government House with a fine view of the harbor, is offering every seventh day free. And for honeymooners who stay four days or longer, one-half the room rent will be paid by the hotel as a wedding gift.

Nassau, boasting a "June-all-year-round" climate, has statistics to prove it; the average temperature from April through June is 76 degrees. Natives agree that the three spring months are the finest in the year. The sea is better for sailing, with most of the sailing races occurring during these months, and the flowers are more prevalent, with gardens blossoming in brilliant hibiscus, oleander, bougainvillea and the magnificent poinciana, blooming this year around the latter part of April.

The visitor finds a much wider choice of bargains in tax-free British goods such as doeskin, tweeds, china, perfumes and leather articles.

The most enjoyable activities cost the least. Walking is the best way to explore the town with its quaint, narrow streets, pink-walled houses, fascinating native markets, sponge wharves and historic and picturesque buildings. Bicycles, fine English models, may be rented for 6 shillings (84 cents) per day or $4.20 per week. Forts Charlotte and Montagu, always popular with visitors, are within easy cycling distance as are excellent, isolated beaches. Sea bathing in the multicolored waters is a novel experience. The swimmer will find the water surprisingly bouyant.

There is a good public beach within a five-minute walk from the center of town, but the most famous is Paradise Beach, on a wooded island across the harbor. Glass-bottomed launches transport visitors to the island for two shillings and the entrance fee, $1, includes use of a spacious beach house, umbrellas, chairs, towels and other special features. Try lunching al fresco at a table on the beach for uninterrupted basking, or magnificent walks around the island.

For the swimming enthusiast, a day's trip to Rose Island to enjoy one of the most beautiful, white-sand beaches in the Bahamas is worthwhile. Four dollars takes care of a round trip to the island—seven miles from Nassau—use of the clubhouse, and lunch at the Royal Victoria Beach Club.

Here is the place to practice spear-fishing. The clubhouse lends equipment to aspirants and even the novice should have fine luck, for the waters abound in fish of every size and color. The island has been a setting for such films as "Hurricane" and "Bahama Passage."

For the photographer, pictures appear at every angle—particularly color pictures. Tennis is available on clay courts, and golf may be played on the 18-hole course at the Bahamas Country Cub.

Sailing is excellent. Tours are planned to the outstanding gardens. There is an abundance of night life, and the cabarets offer native shows with dancing, singing and Calypso orchestras.

The average dinner at the better hotels and restaurants run around $2.50. Most have open or enclosed garden terraces and feature candlelight and beautiful trees and shrubs illuminated by hidden lights. One hotel on the waterfront specializes in a Bahamian dinner for $2, including such exotic dishes as tortuga ruba (turtle stew), paw-paw, and guava in syrup. In many dining patios and cocktail lounges, while the vacationist sips the specialties on the island—Planter's Punch and frozen daiquiri—Calypso singers stroll from table to table with guitars, singing such catchy native tunes as "Bahamian Mama," "L'il 'Ole Nassau," and "Brown Skin Gal."

All this for the budget-minded Washingtonian who wants that "special" vacation in a unique and carefree atmosphere on less than $200.

Everglades Are Wild

Miami Beach, Fla.—Some of the wildest country left in the United States is to be found in the Everglades National Park, only an hour by automobile from Miami Beach.

An open-air market on Rawson Square, Nassau, in the Bahamas. Vendors display hats, mats, bags, slippers, baskets and tableware made from native straw, raffia and sisal fibers. And they're all devaluation bargains

Izaak Waltons Descend On New Jersey's Trout

TRENTON, N. J., April 15.—An army of anglers has descended on New Jersey's 1400 miles of inland streams, with the opening of the trout season yesterday.

There are two seasons this year for brook, brown and rainbow trout officials pointed out; the first from April 15 to July 15 and the second from September 1 to September 30.

Although the State is noted primarily for the excellence of its salt water fishing, the large number of swift mountain streams and the more than 300 lakes in the State also provide good fresh water fishing sport.

Officials emphasized that the restocking program in New Jersey is designed to put back into the streams more game fish for every dollar received in license fees than in any other State.

The season for pike, pickerel and pike perch opens May 20 in New Jersey and will continue until November 30. There is an additional season for these fresh water species beginning the first Saturday in January and running through the last Sunday in January.

Black bass, rock bass, calico bass and crappie are legal game from June 15 until November 30.

Leading trout streams include Indian Brook in Morris County; the Musconetcong River in Warren County; the North Branch of the Rockaway River in Hunterdon County; the Pequest River in Sussex County; Saddle River in Bergen County, and the south branch of the Raritan River in Hunterdon County.

Salt water fishing has been under way for several weeks. The season on striped bass opened April 1 and continues until November 30. The mackerel runs have started all along the 120-mile New Jersey coast.

Some party boats are already operating and the entire salt water fishing fleet is expected to be ready for action next weekend. Jetty and pier fishing along the coast has been enjoyed for several weeks.

Later in the season the charter boats will head for deep water in quest of tuna, marlin, bluefish and swordfish.

Trailways Buses to Commence Skyline Drive Service May 1

MAY 1 Trailways will begin daily reserved seat bus service in Virginia's Shenandoah National Park over the Skyline Drive at an average elevation exceeding 3000 feet. A coach will leave Washington at 8 a. m. (EST) from the Trailways Terminal, 1201 New York ave. The coach enters the park just south of Front Royal at 10 a. m. There is a one-hour stop at Big Meadows Lodge for lunch before leaving the park area at Swift Run Gap for Charlottesville. At Charlottesville, passengers may elect to stay and visit the shrines or return to Washington, arriving at 8:40 p. m.

Seven tours have been arranged by Trailways, ranging from the one-day tour to a two-day tour which includes an overnight stay at Charlottesville, with sightseeing at Richmond and Fredericksburg the next day.

New York State Fishermen's Guidebook Out

ALBANY, N Y., April 15.—The new vacation guide book of the New York State Department of Commerce will tell you where the big fish are. It is available from the Division of State Publicity, 112 State st., Albany 7, New York.

Fishing waters are listed by counties. Included are details on salt water fishing in Long Island Sound and the Atlantic, with an anglers' calendar listing the species caught by season.

New York State has 8000 lakes and ponds, presenting limitless opportunities for the angler. Most larger lakes are open to the public. The State has purchased public rights on streams totaling 700 miles.

Licenses are required of all fresh water fisherman over 16 years, except New York State residents over 70 and members of the armed forces in active service. The fee for resident fishermen is $2.25. For nonresidents and aliens it is $5.50 or $2.75 for a three-day license.

New Highway Postoffices Mark Another Step Forward

By William M. Stuart

EVENTUALLY the entire country will be covered by a network of Government-owned-and-operated highway postoffices. This postal service is now being arranged and many large areas will be much better serviced.

The old days witnessed the railway postoffice, a service both efficient and popular. But times have changed, and the Post Office Department in its highway service is simply being brought up-to-date. These highway postoffices have greatly increased cancellation collecting, and at the opening of every new highway postoffice hundreds of first-day cancellations are called for, indicating unusual interest.

The late President Roosevelt was much interested in cancellations and just before his death was considering new designs for them, examining so-called "star" cancellations, very popular years ago.

It has been suggested that a new uniform highway postoffice cancellation of the star type be adopted for highway postoffices. While there are philatelists who frown upon cancellation collectors, it must be admitted this phase of collecting is becoming more popular than ever.

The 3-cent commemorative stamp dedicated to the Railroad Engineers will be printed in maroon. It will bear the likeness of the famous engineer "Casey Jones." The stamp will be released at Jackson, Tenn., on April 29. The stamp will be printed by rotary press and issued in sheets of 50. The initial printing order is for 115 million stamps.

The 3-cent Gold Star Mothers, the 3-cent Wisconsin Statehood and the 3-cent Will Rogers stamp, all issued in 1948, have been withdrawn from sale at the Philatelic Agency.

Government-owned and operated highway postoffice service will be inaugurated on May 12 between the following points: Fresno and Bakersfield, Calif., and Stockton and Fresno, Calif. Special first trip cachets and cancellations will be provided. Covers must be at postoffices concerned not later than May 10.

ᔓᔕ

THE COLLECTORS CLUB, Branch 5, S. P. A., met in Pythian Temple on Tuesday evening, A. G. Galloway, presiding. The speaker was Donald E. Crum of the British Overseas Airways who spoke interestingly on British airways. John D. Pope of St. Louis, Mo., was also a guest of the club. At the meeting on Tuesday an auction will be the program.

The Woodridge Stamp Club will meet tomorrow at 9 p. m. at the Woodridge Public Library, 2206 Rhode Island ave. ne. Bert C. Gardner of the P. B. A. Stamp Club will speak on "The Vatican."

ᔓᔕ

The Postoffice Department announces that the 3-cent American Bankers commemorative stamp, released at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., was designed by Charles R. Chickering. The engravers were: vignette and ornaments, George Gunderson, and frame, lettering and numerals, John S. Edmundson.

ᔓᔕ

The 3-cent railroad engineers commemorative stamp will be issued first day at Jackson, Tenn., on April 29. The initial printing order calls for 115 million. The central design shows a portrait of "Casey" Jones superimposed on a locomotive wheel. He sacrificed his life in line of duty and his portrait on this stamp is a symbol to the railroad engineers of America.

The small principality of Liechtenstein, in central Europe, has issued three new wildlife stamps as follows: 20-rappen, red brown, showing a roe deer; 30-r., blue green, pictures a gamecock, and an 80-r., brown, depicts a badger.

C. U. to Dedicate New Buildings

Newly constructed buildings of the National Catholic School of Social Service at Catholic University, representing an outlay of more than $1,250,000, will be formally blessed at ceremonies on April 20, the Right Rev. P. J. McCormick, rector of the university, announces. The new construction includes an administration and classroom building, a chapel with a seating capacity of 460 and a dormitory for 100 students.

Of white limestone, the administration and classroom building is located on the main campus between Mullen Memorial Library and the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. The dormitory and chapel, which are of red brick with limestone trim, are located on Brookland ave. on the northern portion of the university grounds adjacent to the Nursing Education Building. The chapel is the central feature, being connected by arcades with the dormitory and nurses building.

Bradley U. To Instruct Foreigners

By Evabeth Miller
(Peoria Star)

PEORIA, ILL. (AP).—Unique in the Nation, a complete orientation course for foreigners will be launched at Bradley University this summer.

Dr. Peter Ortiz, head of the modern language department, organized the new program to smooth the American pathway for visiting students and business and professional men from anywhere in the world. It will concentrate on giving them a quick, usable knowledge of American customs and everyday English.

Nothing like it is offered on any other American campus, says Dr. Ortiz, who has planned the project for three years.

After Army Course

THE course is patterned on the teaching now given army officers at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. To some extent it simply reverses the Army language teaching methods developed in World War II for Americans going to foreign countries. The only similar program is that conducted in Washington, D. C., for families of the diplomatic corps.

Although some colleges have provided orientation courses for foreigners, they are supplementary to other academic studies and do not involve complete concentration like that planned at Bradley, Dr. Ortiz says. His plan provides for total temporary immersion in American idiom and customs.

Besides diminishing their language handicap, the new course is expected to make its students at home in this country before they undertake regular college courses or begin business, professional or cultural relations here.

Considerable interest already has been shown in Mexico, where Dr. Ortiz worked on the project last summer. One of the first registrants in the Bradley course is the editor of a leading Mexican magazine.

Length 12 Weeks

THIS summer's course will last 12 weeks, with six hours given daily to studying English grammar and composition, speech and phonetics, and United States institutions. Films, slides, wire recordings of students' voices, and conversation laboratories will be used.

Most of those enrolling are expected to have some basic academic knowledge of English. No credit will be given for the course—it is merely preliminary to successful study later in regular credit courses at Bradley or elsewhere.

Goals of the program are: Effective use of English, ready comprehension of the language in daily life or in textbooks or classroom lectures, and understanding of United States ideas and institutions.

To steep the students in American speech, thought and customs, Dr. Ortiz plans to group each 25 with three teachers, of English, speech, and social sciences. For every five students a Bradley graduate or a senior will act as special aide in an hour of supervised study following every lecture.

Language Handicap

TOO many foreign students come to American universities with a language handicap, says Dr. Ortiz, and even brilliant scholars are hampered in their work, some to the extent of actual failure. Others struggle uncertainly and unhappily for a year or more while trying to learn American speech and ways.

"Many feel they are sufficiently prepared in the English language," explains Dr. Ortiz, "but when they begin a round-the-clock brush with it, they find otherwise. It is then often too late for corrective action."

After this summer, the orientation course will be offered each semester, lasting the entire term, with 18 semester hours of work but without credit toward a degree.

The Report Card

Current Events Was Heresy In History Classes of '08

By Elsie Carper

WHEN George J. Jones began the teaching of history in Washington back in 1908, it was considered "rank heresy" to suggest that time be taken from history classes to discuss contemporary problems.

JONES

Today, in the junior and senior high schools of the city, history teachers allocate one class period a week to the discussion of current events.

The change largely has been brought about by Mr. Jones, a friendly, white-haired man with glinting blue eyes who will retire from the District school system this June after 31 years as head of the department of history.

Thirty-five teachers formed the department when Mr. Jones first became the director. Today the division has grown to more than 200 teachers—each selected on the basis of an examination prepared by Mr. Jones.

ᔓᔕ

IN his small office at Central High School Mr. Jones was seated at his old-fashioned roll top desk correcting examination papers for teacher candidates.

School was not in session, and over his white shirt he wore a green sweater. He smoked a cigar and used an inkwell as an ashtray. As he spoke he gestured with his hands or emphasized a point by pounding his fist on the stack of papers.

Discussing the examinations he was correcting, he said that a superior teacher of social studies must be "wide awake to life today." In teaching he must habitually make comparisons and contrasts between the past and the present.

He pointed out that seven of the eight questions were "problem questions," designed to test not the memory but the thinking power of the teacher candidates and their ability to associate facts and draw inferences and conclusions.

Rocking back and forth in his chair, he talked about viewpoints in teaching history or social studies, as that general field of knowledge now is called.

THE fundamental purpose, he said, is to give students some real understanding of the local community, the Nation and the world situation in which they live. They should be stimulated to use that understanding as wholesome participating citizens.

"The citizen who is to deal understandingly with problems of today and tomorrow needs to have a broad perspective of how our institutions and ideals have developed from the past.

"The Washington schools have a strong program of work in history, but it does not end with the learning of a lot of facts about the past.

"High school students are interested in the world about them, particularly in their own lives. The past can be made vital to them when they see that it still lives today in their everyday lives."

ᔓᔕ

BEFORE the First World War the trend in the teaching of history was nationalism, he recalled.

"After the war," he said, "we were told by the professional educational groups that we should teach history in the world setting and train students to be world citizens."

Within a few years the country went back to isolationism. Elsewhere throughout the country, courses in world history were dropped, but the District maintained them in the curriculum. Now the trend again is toward courses to give students an awareness of the world problem.

Mr. Jones acquired his own perspective on history at the University of Wisconsin, where he studied under such great teachers as Frederick Jackson Turner, historian of America's west.

As a young teacher of history, Mr. Jones came to Washington to sightsee. He remained to take the teaching examination and was appointed a teacher at the old Central High School in 1908. A few years later, when the school moved to the hilltop at 13th and Clifton sts. nw., he was permitted to select his own classroom.

It was a third-floor room. Standing before his class, he could look out the windows over the rooftops of downtown Washington and see the Capitol dome, the Library of Congress, the Washington Monument and beyond the Potomac River the hills of Virginia.

"A teacher of history could not but be inspired in such a setting," he declared.

War Is Kept Out Of Italy's Schools

ROME (AP).—World War II? What's that? Officially, Italy's postwar high school graduates have never heard of it. Nor, in the classroom, have they ever heard of Benito Mussolini.

For the past five years, in Italy's grammar schools and high schools, history has stopped in 1918. Allied Military Government first placed a ban on secondary school teaching of Fascist history and the events leading up to the war.

The occupation authorities wanted to avoid "classroom controversies." They ordered references to Mussolini and Fascism edited out of textbooks, sometimes with the rough expedient of paper and paste. The ban has never been revoked, although Allied military rule ended with the Peace Treaty in 1947.

A direct route to executive positions; a good starting salary, promotions and security; a professional career as a C.P.A., choice of government service or private enterprise; at Strayer—guidance in planning, and assistance in placement.

Virginia U. Music Festival Begins May 11

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va.—The fourth annual Virginia Music Festival will be held in Scott Stadium at the University of Virginia on May 11, 12, 13 and 14.

The 1950 festival will begin on the evening of Thursday, May 11, with a program of folk music and dancing under the direction of Bascom Lamar Lunsford, of Asheville, N. C., and a group of his folk singers.

On Friday, the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Edgar Schenkman, will make the first of its three appearances. A chorus of 350 voices, trained by Gordon Page, will sing Randall Thompson's "The Peaceable Kingdom" and the Mozart "Requiem."

Four soloists will sing with the chorus in the "Requiem." They are Helen Clayton, soprano, Sandra Warfield, contralto, Brent Williams, tenor, and Albert Linville, bass-baritone.

Between 1200 and 1500 children in high school bands on May 12 will vie for the "Stettinius Award," named for the late Edward R. Stettinius, jr., who donated the first awards.

William Kapell, noted young pianist, will be soloist with the Norfolk Symphony on Saturday evening, May 13. He will play the Rachmaninoff Third Concerto. The orchestra will make its final appearance Sunday afternoon, May 14.

Series tickets are $9.60 for the center section of Scott Stadium and $6 for the outside sections. Single tickets will also be sold for each concert.

Music Clubs, Gershwin Awards Are Made

Prizes: The $1000 Gershwin award to Bryan Dority for "Allegro and Pastorale," which has had its first performance at the annual Gershwin concert; the $500 Denyse Calirouin award to Sylvia Beach for her translation into English of Henri Michaux's "A Barbarian in Asia"; the $500 National Federation of Music Clubs award to Earl George for "Missa Brevis," for orchestra, mixed chorus and soloists.—(A. Wilson's 1949 Class Finds More Jobs

Chambersburg, Pa. — Wilson College graduates of last June have found job opportunities slightly more numerous than did those of 1948, the college placement office reports.

Every member of the class of 1949 who wished employment has a job, records show. A total of 51 percent are employed and 24 percent are carrying on graduate study; 25 percent are married.

More of the employed 1949 alumnae—24.5 percent—have entered teaching than any other single field. Laboratory and other scientific work is second, with social work, publishing, library, and secretarial work following in the order listed.

Professor at G. U. Will Contribute to History Volume

Dr. Cyril Toumanoff, professor of history, Georgetown University graduate school, will contribute a chapter to the forthcoming revised edition of volume IV of the Cambridge Medieval History.

Dr. Toumanoff will write his Cambridge work on Armenia and the Caucasian Kingdom, his field of specialization.

After studying at Harvard and the University of Brussels, Dr. Toumanoff came to Washington, receiving his doctorate from Georgetown in 1949. He lives at 3217 Connecticut ave. nw.

We're Gaining in War on Japanese Beetle

By Katherine Pozer

BLIGHTING of high hopes for garden beauty by the sudden appearance of pests and blights usually sends the new gardener into the depths of despondancy. The more seasoned gardener gets a bit more philosophical and either gets into action with spray and dust or decides that these particular flowers are not for him or her to enjoy, and discards them with their unwelcome visitors.

Listening to an entomologist tell of garden pests makes one marvel that we can grow anything at all, for they come in so many forms and work in so many ways. While it is discouraging to hear of all the things that may happen to out garden treasures, there is always a hopeful note from our entomologists and chemists who are working day and night to combat the enemies of nature.

At nearby Beltsville a continuous battle is being waged but a fascinating one as told by such experts as Dr. C. A. Weigel. Many of the new chemicals discovered during the war can be used to combat garden evils but making them safe for general use is a difficult question. One by one some of them are being released for our use and are doing good work.

We have all faced the Japanese beetle so it is good news to hear that the milky white disease is proving successful in combatting this very evident enemy, and entomologists hope that in the not too distant future a natural biological control will take away much of its possibility for harm.

Our old enemies the "Wooly Bear Caterpillar," the "Tent Caterpillar," the cut worm and the deadly thrip are all well known to most of us, for they openly defy us. But then along come the "leaf tiers" which tie the leaves together, the borers, the girdlers and the miners which make their tiny mines along the leaf's surface leaving serpentine marks.

There is the "Green Saddleback Caterpillar" which not only devours plants but causes a skin eruption if touched by the unwary gardener, and mites which do as much damage as if they were a hundred times their size.

New Controls

D.D.T. still holds first place as a general favorite both as a spray and as a dust and many of our old friends, like arsenate of lead and nicotine are still doing duty at the old stands.

Many new methods of control are being tested. One of the latest and most interesting, originating in England, is the method of placing the poisons around the roots of the plant so that they will be absorbed and eaten as the plant is attacked.

This is a good time to become familiar with the many things which may happen to our gardens and to know the different appearance of the pests and their methods of destruction, some of which we cannot see as it is underground or within the flower stalks.

The Department of Agriculture has an excellent bulletin, "Enemies of Flowers and Shrubs." This may be obtained by writing the Department of Agriculture for miscellaneous publication No. 626.

With so many garden enemies, it is nice to think that we do have some friends. First the birds. Then among the bugs we have the "Lady Bug" which destroys aphis and the dreadful looking "Praying Mantis" which destroys many insects.

Our Friend, the Worm

THE lowly earthworm has come into great prominence in recent years as a friend of man not only as a procurer of fish delicacies but in the garden. Earthworm farms are opening up all over the country.

Recently we visited one in Virginia and found it most interesting. The worms are shipped to all parts of the country and those who have purchased them are most enthusiastic as to results.

Earthworms do have a very definite part in keeping soils in good condition and one of the oppositions to chemical fertilizers is that they destroy some of the earthworms which thrive where manure and leaf products are used to enrich the soil. The worms act as nature's plows and pulverize and aerate the soil allowing water to be quickly absorbed.

In all, the question of garden pests can be an interesting study subject and one vital to garden success. The entomologists remind us that there is still lots of work to do and that one of the best ways to help eradicate many of the evils is to grow healthy plants which will grow along with their enemies.

They also tell us that garden cleanups are most important. Cleanups and burning of diseased plant material will take away many of the "hideways" and interfere with completing the life cycle of many of our garden enemies.

The Shellac Maker

Shellac, used extensively as a spirit varnish, is a purified resin secreted by the insect, Laccifer lacca, that feeds on the sap of various trees. It is prepared usually in thin yellowish-brown leaflets which are insoluble in water, but can be dissolved in alcohol.

A continuous battle against the bugs goes on in experiments at nearby Beltsville

Wicked on Wireworms

Ethylene dibromide, a soil fumigant, has been found effective against wireworms in Wisconsin.

Dogwood Easy to Please, Any Climate Suits

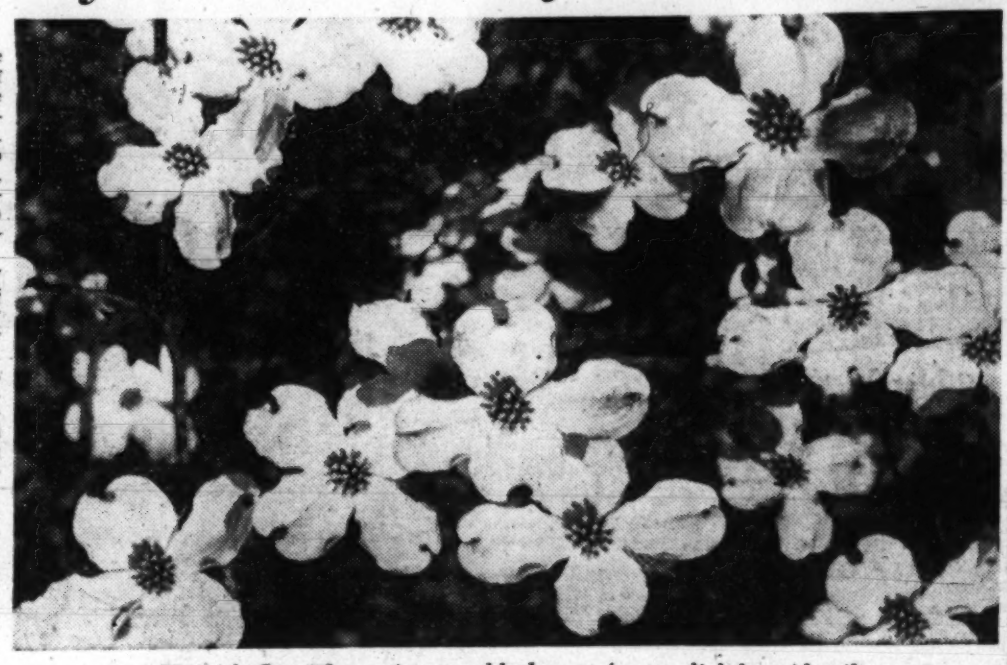
By Alfred Putz

NO OTHER small flowering tree is so close to the hearts of home owners with sufficient space to display it properly as the flowering dogwood (Cornus florida). It is native from Massachusetts to Florida and westward into Texas, and this wide range clearly indicates an unusual tolerance to varying climatic and soil conditions.

Low, moist, fertile soil, slightly on the acid side (pH6.0—6.5) is most conducive to a strong, healthy growth, but drainage must not be poor.

In addition to the white variety, there is a red-flowered form (c. florida rubra) which is as spectacular, besides a double-flowered one (c. florida plena) and even a weeping variation (c. florida pendula).

The outstanding beauty of these has diverted most gardeners' attention from other dogwoods which nevertheless deserve garden space. With the exception of the Kousa dogwood (c. kousa) they have relatively small flowers but make up for this in various other ways.



Viginia's State flower is amenable but prefers a slightly acid soil

Korean Blooms Later

THE Kousa dogwood which comes from Korea and Japan has showy white flower bracts not quite as large as those of our native species and their tips are pointed in contrast to the notched ones of florida. It flowers in early June and therefore provides a two-week extension of dogwood blossoms at a time when they come in handy for early June wedding decorations.

They have better lasting qualities than our native dogwood, keeping well in water for at least 10 days after cutting. Their starlike beauty, set off by the bright green leaves, is charming.

The habit of the plants is compact and bushy so that they fit well into the larger shrub border. Eventually they may grow as much as 20 feet tall but pruning will keep them considerably lower where that seems desirable.

The fruits of the Kousa dogwood are unlike those of any other species. They resemble raspberries but are round and of a pinkish tint, measuring a half to three quarters of an inch across. Contrasting sharply with the purple tints of the fall foliage, they are much in demand for indoor decorations. They even are good to eat, the orange pulp being sweet and palatable but with several large hard seeds in each cluster which are somewhat of an annoyance. If you plan to enjoy them, you will have to get to them before the birds do.

A City Dweller

THE cornelian cherry (c. mas) may well be awarded first place among those with less conspicuous flowers if for no other reason than that it does well even under city conditions. It is a March and early April bloomer with delicate threadlike masses of soft yellow flowers before the leaves expand. Old specimens may be 20 feet tall, but that takes a long time and shrubbery forms are more usual. It is easily kept within limits by yearly pruning.

The branches may be brought idoors in late winter for forcing into bloom. Ten days in warm water will do it. A second and very delightful feature is the edible, juicy, red fruits, not unlike elongated cherries in size and shape. These ripen in late August and September. Again it will be a case of getting ahead of the birds.

The corelian cherry endures winter temperatures down to 20 degrees below zero without harm. Young plants grow fairly rapidly but growth is slowed as they age.

The red-osier dogwood (c. stoonifera) reaches an eight-foot height unless reduced by pruning.

A Hardy Siberian

THE tatarian dogwood (c. alba) presents in May and June a wealth of small yellowish white flowers arranged in two-inch-wide flat clusters. The deep red color of its branches is especially attractive during the winter when contrasting with freshly fallen snow. The small fruits which mature in August and September are white or have a bluish tinge. It is native to Siberia and northern China, which accounts for unusual hardiness. Eventually it will grow 10 feet tall.

Should you come across a dogwood with dense clusters of greenish white flowers, purplish branches and black fruit, it likely is the blood-twig or red dogwood (C. sanguinea) a native of Europe and the Orient, reaching a height of 12 feet. This flowers in May and June, and fruits in September. Its green leaves turn a stunning blood red in the autumn. There is an interesting and showy form of this in which the leaves are variegated with yellowish white. Its name is cornus sanguinea varigata.

If you think that all dogwoods are either trees or shrubs, you have a surprise coming. Tramping through the mountain woods of New England, you may have noticed from May to June inch-wide dogwood-like white flowers with pointed bracts set against a star of broad, pointed leaves on plants not more than eight inches, carpeting the ground except in the densest recesses. That is cornus canadensis: colloquially, dwarf cornel bunchberry. In August, the white flowers will have made way for a little bunch of brilliant scarlet berries which have a rather insipid taste if you care to sample them.

A Few Hills of Rhubarb Supply a Family

By James H. Beattie

RHUBARB, or pieplant, is not grown by most local gardeners. This fine early spring vegetable makes delicious pies and sauces and it deserves to be better known.

Rhubarb thrives best in regions having cool, moist summers and severe winters. While our climate is a bit too warm for best results, much can be done to overcome these unfavorable conditions, such as planting on a northerly exposure where the ground freezes easily. Mulching the hills during the summer with straw or hay (to reduce the temperature of the soil) followed by the removal of the mulch in the autumn (to encourage the freezing of the soil) is also extremely helpful.

Pieplant will thrive on almost any type of soil but in our area the heavier types, particularly the clay loams are best. The soil must be well-drained, fertile, well supplied with organic matter and slightly acid.

Failure to prepare the planting site thoroughly for rhubarb is responsible for most failures with this vegetable. If properly planted only a few hills of rhubarb are required to supply the needs of a family.

In the home garden the site for these few hills may be easily prepared by digging individual holes for each hill and re-filling these with a mixture of two-thirds top-soil and one-third decayed cattle manure with about a pound of complete fertilizer thoroughly incorporated in the mixture.

If the land is naturally poor the holes should be about two feet in diameter and about the same depth, but on fertile, well-drained land they may be much smaller.

If preferred, a deep wide trench refilled with the same mixture may be prepared instead of the individual hill sites. If the land requires drainage the latter plan is usually best as this plan makes it possible to lay a line of drainage tile under the row of rhubarb plants.

Propagation

THE PRE-PLANTING preparation of the site should be followed by annual applications of animal manure and commercial fertilizer spread on the surface of the soil around each plant. A bushel of decayed manure and a pound of commercial fertilizer applied each season is enough.

Rhubarb is usually propagated by using divisions of established hills. These divisions may be easily obtained by cutting off a clump having several buds from the side of a strong plant. The work can be done by using a sharp spade shovel vertically into the soil.

This plan has many advantages, particularly because it provides large clumps which may be selected from disease-free hills. The desiccated, small-sized specimens commonly offered are frequently so weak that it requires a long time for the plants to reach the productive stage and they sometimes fall victim to disease and insect enemies. On the other hand, the large clumps that may be obtained from successful local growers have an excellent chance to make an early harvest.

The planting of rhubarb is simple, merely involving the setting of the clumps or crowns with the buds about four inches below the natural level of the soil surface and covering the buds two to three inches deep, using a light-textured soil, most certainly not a heavy clay. Care should be exercised to pack the soil firmly around the roots of the plants.

Care Is Simple

THE varieties most commonly grown are Victoria, Linnaeus, Mammoth Red and McDonald; but, irrespective of variety, it is usually best to select stock from a planting that thrives in the locality.

Rhubarb bears seed very freely, but the plants grown from it are not uniform and the seed method of propagation is not well suited to the requirements of the home gardener.

Once established, the care of rhubarb is simple. The cultivation is limited to that required for the control of weeds. The annual application of fertilizer and manure has been mentioned. During autumn, before freezing weather occurs, the mulch should be scraped from around each plant for the purpose of encouring the ground to freeze as much as possible.

Unless the plants receive this shock they are liable to behave very poorly. The seed-stalks should be removed from each plant as soon as they appear, surely before the seed has ripened. Failure to cut these seed stalks weakens the plants and may shorten their lives.

The rhubarb curculio, a half-inch-long yellow-dusted snout beetle punctures the "stalks," causing wormy rhubarb. Hand picking and destruction of dock plants in the vicinity of the rhubarb helps because the beetles breed in the dock plants.

Spraying with bordeaux mixture helps in controlling the fungus foot rot or crown rot, but the use of clean planting stock is best. Should any of the hills develop the disease the entire plant should be dug up and destroyed.

Beware Those Leaves!

The leaf stalks of rhubarb make most excellent sauces and pies, but the leaves contain a heavy concentration of soluble salts of oxalic acid, and they are poisonous. Under no circumstances should they be used as food.

Start Those Early Blooms Indoors

BORDERS and beds of annual flowers in full bloom are often seen in parks and estate gardens weeks earlier than it is possible to produce flowers from seed sown direct in the garden.

This is made possible by starting the annuals in the greenhouse and moving them to the garden as soon as the peak display of the early bulbs and perennials has ended.

While few amateurs have facilities for starting all their annual flowers under protection, anyone with a south window, a cold frame or a hotbed can give this early start to the slow growing varities, which need it most. And those which mature more quickly, can be sown direct in the garden where they are to grow.

Asters, petunias and snapdragons especially need an early start, because they are slow to germinate and mature. In setting out plants rather than sowing seed direct there is another advantage, which lies in the placing of plants. Since flowers are usually planted in borders, rather than in rows, and often must be placed between established perennial plants, it is not easy to be sure of growing plants from seed in exactly the desired location. Another advantage is that thinning out plants becomes unnecessary, and seed thus goes much farther.

Many flowers have very small seed, which must not be covered deeply, lest growth be prevented; sometimes indeed the seed is just pressed into the soil, from which it may be washed by heavy rains or careless watering.

It is important that all flower seed be sown in loose soil, rich in humus, which will not become too compact, or form a crust which might prevent the seedings from emerging. Many garden soils do not answer these specifications, but it is usually easy to find enough of the best type of soil to fill a few seed boxes, in which seeds may be sown with assurance that they will germinate and grow well.

Because of this, gardeners often sow all flower seeds in this way, even outdoors, and move the plants when ready to locations where they are desired. Seed boxes are easier to manage outdoors than under protection, and growth is more rapid than in the garden, for plants in a seed box which can be shaded when desirable, and watered frequently, or kept constantly moist by automatic watering.

Shrubs Make Ideal Gifts

WONDER what to give for May Day, Mother's Day, or Father's Day? Have you considered a "gift certificate" for Mother's or Father's favorite shrub or tree, that can be enjoyed for many years? Rosebushes, fruit trees, flowering shrubs, will delight as a gift and there are innumerable varieties to choose from. Why not a rosebush for Mother, or a peach tree for a peach of a father?

If necessary, gifts of nursery stock can be sent to practically any part of the country. You purchase a gift certificate from your local nurseryman. Providing he is a member of the American Association of Nurserymen, the recipient of your gift can select anything desired, for the amount of the certificate, from any other member of the association in any part of the country.

Basement Heat Warms Hotbed Outside Window

MOST economical of hotbeds, and perhaps the most convenient, is possible for any home that has a basement window facing south. In front of this a miniature greenhouse can be constructed, where plants can be given an early start in the spring, with plenty of sunlight, plus warmth from the basement, which usually has plenty to spare.

Uses for such a hotbed can be found the year around, and the cost of construction is small, especially if you build it yourself from the complete working drawing which accompanies this discussion. Dimensions in the drawing provide for a frame covered with two standard 3 by 6 sash, but these can easily be changed to fit any size sash you prefer to use.

Start by making an excavation in front of the window about a foot deep. Its area must be figured carefully, so that it will hold a frame fitted to your sash. As in the case of other hotbeds, a plastic substitute for glass may be used if preferred.

Build a frame to fit in the excavation. The sides must slant sharply from a point above the window, almost to the ground. Fit the sash on this frame, using hinges at the top so the sash may easily be raised for ventilation. Earth may be banked around the frame to keep out the cold; and the sides should be as tight as possible to keep out the wind. The frame should be caulked where it joins the foundation to prevent drafts.

Heat is supplied to this bed by opening the basement window. The window is left open at night, and may often be closed during the day, when the sun is shining. Hotbeds of this type have been tried and tested, and although they do not maintain temperatures as high as other kinds the heat will be more even, and the ventilation much better.

The main things to watch are temperature and drafts. Ventilation is necessary on warm days, and for very short periods on cooler days.

Because leaf lettuce is demanded by hotels and restaurants for fine salads, it is grown extensively in greenhouses all winter. Home gardeners may enjoy it all summer at small expense.

Model Gardens To Rise Upon Virginia Farm

PART of a Madison County, Va., farm owned by Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Aylor will be turned into a model garden at a "garden-in-a-day" program May 2.

The event is sponsored by the Madison County garden advisory committee. Allan McLearen, county agent, is chairman. The garden is being planned by F. H. Scott and L. C. Beamer of the horticultural staff at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Work will be done by veterans, classes under direction of Instructor Smith Blankenbaker.

The program will include preparation of the seedbed, fertilizing, and vegetable planting. Vegetables to be planted include snap and lima beans, corn, tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, watermelon, cantaloupe, salsify, carrots, beets, cucumbers, squash, and radishes. The garden will cover about a quarter of an acre.

Scott said the work will begin at 10 a. m., and probably will be completed by noon. Anyone interested is invited. While activities are under way, Scott and Beamer will explain the recommended practices over a public address system.

Purpose of the event is to focus attention on home gardening and demonstrate recommended varieties and practices, Scott explained.

Birds, Squirrels Stage Show at Feed Station

By Bill Geagan

I DON'T know of any better entertainment on a chilly day than sitting by the window or hiding behind a tree and watching the show staged by birds and squirrels at your own feeding stations.

It's really a three ring circus. None of the birds want the squirrels around, and each bird seems to think the food was placed there for him alone.

And as the day grows old away they will go, both birds and squirrels, to their sleeping places, happy because you have provided the food that nourished and warmed them. Such knowledge will give you a feeling of well-being and happiness.

If you plan to set up a little cafe in your back yard, and there are firs, pines or spruces growing, hang the feed trays in or near them. Birds and squirrels like the thickly thatched evergreens because they provide protection from the cold wind and driving snow. If you do not have such trees close by hang the trays in trees where your feathered and furred friends will have the most protection.

Crusts of bread, slices of old toast, chop bones, bits of cooked meat, suet, cake and cookie crumbs, lettuce, cabbage leaves, carrot tops, fine grain sunflower seeds, hay chaff, peanuts and peanut butter will be a devoured with gusto.

One of the types of trays I use is a simple affair made from the top of a cheese box. The two inch rim prevents the grain from being spilled or scratched out, and green paint brightens it and protects it from the weather. It has a wire coat hanger attached for hooking it on a tree limb.

The poor woodpeckers, both the Downy and Hairy species, which probably will show up at your station, don't like grain. The lance-like bill which is drilled into trees for bugs wasn't designed for pecking grain. But the woodpecker does love peanut butter and he has no trouble eating it. The peanut butter should be stuffed into holes at least an inch in diameter that are bored in posts or the trunks of dead trees. He likes a bit of suet too. It can be spiked to a post or dead tree trunk.

The squirrels are fresh little guys, particularly the reds, and they'll sometimes spill out the grain by swinging on the trays. If they give you too much trouble bind the coat hangers fast to the tree trunk with wire or cord so that the trays cannot be moved.

The Grosbeaks—Pine, Evening, and Rose Breasted—are very numerous in many States this year. They are handsome birds and very tame. And although they will eat almost anything the other birds do, they like sunflower seeds better than anything else.

All birds will need and appreciate a bit of fine gravel from which they can pick out grit enough to grind up the food in their crops. If you happen to be feeding pheasants back in the snow-crusted woods, grit will be very important for I have found quite a number of these handsome game birds dead on the snow with bulging crops but with nothing in them to grind up that food.

And remember this: Many of the birds you fed last winter will repay you this summer by sweetening your life with song, and protecting you and your garden from insects.

2-Day Carpet Fashion Show Opens Here Tomorrow

HERE in the Capital, the 1950 Carpet Fashion Opening will be observed with a big Carpet Fashion Show at Hotel Washington Monday and Tuesday, April 17 and 18. Drucie Snyder Horton, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury, will be the commentator when samples of new carpets are presented by models in typical fashion show style at 3 p. m. and 8 p. m. each day.

Doors of the show, in the United Nations Room, will open both days at 11 a. m. and not close until 10 p. m., however. There will be booths for "browsing," round-tables on buying and care of carpets, and on Monday at 11 a. m., a talk by Mary L. Brandt, widely known home furnishings authority.

The Washington Floor Covering Club invites the general public to attend the show, free-of-charge. Members of home economics classes at schools have been especially invited for Monday and the diplomatic group here for Tuesday to view the latest in American carpets.

Carpet weaving is one of man's oldest and most notable artistic achievements. It finds new high standards of expression in beauty, luxury and comfort in the fashion show of new floor coverings available for the American home this spring.

Wondrous new textures, a new sense of harmony in the color palette and intriguing and classic designs all add up to make this year's Carpet Fashion Opening a mid-century event of such interest that you will not want to miss it.

As interesting as are the 1950 artistic and technical successes of the industry is its achievement in satisfying the desires of people with plenty of taste but only a fair amount of money for floor coverings. The manufacturers, who have done a remarkable postwar job in holding down prices despite soaring costs in the world wool market (all carpet wools are imported), now have succeeded in producing new fabrics which look much more expensive than they actually are.

Keyed to Furnishings

IN RECOGNITION of a growing desire on the part of a great segment of our population for finer homes, the carpetmakers have introduced for the 1950 show a number of luxury-looking fabrics at moderate to low prices.

These new fashions will be dramatically exhibited at your favorite carpet department or store. The exciting colors are keyed to paints, wallpapers, sheer and heavy fabrics, and even lamps. Colors in carpets are of greater importance than ever, and they range from pastels to deep, rich tones.

High in interest are textured and sculptured carpets. New methods of weaving the latter give them third-dimensional appearance. Formerly found only in the most expensive categories, these floor coverings are in the medium-price range this year.

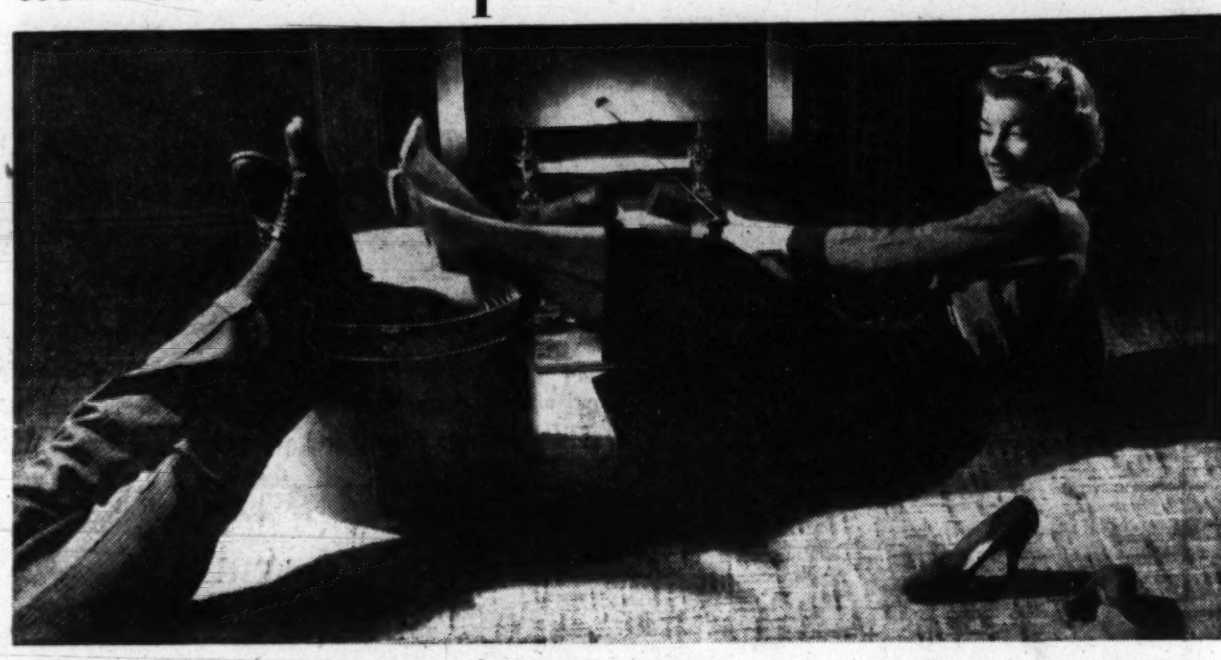
The Modern Motif

THERE is increased emphasis to key the theme of carpet design to different types of decoration. Considerable emphasis has been placed on carpets for modern motifs. Likewise, there is a countryside collection that has been designed particularly for the growing trend toward provincial, especially for the new, smaller homes where informal living is stressed.

For the homemaker who wishes to let the rug decorate the room, beautiful new florals, and graceful tone-on-tone patterns, many in new high-style colors, provide interest in the tried and true traditional themes.

Designed for greater living pleasure, these 1950 carpet fashions will provide new inspiration for your home-furnishing plans.

"Carpet Makes It Home" is more than a mere slogan this year.



The new carpet styles complement the current trend toward informal interiors, add to the comfortable lived-in look. This modern provincial design appears in subtle colorings of grays, moss green, chocolate brown and turquoise. It will be seen at the 1950 Carpet Fashion Opening

Surprises Promised at Rug Exhibit

By Lucia Brown

FASHIONS in carpets?

We've always had 'em and they've changed materially through the years, but only in the last few has a spotlight been thrown upon them.

Latest effort in this direction is the Carpet Fashion Show to be staged Monday and Tuesday at Hotel Washington by the Floor Covering Club. Members have promised that we're in for many surprises other than the carpet hats, purses, and walking sticks that will be "trick" items at the show.

Of course, you wouldn't expect these new carpets to be like the old dusty red number Grandma has on her floor. Or like the summer matting she used wall-to-wall, either. (Remember how sweet it smelled?) But you'll see more than generation-to-generation changes at this week's show. There are differences in carpets just since last year!

Modern designs are the latest news. These are being made especially to go with modern interiors, for there's nothing that gives a contemporary decor more dated look than an old-style carpet. There's been great demand for modern designs for the floor and this year the demand has been met.

Here are some of the highlights in the contemporary group:

A smart new texture weave, Conferva, designed by Russell Wright, includes three levels of tightly looped pile in a heavy ribbed effect. At present this carpet fashion comes in one color—a green-gold mounted on a muted brown earth ground. The color unusual for floor decoration, should be watched carefully as there are several variations of gold in the current carpet fashions.

Another carpet fashion, designed by Muller-Barringer, has glittery gold bands (guaranteed untarnishable) to frame block design done in sharp green. This is the first time that metallic thread has been available in a machine-made carpet.

The Name Is Rhythm

RHYTHM is the name of one design.

It comes in warm stone gray with thin pinkish gray wavy lines in frieze yarn to give character and texture to the surface. A neatly done Aximinster in ashy gray has a Greek key top design in darker stippled gray framed by bands of clear aqua. This stunning number is called Pompei.

Novatwist is the name of a very shaggy new frieze twist with a cut pile. The fuzzy surface seems to run in all directions.

Repartee is a fascinating thick-piled Axminister done in muted tones of dark sage green, beiges and chocolate browns. It is striped the width of the fabric and is made in 27-inch goods purposely so that the stripes can be random matched.

Predictor has tapered vertical and horizontal lines in an all-over pattern. It is one level of tightly lopped pile using a moresque yarn ground (shades of the same color) with the top design in solid color yarn.

There is a whole series of enchanting provincial designs.

One has the gayety of a peasant design, and is as uncompromisingly colored. The top design, neatly laid out in rows, has pairs of white birds cooing over shrimp pink trumpet flowers. Unpected touches of sky blue and sunny yellow are held together by the intensity of the dark green ground. This carpet fashion is perfect for either

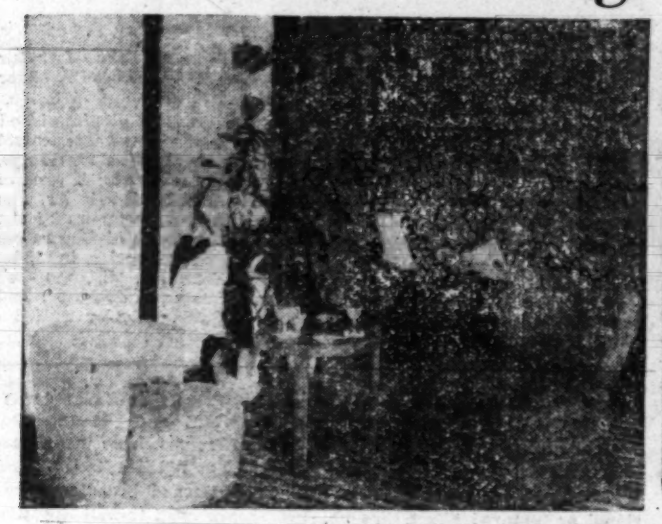
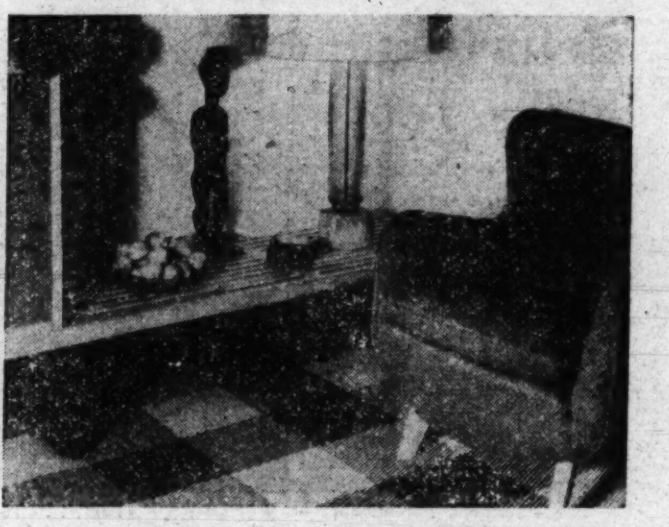
New Floor Coverings Take Their Cue From the Season



Random cross-bar design, highlighted by a sprinkling of square dots, is worked in beige to gray wool yarns

A delicately colored floral pattern, in wool



Block pattern fiber rug comes in multi-colors, and in gun-metal-beige-brown or rose-beige-brown combinations

NEW rugs all show signs of spring. Designs are informal and colors are light, whether the rug is fiber for the terrace or wool for year-round use.

Some of the new, light-hearted wool carpets will be featured in stores this week. Among these is Repartee, designed by Edward J. Wormley. The design is a random stripe in tones ranging from palest beige to a dark gray-beige. Little square dots, in mahogany, amber and cream, are sprinkled over the cross-barred ground.

Springtime, Bigelow-Sanford's contribution to a Carpet Fashion Week, is a soft floral done in the style of a Swedish hand-printed linen. Colors include warm olive greens, pinkish shades, cocoa browns and beige.

C. H. Masland shows carved broadloom rugs for spring, in color choices of gray, beige, green or rose. Leaf motifs are worked in smooth wool, with the background made more interesting by twist yarns.

New fiber rugs are specially treated so that their colors are washable and resist fading. Design-wise, the fiber rugs will fit into almost any informal scheme, whether indoors or on a terrace. Block and plaid patterns, done in bright colors or in monotones, are particularly suited to modern furniture. Tweedy textures look at home in Provincial settings as well as with modern pieces.

Rinse Powder Helps Fibers Resist Soiling

KEEPING summer cottons clean may be easier this coming season than ever before if a new compound uncovered by the Institute of Textile Technology, Charlottesville, Va., arrives for home use.

By adding a small quantity of white powder, known as CMC—carboxymethyl cellulose—to the final rinse water after laundering cottons, fibers become more resistant to soil.

The rinsing treatment is the result of research sponsored by the United States Department of Agriculture under the Research and Marketing Act, to improve the soil resistance of cotton fabric.

It was found that three level tablespoons of CMC to each gallon of rinse water resulted in cottons three or four times more resistant to soiling than untreated fabrics.

Decorators Refurbish Folks, Too

By Ann Pringle

AMIDST a lot of talk that went on at the recent American Institute of Decorators conference—some of it learned, some of it downright earthy and all of it entertaining—one statement made by a photographer sticks in my mind. Perhaps because of the disciples of their trade, photographers have a way of clipping their way through the tissue paper on a fancy package and reaching the main article quickly.

The statement I remember—and I'm probably not quoting it exactly—was "Decorators should not just put things in people's houses, they should put things in their minds."

This makes a lot of sense. I think many pople are confused about a decorator's function, and among them there may be some decorators. Ideally, he is not just designing a pretty room. Nor is he, in the words of some of our more flowery writers, setting a stage for a client's personality.

If this aim were amended to read, "setting a background for a client's personality to express itself," it would come closer to the truth, but expressing one's personality is a concept that's sometimes rather elusive, so that phrase isn't too apt either.

The point of decorating a home is to turn a lot of empty space into a pleasant, well-arranged series of spaces in which people will find it easy to relax, entertain, store belongings, study, eat, sleep and do all those things that fill the daily lives of most of us.

The arrangement should help people pursue these activities, not hinder them. A room in which people must pull chairs, tables and lamps out of their "proper" places in order to accomplish an end—whether it be to read, listen to the phonograph or just fall asleep—isn't a good room, no matter how pretty it looks when everything is in its place and there are no people around to spoil the picture it presents.

Decorators can help people use their spaces well. They can show them how new arrangements, new furniture and new equipment will make their lives run more smoothly and pleasantly. They can prove to them, in other words, that decorating a home isn't just filling it up with a lot of pretty things which the neighbors can be invited in to see. It's a much more important and satisfying job than that.

Moisture Helps

MOISTURE in the air is a tonic for wool carpeting. Excessive dryness can dull its good looks

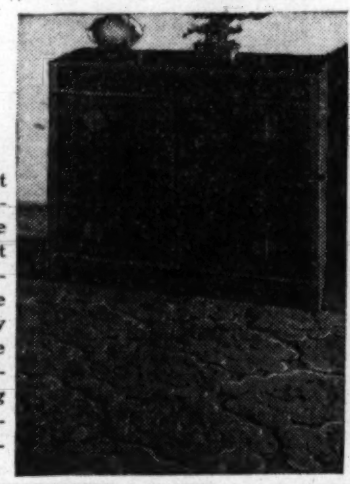
They're Putting Glamour on the Carpet

By Vivian Brown

FAMOUS designers, including Jacques Fath of couture fame, who created Rita Hayworth's trousseau, have put their talents to designing carpets. The result: a fine batch of conversation pieces that will dress up any floor.

Let's hope, however, that we will not be required to have a new "wardrobe of carpets" each season to be in the social swim, and that a "short look" or "shocking look" will not take precedence over the familiar "wall-to-wall" or 9x12 floor covering.

Others in the distinguished roundup of designers are: Russel Wright, who also designs lamps, pottery and furniture; Theodore Muller and Isabel Barringer, who work as a team, winners of the American Institute of Decorators furniture design prize in 1949; Edward Wormley, distinguished modern furniture designer, and Paul McCobb, interior and industrial designer.



JACQUES FATH . . . Creates fluid lines by combining thick cut pile mounted on tight loops

MULLER-BARRINGER . . . produce an unusual block design utilizing metallic yarns

EDWARD WORMLEY . . . Designed "Repartee" in beige, and cocoa with small squares in white, mahogany and amber

PAUL McCOBB . . . Uses horizontal and vertical lines to create shadows on a bamboo lattice effect

Dimensional Effect

TWO-TONE carpets are also called self-tones or tone-on-tones. The terms apply to a one-color carpet achieving a dimensional or textured effect through the combination of lighter and darker yarns.

The Peasant Influence

COLONIAL and peasant-influence rooms have new decorating possibilities today. Provincial-patterned broadloom carpets allow wall-to-wall installations that increase the feeling of roominess and informal living.

Recent Books of Interest

Gardens and Gardening in 1950, (Crowell) Studio Book scheduled for May, is not a book for beginners. Special sections by British experts contain information and illustrations on growing flowers, fruits, trees and shrubs.

Bird Life, by Edward A. Armstrong, (Oxford) available later this month, will cover the habits of birds all over the world. There are 24 photographs and 45 line drawings by E. A. R. Ennion.

Western Land and Water Use, by Mont H. Saunderson, (University of Oklahoma Press) due April 21, discusses the problems faced by the West with its new population influx.

Look for Density of Pile In Choosing Wool Carpet

BUYING a new wool carpet? Here are a few tips on how to go about it.

Color is most important in making your selection. If you are starting a room from scratch, buy your wool floorcovering first. Remember, the floor is the largest single area of color in the room. By buying the carpet first, you will find it easier to coordinate other elements. Carpet colors gray down some after weeks of use, so always pick a slightly more intense color than you wish.

The best guide to the quality of a carpet is the density or thickness of pile. A quick way to check the density is to look at the back of the carpet. Count the number of rows of tufts to the inch in each direction. A carpet with eight or nine in each direction is of high grade quality.

In choosing a design, consider the room in which the carpet will be used. Plain carpets or twist weaves are better for smaller rooms since they tend to give a room spaciousness. If a pattern is being used, be sure it is not too bold, but rather one of the newer self tones. Texture weaves are very luxurious, and they do not show soil or footprints easily.

Apply Filler First

If new interior woodwork is to be enameled, the first step is to apply a liquid filler. After that should come one or two coats of enamel undercoater, tinted to approximate the finishing color desired. These should be followed by one or two coats of gloss or semi-gloss enamel. At least 24 hours drying time should be allowed between coats.

French or American provincial rooms.

On the other end of the color scale is a provincial carpet called Springtime, developed in grays, and a range of greens from pale spring to olive. The over-all motif has all the characteristics of a Swedish pottery or fabric design even to hearts and flowers.

A fitting companion piece is Hearthstone—a tweedy hit or miss design in the same grays and greens.

Ranch House Designs

TWO CARPETS have been design for the increasingly popular ranch house type of decoration. Rancho is the name of one with an intriguing fur-like appearance. It is a salt and pepper Axminister with a broken, counter sunk stripe in a combination of wool and vinyl plastic yarn in bold colors. The stripe may be had in fire-engine red, sunny gold, kelly green or autumn rust. The second is called Ranch House Modern. It is both striped and checked.

Washington Square is a modern period piece. The slate gray ground boasts truly wonderful full-blown red and gold roses in subtly muted tones framed by narrow bands of dull gold to make large squares. Fresh spring green foliage gives light and freshness.

What are the color trends for the 1950 carpet fashions? Varying tones of gray, green, rose and beige continue to be the best sellers. However, the values of these colors are as new as the carpet designs themselves. Today's grays are clean with no overtone. Clear, cool beiges are plentiful.

Beige, even a very light beige, is a fine underfoot color. It shows less footprints as it comes close to "dust color." Some of the beiges have a decided pinkish cast. Rose is cinnamon or coppery rather than bedroom rose. Greens are medium with some dark and sharp hues noted. The important 1950 color is the taupe family. Not the dull, dirt-colored taupes of the twenties but warm ambers, mochas, nutria and beaver right through to rich dark chocolate.

Ancients Walked on Jewels

A 200-Million-Dollar Floor Mat

CARPET weaving is one of man's oldest cultural attainments. Woven floor coverings were known to exist in the fourth century B. C.

A caliph who died in 743 owned a carpet which measured 150 by 300 feet. Carpets made for the royal palaces exceeded in cost anything created since.

The spring or winter carpet of Khusraw, made for the vast audience hall of the palace of Ctesiphon, surpassed all. This carpet represented a formal garden with water courses, paths, rectangular beds filled with flowers and blossoming shrubs and fruit trees. The body of the rug was silk, the yellow gravel was represented by gold, and other figures were done in pearl and every kind of jewel. The wide outer border, representing a green meadow, was solid with emeralds. It was valued at 200 million dollars.

In the era of 1200 A. D., Marco Polo credited the Armenians with weaving the most beautiful carpets in the world. Three centuries later sheep were being especially bred and tended, dye plantations were cultivated like flower gardens, and great carpet designers ad weavers won court appointments which meant great prestige and power.

To gain a dramatic entrance into Caesar's presence, Cleopatra rolled herself in a carpet, and the Queen of Sheba laid rare rugs before King Solomon.

But, in those centuries, carpet was only for the palaces and rich rulers.

Today, thanks to the power loom, vastly improved dyeing methods and the work of modern artists, beautifully styled carpet is within reach of nearly every home.

This year, more than ever before, high-styled floor coverings are available at modest price. This has been achieved despite troubled world conditions and the loss of such noted prewar raw wool supply sources as China.

The advent of the broadloom has increased the popularity of wall-to-wall carpet and seamless installations in many large rooms.

Today surveys show 86 percent of the Nation's homemakers think some or all of the rugs and carpets in a home should be of good quality. A total of 49.4 percent would decide on a rug or carpet first, if redecorating a room, and 43 percent of the women surveyed desire new floor coverings for their homes now.

The Carpet Fashion Opening, April 17-27, gives them an opportunity to see artistry and creative effort at its mid-twentieth century best.

Foreign Fabric Library

A NEW reference library of more than 100,000 foreign fabrics has been opened by the du Pont Co. in its offices in the Empire State Building, New York City. The library is intended for the use of textile or design schools, as well as the entire industry. Cards with each fabric sample give its complete history. The library includes fabrics made of both natural and synthetic fibers.

For Heavy Traffic

THIS charming small-figured carpet, which will be seen at the 1950 Carpet Fashion Opening tomorrow, has been designed especially for casually informal decor. It is a perfect choice for provincial and early American furnishings and can also complement simple modern furnishing. The ground is black with the figure in oyster white and a choice of green or turkey red. Because of the smallness of the design, this will be a good carpet for heavy traffic, for footprints will scarcely show.

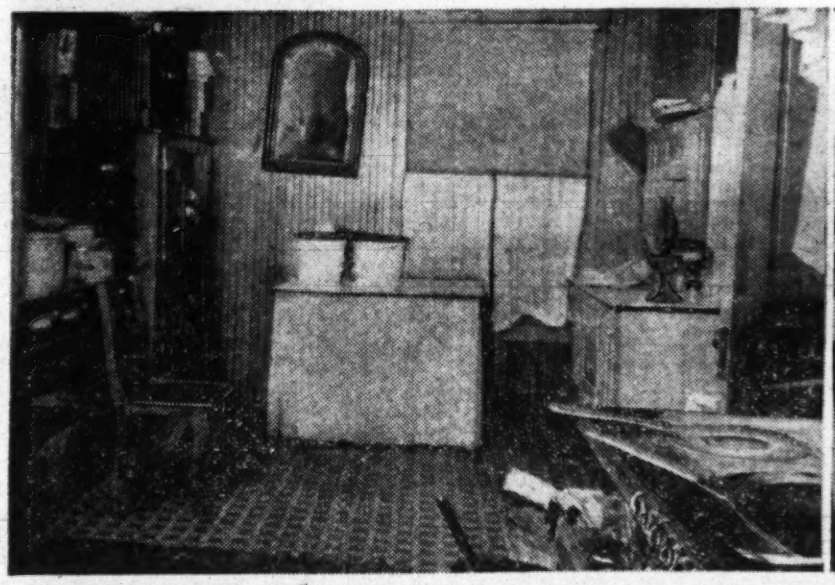
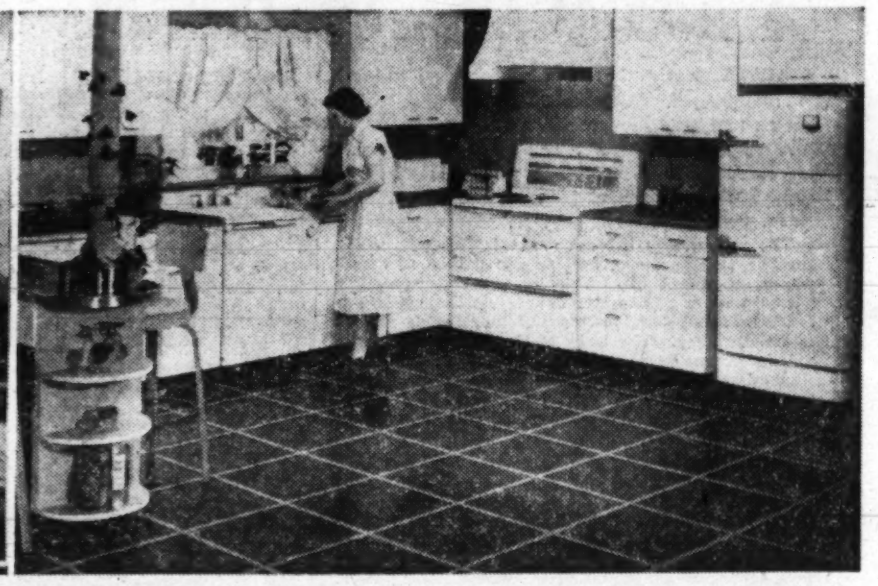
Housewife's Release From Drudgery Dates Only to 1909





On the left, we have a kitchen right out of the not-so-good old days. If you're ancient enough, you'll recognize the apparition in the right foreground as a wood stove, an ever-hungry demon that chained small boys to the woodpile and wilted their mothers in summer. That cretonne-draped table at the back is supporting the water supply, just carried in from the well, and at its left is the icebox, complete with drip-pan. There's a cabinet at rear right, if you can call it that, and it's supporting the illumination of a kerosene lamp. On the left you'll recognize a modern kitchen

PEOPLE sigh for the good old days, but nobody really yearns for the old tin sink in the kitchen and the woodbox beside the cast iron stove.

Antiques are pleasing in every room in the house except the kitchen. A woman wants the most modern, glistening appliances and furniture for the room where food is prepared, and where she must spen more time than anywhere else in the home.

Today's kitchen combines a multitude of electric appliances with plenty of work space and time-saving arrangements. This is a far cry from the kitchen where grandmother spent long hours.

Cooking, water heating, room heating and heating grandmother's flat irons all depended on the big wood or coal burning stove. The main counter space was the kitchen table. Cabinets were limited to a single cupboard. Dishes were kept in the dining room, which meant many trips back and forth. Pots and pans hung from hooks on the wall. There was a limited supply of hot hater heated on the stove. Food was stored in cave or springhouse, and weeks went into canning fruits and vegetables for the winter.

Now all of these chores have been virtually eliminated or can be accomplished with finger-tip ease.

An Old Principle

HOUSEWIVES probably don't realize how recent has been their release from drudgery. The man who changed their lot was the founder of Hotpoint, Inc., George A. Hughes, who produced the first practical electric range in 1909 in a Chicago basement workshop. It was the first step in remaking Grandmother's kitchen.

Electric cooking by heating resistance wire was known to be possible from the earliest days of electricity. In 1871, the royal family in London was served a meal cooked by this method. But it took American genius and millions of dollars to put the electric range into production.

Six million farm and city families now cook by electrical impulse, although electricity has not been available in many farm areas until recent years. Now the electric companies are extending their lines to two million more homes every year.

But getting away from kitchen tasks didn't happen overnight with the invention of the electric range. It took 40 years and 149 improvements to make the Hughes range into the automatic pushbutton dream coming off Hotpoint production lines.

A 1922 'Modern'

AS late as 1922, Fannie Farmers "Boston Cook Book" printed this priceless information about the "modern" stove of that year: "A cooking stove is a large iron box set on legs. It has a fire box in the front lined with fireproof material similar to that of which bricks are made. The bottom is furnished with a movable iron gate. Underneath the firebox is a space for receiving ashes."

Today the electric range, flanked by a dishwasher sink with food disposal, refrigerator, home freezer, base and wall cabinets, comprise the modern all-electric kitchen which makes practically every task a simple matter of twisting a dial or touching a button.

A striking example of the labor-saving devices the granddaughter uses is the one which has eliminated the messiest job of all—washing dishes. The idea of washing dishes mechanically is not new. As far back as 1860, patents were being filed on novel ways of doing away with manual dishwashing. The first serious attempt, however, was made in the early 1900s.

Mechanical Splasher

A SMALL company later acquired by Hotpoint brought out a mechanical dishwasher operated by a hand crank. The crank operated a plunger which struck the water, splashing it over the wishes. This machine moved about the floor, and housewives objected to the noise. The first dishwasher which remotely resembled those of today was a motor-driven device introduced in 1918.

Research eventually perfected this into the automatic appliance which now saves housewives an hour a day.

Companion to the dishwasher in the electric sink is the garbage disposal, which eliminates the evening trip to the garbage can at the back step.

Emptying the water pan under the old-fashioned icebox used to be the daily chore of many housewives when they were girls. If it was forgotten, a mopping up job was a certainty. The electric refrigerator ended that.

Electric freezers put garden-fresh fruits and vegetables on the table the year round. A good part of Grandmother's summer went into sterilizing jars, preparing the food for canning and sealing the jars with painstaking care to prevent spoilage.

Compared with Grandmother's day, working in the modern kitchen is pure pleasure.

Stain Wood First For Natural Finish

To obtain a so-called "natural finish," wood is first stained to bring out all the natural beauty of the grain. There are, then, several types of finishes from which to choose. Pine or birch may be shellacked, then waxed. If an oil finish is desired, boiled linseed oil is rubbed into the wood and the process is repeated periodically. Wood may also be stained in a cedar tone and left to dry.

After the stain is dry, it can be brushed with thin, putty-toned oil paint and wiped with gauze while it is still wet. This method leaves paint in the soft grain of the wood only—the cedar tone appears through the harder surface. Over this, a coating of flat varnish and a finishing coat of wax provide a lustrous effect.

Town of Axminster Copied Turk Rugs

THE patterned carpets, called Axminster, are named after the town of the same name in England, where, in the middle of the Eighteenth Century, first attempts were made to copy Turkish carpets. European imports were called Axminsters.

This type of floor covering, although named after the English town, is a truly American development.

2 Centuries of Designs In Textiles in N. Y. Show

NEW YORK (NYHT).—The Scalamandre Museum of Textiles, 20 West 57th st., has announced the opening of a new exhibit to run through April, May and June. The exhibit covers 200 years of textile designs, beginning in the eighteenth century with Louis XIV.

It shows the various periods and the styles of trimming used in conjunction with them. The exhibit is limited to the styles of France, England, and America follows closely the decorative influence of these three countries on each other.

The museum feels that in many ways this is the most educational and comprehensive exhibit it has yet shown. It is a splendid opportunity for interior decorators and students of decoration to get a first-hand glimpse of past taste in textiles and trimming; and it is also enlightening to those who want to do their own home decoration but are hazy on what fabrics go with what period.

The French portion of the exhibit begins with the silk textiles of the mid-Louis XIV period. It is interesting to note the beginning of architectural motifs in French textiles at this point, as the construction of Versailles became more and more important to the king.

In fact, history is everywhere evident in the French textile designs, with outstanding feminine favorites, such as Madame Pompadour, having as much influence on decorative motifs as on politics.

The French portion ends with the Second Empire of the nineteenth century and is followed by the "Golden Age" of the eighteenth century English periods. The English portion begins with Queen Anne and continues through the early, the Gothic and the Chinese phases of Chippendale's era. They are followed by designs made popular by Adam, Hepplewhite and Sheraton and end with the Victorian era.

American fashions begin with the close of the Revolution, since styles before this event were only carbon copies of English trends. The post-Revolution textiles are most interesting for their fervent patriotism, indulging in such symbolic motifs as stars and eagles, all carried out in blazing red, white and blue.

Then follows a less self-conscious era when American textiles were influenced by the French Directoire and the Empire styles; individuality is still obvious, but it is less forced.

The museum is open to the public Mondays through Fridays. There is no admission fee. Visiting groups are invited, and lectures will be given upon request.

Soon to Be Available

SHADOW BOX picture frames made of metal have blank backgrounds to which decal designs may be applied. The frames measure about 5x6 inches and come in red, yellow, blue and green.

TEN MILES of writing on a single cartridge of ink is the claim for a ball point pen that writes equally well on fabrics and paper. The ink is indelible so won't come out with cleaning. The pen should be good for marking laundry and the children's clothing as well as the fifty and one things that need labeling.

LOCKING yourself out of the house, garage or car isn't necessary if you keep an extra set of keys hidden somewhere on the outside of the car. There is a small metal box that grips to any flat metal surface by means of a magnet on the bottom. It holds one key, has a sliding lid and is finished in black enamel.

Most of the above items are not yet on the market. For names and addresses of manufacturers—send a 3c stamp to the Home Institute, 230 West 41st st., New York 18, N. Y.

Where to Splurge

A GOOD rule is to buy the best quality wool carpet or rug for heavy traffic areas such as halls, stairs and living rooms. You can economize in rooms which are subject to less wear and tear—your bedrooms and dining room.

Use a Thick Weave in Bathroom

CARPET your bathroom. Why not? A luxurious thick weave must be used and preferably one with a patented back to prevent raveling. No anchor or rug pad is needed. Leftover pieces from a large installation can be neatly and invisibly joined together with new plastic tape. Don't worry about getting it wet. A slight amount of surface damp won't harm the carpet. Be sure to use a large and absorbent bath mat when feet are wet. A fully carpeted bathroom is not only the height of luxury, it also saves the wear and tear of daily floor swabbing.

The Quiet Leader

THE CAMERA of Yousuf Karsh of Ottawa, Ont., has recorded the features of many great men, but seldom has this world-famous portrait photographer achieved more striking results than in the quiet study of India's Jawaharlal Nehru. To 350,000,000 countrymen, this 60-year-old disciple of Ghandi is more than prime minister. He is a symbol of independence, who comes closer to the Ghandi ideal than any figure India has produced since he died. Wooed now by Russia, lionized last year by the U.S., he has a task like the one George Washington once faced: to give his infant nation a strong start, and to keep it safe in a troubled world.

The place I like best...

Gary Cooper tells you about Aspen Valley

By GARY COOPER

HOLLYWOOD'S a good town, but there's nothing like getting away from work. When you drive northeast toward Denver, you begin to hit the winding roads and the big country. In about twelve hours, the streams, the tall trees and the rocks begin to take over. The spotlights, catwalks and film labs fade out of your mind.

After Glenwood Springs, Colo., you take Colorado Highway 82 eastward and keep going up into thinner, colder air. And then, at the end of the road, you come to a mountain bowl. It is Aspen Valley. My place.

It looks like an egg cup shoved into the roughest-looking mountains in the world. At the bottom of the egg cup are a few streets with old houses along them; houses still in the old mining tradition, with gingerbread decorations and smoke-stained clapboards. Along the sides of the cup, mountains roll up into the April sky. And they're real!

After Hollywood, Peace

I built a home in Aspen. My wife and daughter Maria feel as "at home" there as I do. We have 10 acres just behind the town, along the stream in a cluster of aspen trees. In early spring, the old fence sticks up through the snow, and the stream shows water through the drifts where it writhes between the trees. On April days when we don't feel like skiing, we can still take a dog sled through snow pockets in the hills. At night we walk through the town or loll in front of the fire in old clothes.

Aspen, in spite of tourists, is a town like other towns of 1,200 people. It has dogs and kids, cars parked in the snow, and parties going on behind frosted windows. You go back to your own early days. Yep—it's at the end of the line.

Sidewalk hoodlums strike at lone pedestrians, then disappear into the night.

Danger Lurks on our Streets!

Meet America's newest public enemy: he's the sidewalk hoodlum. He robs and roughs up his victims on dark thoroughfares

By EDWARD J. NICKEL

YOU PROBABLY KNOW THE FEELING.

You're on the street. It's night—ten or eleven o'clock, perhaps later. Because your route takes you there, you turn from a well-lighted main thoroughfare onto the murky paths of a sidestreet.

You walk for a block. All is quiet, except for the normal night noises. Then, a few steps farther on, you think you hear someone following. At first you're afraid to look. Then you look, and, sure enough, there is a dim form. You ask yourself: "Is he following me? . . ."

Chances are, it's simply another late pedestrian like yourself.

But sometimes—all too often, in some of our biggest cities—it isn't. Sometimes this nerve-draining sense of foreboding can be the real thing—the prelude to one of the nasty, squalid crimes that take place on American streets every night in the year..

How safe—at night—are the streets in your neighborhood?

Take the case of 30-year-old Mrs. Betty Wolf, a Cleveland stenographer. She was on her way to a neighborhood movie one night last year when she was seized by an unseen assailant, dragged into a dark alley, stabbed seven times with a knife and robbed of a wrist watch, a diamond ring and forty dollars.

Or take the case of another Clevelander, Mrs. Mae Barrett. Neighbors found her bleeding in the hallway of her home. Her unknown attacker had knocked out most of her teeth and tied her underclothing around her neck. She died without regaining consciousness.

The Case of Mary Lochirco

And then there was a 26-year-old Chicago mother, Mrs. Mary Lochirco, who was hurrying home around 10 p.m. from her late job in a toy factory. A stranger jumped from the shadows and dove for her purse. The thief slashed at her with a knife and she screamed. She staggered to her mother's doorstep, blood spurting from her throat. The attacker was caught, hours later, and sentenced to death. But Mrs. Lochirco, too, is dead.

It's hard to get the real facts on street violence. The mere fact that many police authorities themselves don't want to talk too freely suggests it is a tougher situation than many people know.

Aggravated assaults, according to the most recent reports of the F.B.I., rose 4.1 percent in U.S. cities during the first half of 1949. Robbery was up 0.5 percent, rape up 1.3 percent for the same period. These figures also include offenses committed elsewhere than on the streets, but they clearly reflect the viciousness of the sidewalk hoodlum. For it is street crime along with sex crime—the two often go hand in hand—that make special trouble for the police.

Their records list seven major kinds of street crime:

1. Holdup with a pistol or other weapon for purposes of robbery.
2. Mugging, for purposes of robbery.
3. Grab-and-run purse-snatching.
4. Sex assault and degeneracy.
5. The less serious, but criminal annoyance of women by automobile "cruisers" and casual strollers, often degenerate.
6. Hoodlum gang attacks, usually by juveniles against juveniles.
7. Attacks on streets by homicidal maniacs. (In two instances alone in recent months, 18 people were killed in daylight street attacks by maniacs in Camden, N.J., and Brooklyn, N.Y.)

Here's the situation as it now stands in several U.S. cities:

In Oakland and San Francisco, Cal., vigorous police drives have succeeded in smashing a wave of street holdups and sex assaults.

St. Louis police reported 93 street holdups and assaults during the first two months of this year. Some thefts were blamed on juveniles, but most of the roughing-up is by older criminals.

In New Orleans, there were 36 cases of street robbery in January and February, 21 cases of purse-snatching.

The Bright Spots Are Few

As in Oakland and San Francisco, however, there were a few bright spots. In Los Angeles, where street crimes climbed sickeningly after the war, a gradual decline is setting in. In Cleveland, too, a peak appears to have been passed.

In Chicago, where there has been a rise in street offenses, police claim that adults, not teen-agers, were responsible.

Paradoxically, America might never have been faced with the problem of combatting an unprecedented wave of street crime at all, according to some authorities, if our police departments hadn't been so thoroughly motorized.

The motorizing of the foot patrolmen, these authorities claim, actually is making it easier for the sidewalk hoodlum.

Says Judge James Wallace of New York's Court of General Sessions:

"I walk the streets daily and nightly for exercise, and rarely do I come across a uniformed patrolman walking a beat. Instead we have the little car carrying two policemen racing through the streets.

TO AVOID NIGHT DANGER ON THE STREETS, THE CHICAGO CRIME COMMISSION SUGGESTS:

- Avoid alleys and poorly lighted streets.
- Walk along the edge of the sidewalk nearest the road.
- Steer away from darkened doorways, hedges, shrubs, etc.
- Don't venture out alone in dubious neighborhoods.
- Never be afraid to call for help. Plan in advance what kind of alarm you could best give. (At least one kind of pocket-size alarm, a piercing siren, is now marketed.)
- Unescorted women should stay away from bars, from which they are apt to be followed.

"These cars get policemen to the scene of a crime quickly—but only after it has been committed."

It's true everywhere: the prowl car is displacing the foot cop.

"The foot patrolman is the very basis of crime prevention," says Judge Wallace, "because he is intimately acquainted with the life and activities in the particular neighborhood he patrols. The frequent sight of a uniformed policeman—or even the knowledge that he is in the vicinity—is a powerful deterrent to the thug."

Some cities are finding that better street lighting is also an answer. "Robberies and assaults," says police chief J. D. Holstrom of Berkeley, Cal., "occur largely in poorly lighted areas."

The plain fact is that better policing or better lighting—and often both—could prevent attacks like those on Mrs. Wolf, Mrs. Barrett and Mrs. Lochirco. If neither is available, you are safer off the streets!

A professional shows how to protect yourself from a surprise attack

BROOKS MENDELL, who plays the villain in these pictures, is the inventor of a system of self defense known as "I Do" (PARADE, June 6, 1948). In 20 years, he has floored many a heavyweight, has written a book, and now runs a correspondence course. Here, with Faith Allen, 97-pound dancer, he shows you five ways to block an assault. They are good for men to know, too.

GRABBED around the neck, Faith Allen spills Mendell by twisting pressure on shoulder.

Mugged, Faith thwarts her attacker by digging elbow into his solar plexis.

CHOKED by husky Mendell, she breaks grip by bending back finger.

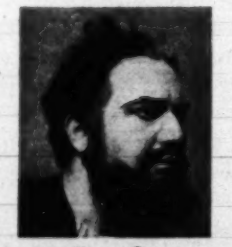
WRIST GRIP can be broken by pulling against assailant's thumb, toward yourself.

BEAR HUG is foiled by applying pressure on aggressor's nose, bending his head back.

OPERA'S Alexander Sved (left) flunked first rule of band singing by bellowing into microphone. "You'll scare the customers," said Prima.

JITTERBUGGING attempt found Sved floundering like elephant in quicksand.

OPERA STAR GOES 'MODERN'



Metropolitan Opera star Alexander Sved in operatic role of "William Tell."

AS PUPIL of bop-singer Prima, Sved stuck to operatic gestures, shook an operatic fist at imaginary goose in "The Cry of the Wild Goose."

"GEE, why did she go away and leave me." Technique consisted of looking sadly at floor.

"ST. LOUIS BLUES" (Sved version) looked like a Tristan whistling at a vanished Isolde.

Baritone Alexander Sved takes lessons from Prima, decides to stick to opera

WHAT HAPPENS when an opera star tries to sing popular music? The accompanying photos show what happened when Metropolitan baritone Alexander Sved tried to imitate Louis Prima, a bandleader with a gravelly voice.

Meeting tonsil to tonsil one day, Prima offered to teach Sved how to "deliver." It took a while for Sved to "unlearn" his Wagnerian operatic tones and stance. After an hour's shakedown with "The Cry of the Wild Goose" and other juke box ditties, they settled down to a duet rendition of the ever-popular "St. Louis Blues."

It may all be a trend–in reverse! For the Metropolitan Opera has been angling lately to get Danny Kaye to appear in "Die Fledermaus!"

HEARTBREAK looked more like heartburn as operatic baritone Sved sang of unrequited love.

X-RAY is one of tried-and-true cures for cancer. Photo is from new film "Science Against Cancer," sponsored by U.S. Public Health Service.

Is Cancer Yielding?

Science begins to make progress against a disease which kills at the rate of two million people every 10 years!

By MORTON M. HUNT

THE LIE DETECTOR-machine may become a useful weapon against cancer.

At Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Dr. Curt P. Richter is seeking to apply the principles of the lie detector in an effort to locate hidden cancers – the kind that do most of the killing.

Dr. Richter, a psychologist, has discovered that various illnesses increase the electrical resistance of certain skin areas. Thus he can pin-point areas where something is amiss. Definite diagnosis is then accomplished by standard X-ray examination and tissue study.

It's still too early to say what role Dr. Richter's discovery will play, but it shows how far afield scientists are venturing to conquer America's Number Two killer. Only heart disease kills more Americans.

Today, there are skirmishes all along the battlefront. Some experimental treatments have produced remarkable results. Any one could turn into a rout.

Still, the sober truth at the moment is that genuine cancer cures still are being obtained only by the two tried-and-true techniques: surgery and radiation.

Spreading Growths Are Great Problem

Yet surgery and radiation aren't enough. Nearly 200,000 will die of cancer in the U.S. this year. The reason: neither knife nor X-rays can help once the disease has spread throughout the body. Multiply those 200,000 deaths by 10 years and you get the incredible total of two million victims in a decade!

Five years ago the U.S. public for the first time gave more than a million dollars to the American Cancer Society

(ACS). Shortly after that, the government began topping more than a million annually on the National Cancer Institute's funds. By last year each group was spending $14 million to fight cancer. The payoff is starting to come in the form of new advances–some of them very exciting to experimenting scientists.

Hormones Offer Hope

Leukemia (cancer of the blood) kills more than 6,000 annually – including many children–and there has never been a cure. But several months ago, a Canadian mother took her dying four-year-old son Harold to New York's Bellevue Hospital.

After 12 days of treatment with ACTH – the new anti-arthritic hormone (PARADE, Aug. 7, 1949)–Harold went home, the cancer cells gone from his blood.

Unfortunately this is not a cure, but only what doctors call a "remission."

Remissions, they point out, are only temporary. Little Harold may relapse in from two months to half a year.

But the point is that even if ACTH doesn't cure, it shows that there are ways to hinder cancer cells.

Not long ago, a Boston woman was dying from a breast cancer which had spread. Injection of male hormones shrank her tumors and ended much of her pain. The effect was temporary – she died eight months later–but her suffering had been alleviated. Hundreds have been helped this way, and the technique is accepted.

Men with cancer of the prostate get female hormone injections. Their remissions are often definite, long-lasting.

Hormones don't merit the name "cure," yet doctors are finding connections between cancer and body chemistry which may lead to bold successes tomorrow.

Chemicals Battle Cancer

Oddly enough, the horrible war gases called "mustards" seem to harm the cancerous lymph cells of Hodgkin's disease more than they harm normal cells.

The point is that cancer cells are normal cells gone wild. But since they are somewhat different from their normal cousins, they can sometimes be poisoned by certain chemicals which do less harm to normal cells.

"As long as there is that differential," says Dr. Cornelius Rhoads, head of New York's Memorial Hospital, "there should be a control of cancer possible in the form of a chemical treatment. The ones we have now aren't good enough–but there is reason to hope that cancer-restraining compounds will be forthcoming.

"Just when, I couldn't begin to guess."

Some 3,000 new compounds have been tested at Memorial in the last ten years. Over 50 have shown promise. Other research centers are testing thousands.

A still different approach is the use of radioactive isotopes, which act somewhat like X-rays or radium.

Iodine, for example, tends to collect in the thyroid. Thus in certain cases of thyroid cancer, injections of radioactive iodine can be made to accumulate and supply radiation right where needed.

GEIGER COUNTER checks radioactive isotopes which help treat some varieties of cancer.

In the field of X-ray, scientists at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have discovered that higher voltages do a better job. At the University of Illinois, last year, Dr. Roger Harvey aimed his 25-million volt betatron at the neck of a 72-year-old patient with an egg-sized larynx tumor.

Patient Regains His Health

The tumor shrank steadily and has, for the time being, left the patient worn but healthy. But, Dr. Harvey points out, not many can be helped so dramatically, and it will be five years at least before a "cure" in his case can be proven.

Surgeons, too, have been developing new methods of combating cancer. Lung cancer was once hopeless. Now there are hundreds of successful lung removals.

New and more successful operations are being performed in cases of breast, bone, cervical and intestinal cancer. The number of cancer victims saved by surgery is constantly climbing.

Yet, despite all doctors have learned, there still is the dreadful span of percentages: 95 percent of early skin cancer cured–because it IS seen early. Only five percent of prostate cancer, less than five percent of stomach cancer, are cured–because they're usually found too late.

Timely medical check-ups could save thousands of these victims; a reliable, early test for cancer, tens of thousands.

Urine Test Costs $10,000!

Dozens of researchers have busied themselves with blood analyses. Dr. Charles Huggins of the University of Chicago has found that blood from cancer patients will coagulate with certain chemicals. Normal blood won't.

But the test is expensive and, as yet, not foolproof. Still the National Research Council calls his work, "a blood test which may prove to be a means for early detection of cancer," and the ACS is gambling $21,600 this year on Huggins' experiments.

Other researchers are working on a urine test. Up to now, however, a single analysis costs $10,000 – which puts it far in the future as a potential test.

That's why a major development like Dr. Richter's lie-detector adaptation could be of major importance. It is one of a steady stream of new discoveries flowing from America's cancer research laboratories. Each one offers new hope.

WHO ARE THESE 700,000 MEN THEY CALL "KNIGHTS"?

Whether you are a Catholic or not, you should know the truth about the Knights of Columbus.

Is it, as sometimes rumored, a secret society with designs against our government? Do its members really take an oath to destroy non-Catholic institutions and to promote Catholic political power?

If such rumors were true, the Knights of Columbus would not deserve the friendship and trust of non-Catholic citizens, which it invites and merits. Actually there is no more thoroughly American organization than this fraternal order of Catholic men.

It is composed of plumbers and lawyers, farmers and doctors, business men and scientists–of Catholic men at every level of the social and economic scale. Some are rabidly partisan Democrats, others equally staunch Republicans. On political and public questions, they "choose up sides" with all the freedom and enthusiasm of any other citizens.

The Knights of Columbus was formed in 1882, by a small group of the men of St. Mary's Church, New Haven, Connecticut. They had met, at the invitation of Father Michael J. McGivney, not to form a national fraternal society, but to "render mutual aid to the members of the parish and their families."

In the years that since have ensued, the Knights of Columbus has grown into a fraternal order of 700,000 members, spread over the United States, Canada and other countries of the Western World. But its purpose of "mutual aid"... and its principles of charity, unity, fraternity and patriotism ...have remained unchanged through those 68 years.

Millions of dollars contributed by the American people have been spent by the Order for the relief of victims of fire, flood and famine...for the support of Christian youth work...for aid to Christian education. In World War I, and immediately thereafter $44,000,000 was expended by the Knights in support of our troops and in the rehabilitation of veterans.

Despite these and many other signal demonstrations of its principles of charity, unity, fraternity and patriotism, some people have the most absurd beliefs and suspicions about the Knights of Columbus, just as they do about the Catholic Church. Even today, misinformed people give publicity at times to a false alleged Knights of Columbus oath which has been proved to be fraudulent, and which scores of others have been forced publicly to admit is untrue.

This message... and others explaining Catholic beliefs and practices... are published by the Knights of Columbus so that our non-Catholic neighbors may judge us as we really are – not as we are often misrepresented to be. We believe that truth, as Lincoln said, "is generally the best vindication against slander."

FREE–If you would like to know more about the Knights of Columbus ... about the ideals, history, achievements and aims of this international society of Catholic men, write today for free Pamphlet No. 9 – PR.

BEAUTY ON THE RUN: Broadway's Donna Lee Hickey keeps her figure with the help of regular morning dog-trots. Her striking beauty brought her to Andre de Dienes' attention.

Broadway's Best!

DONNA does three shows nightly at Copa. She's shown on cover with 3 other Copa girls.

FIVE SHORT YEARS AGO, a plump and unglamorous bobby-soxer named "Dolly" Hickey was vainly trying to get on the cheering squad at a high school in New York City. Every day after school, she tapped a typewriter in a law office, hoping to become a private secretary.

Just the other night, glamor photographer Andre de Dienes was scouting famous night clubs for the four most beautiful girls in the Broadway area. His eyes were almost pulled out of their sockets at the sight of a lissome brunette

SHE TAKES regular voice lessons (above). "My singing is coming along fine," she says.

FAVORITE rendezvous: top of the Empire State Building.

DONNA dances, on nights off, with beau Frank Arden.

A glamor photographer picks an ex-secretary as one of top chorines dancing in the Copacabana chorus. It was the self-same Miss Hickey. (Three more de Dienes discoveries are on page 14.)

Now 21, and with her name changed from "Dolly" to Donna Lee, a name redolent of magnolia blossoms, she scales a neat 112 lbs. at 5′ 7″. Her dimensions of 34½, 22, and 34½ inches at bust, waist, and hips would inspire a whole football team.

How the discouraged cheerleader (she flunked the squad) got to be a glamor girl is a saga almost as old as Broadway itself.

Daughter of old-time vaudeville song-and-dance man Ray Hickey, who died when she was five, "Dolly" left school at 16 to help support her solid-Irish family. In rapid succession (sometimes simultaneously), she became saleslady, La Guardia Field page girl, architect's secretary, and raincoat model.

She was taught to dance by old schoolchum (and present fiance) Frank Arden, now a song-and-dance man himself. And so a Hickey is back on Broadway at last.

Here are three more dancing beauties chosen by de Dienes on his Broadway tour . . .

LEE PERKINS, 22, of New Orleans and New York, has been a Long Stemmed Beauty at the Diamond Horseshoe for 2 years. She arrived in chorus via carnivals and modeling.

THE THREE OTHER GIRLS de Dienes chose on his tour of the chorus lines appear in the pictures on this page.

"I used no formula," he said. "I just liked their looks."

In show business talk, "Broadway" embraces even clubs and theatres several blocks away. De Dienes estimates that on any given night there are only about 200 chorus girls dancing on "Broadway."

In all America, the American Guild of Variety Artists reports, there are about 22,000 chorus girls – employed and unemployed. Dienes (who pronounces his name dee-ennis) has photographed a large number of them. He considers these four Broadway's tops.

CHARLOTTE FOLEY, 22, dances can-can in 12-girl chorus at the Latin Quarter. She hails from Rockwell City, Ia., once worked for the R.F.C. in Washington, D. C.

MARGIE WINTERS, 19, of the revived "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," is one of six girls portraying chorines of the '20s. Tired Business Men are still fascinated.

Sponge rubber duckling

Holds and feeds yarn

Wrings itself dry

8-oz. shower protection

PRACTICAL BATH TOY: Fun for floating, and if you slip soap inside this duckling it lathers freely, too. Of extra soft natural rubber sponge, it has no grit and can be used on tenderest skin. Four for 50¢.

"TURN-A-WINDOW" kit gives you an easy method of cleaning windows from inside. It quickly fixes double-hung windows so you can lower either sash, then swing it up inside for easy, safe cleaning. $1.

NO WET HANDS: Good clean-up news is a sponge mop that's self-wringing. The built-in squeezer attachment gets rid of water, your hands stay dry. The cellulose sponge absorbs 20 times its weight in water, leaves floors blotter-dry and is angled to reach out-of-way corners. $3.95.

8-OUNCE RAINCOAT for men, women, is of thin but tough Vinylite plastic. It fits in pouch tiny enough to go in purse, pocket or briefcase corner. Cost of $4.95 may make it practical for you to keep coats in office, home, car, always ready for a sudden shower.

BRACELET THAT HOLDS a ball of yarn is a clever device for knitters, crocheters, tatters. Adjusts to arm position and releases yarn freely, evenly. $1.

LOST KEY PROBLEMS can be solved with unique container that attaches magnetically behind bumper, under fender or to any metal surface on your car, stays there despite high speeds, bumpy roads. Result: hiding place to keep an extra car, garage and house key. Price is $1.

NOTE: Prices quoted above are approximate, may vary somewhat in different localities. Send no money to PARADE. For names and addresses of manufacturers, send inquiries with stamped, self-addressed envelope to Parade of Progress, PARADE, 405 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

Braised Duck Cantonese

TAKE bones, skin from cooked duck, cut meat in pieces, sprinkle with salt.

DIP duck first in flour, then in egg, then in flour again; fry golden brown.

MAKE sauce with duck broth, sherry, soy sauce, cornstarch, cinnamon.

BY BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE'S FOOD EDITOR

EVERY SO OFTEN it is fun to look abroad for cookery inspiration. We found this fine recipe in "New Chinese Recipes" by Fred Wing and Mable Stegner (Edelmuth Co. $1.00). Ingredients are in your neighborhood store.

Braised Duck Cantonese
(Wor-Shew-Opp)

1 duck (6-7 lbs.)	Diced duck giblets
1 teaspoon salt	1 cup duck broth
1 egg	2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon water	¼ cup water
1 cup flour	1 tablespoon soy sauce
2 cups cooking oil	1 tablespoon sherry
1 tablespoon minced scallions	½ teaspoon cinnamon

Have duck disjointed at market. Remove fat. Cover with cold water; bring to boil; cover; simmer 45 minutes or until tender. Remove from broth; cool. Remove bones and skin; cut meat into pieces about 2 inches by ½ inch. Sprinkle with salt. Beat egg slightly; add water. Dip duck first in flour, then in egg, then in flour again. Heat oil in deep frying pan or Dutch oven; add duck; cook over medium heat until golden brown, about 10 minutes; drain. Place on serving platter; sprinkle with scallions. Meanwhile cook diced giblets in broth about 10 minutes. Blend cornstarch and water; add to broth with remaining ingredients. Cook, stirring, until thickened. Pour over duck. Serve with fluffy rice. Serves 4.

A dish of duckling, Cantonese style, served with fluffy pre-cooked rice will make a sure-fire hit.

By HY GARDNER

IF YOU THINK MEN'S HATS (opposite page) have a new look this spring, take a walk down Fifth Ave. with me today and let's do a fashion piece on the ladies' hats . . . Look, here comes something . . . a picture hat . . . just the thing a mere wisp of an elephant wears in front of you at the movies! It features a montage of photographs printed on linen . . . Another resembles a poodle struggling to free himself from a fishnet. Same designer uses a burlap skull-cap with a fugitive from a cuckoo-clock dangling between the eyebrows . . . One model is made of shellacked match-box covers – for hot-heads . . . Cutest model is a straw dotted with forget-me-nots and a tiny pencil so the wearer can jot down things to remember . . . One practical mode is an off-the-face model that's so far off the face, Milady wears it in her hand . . . An importation from California is surrounded by a cluster of fruit. It's a very tiny hat. (You know what the weather has done to California's fruit crop this year!) . . . If you haven't a new bonnet to compare with any of these we've seen, please don't fret. Just wear last season's. Chances are it's ridiculous enough to be in style again this year.

WEARING new "Umbrahat," comedienne Beatrice Kay serves as guinea pig for Hy Gardner.

Sam Levenson, the Brooklyn schoolteacher who's turned professional humorist, tells about the tramp who came to a door and asked for a meal. "Would you eat yesterday's soup?" the hausfrau asked. "Yes," he said. "Then come tomorrow!" he was told.

Theatrical designer Katherine Kuhn, asked what she considers the most important detail to remember in designing a scanty costume for a cafe show girl or dancer, replied: "Always use a patch of material to cover a possible appendectomy scar!" . . .

SHORT AND MOSTLY SWEET: The world may be shaky, but President Truman still takes a 45-minute nap after every lunch and falls asleep faster than a drama critic at an opening night . . . THE FORMAL Homburg appears in straw for the first time. Made of Panama, it comes with traditional black or navy band for about $10.

LIGHTEST straw on the market is porous weave Fantom weight Panama, weighs 3 ounces ($5).

PLANTER'S style Panama with wide, bright band is good for spectator sports ($7.50).

TWO-TONE Palm Braid straw has tan coconut crown, dark brown or green brim. Price $5.

New Straws

Even the Homburg is a 'skimmer' now

STRAW HATS, this summer, will be more varied in style and colors than last year. Most unusual items: a straw Homburg (above), a wide-brimmed Panama (left) copied from the West Indies planter's hat and a hand-woven straw (left) from Ecuador which weighs only three ounces. Some hats will come in bright colors—even orange and green.

SAILOR STRAW (right) of '20s is expected to make big comeback. Panama straw (left) has snap brim and a dent in the crown. Both, $5.

Lawbreaking French small fry grips black market copy of banned Donald Duck comic book.

Black market in comics

French think the funny books go too far, are no longer funny

FUNNY PAPERS bring high prices, get close scrutiny as young Parisians barter comics.

YOUNG EXPERT on comic books sets up a curbstone black market.

DON'T THROW AWAY that comic book! It may be worth its weight in gold – on the Paris black market, that is!

Alarmed at the growing popularity of bloodcurdling comics, introduced by American GIs, French authorities have clamped down. Anyone found dealing in comics glamorizing mayhem, piracy, kidnaping, seduction, or cruelty is liable to arrest.

Heavy Penalties

If judged "demoralizing," a comic book is apt to draw the gendarmes and get the dealer a year in jail or a $1,500 fine.

As in other experiments in prohibition, the new law has resulted in a lively trade in bootleg wares. In the general confusion, even such innocuous fare as Monsieur Walt Disney's Donald Duck et la Terreur Du Mississippi, originally costing 45 francs (about 14¢) has become a collector's item.

BLACK MARKET in comic books thrives in the Rue St. Medard. Note big influx of boys.

YOU ARE NOT DEAD YET!

OH, BABY, I WISH I DID KNOW WHAT I'M HERE FOR!

DOES THIS MEAN YOU HAVE INFLUENCE?.. PERHAPS YOU HAVE RISEN SINCE OUR OLD DAYS...POSSIBLY YOU ARE OF THE SECRET POLICE...

OH, SMRNSK, I SHOULD NOT HAVE SPOKEN SO HARSHLY TO YOU...BUT YOU ARE LIKE A STRANGER! ...REMEMBER THAT I HAVE NOT SEEN YOU SINCE THOSE EARLY DAYS OF OUR MARRIAGE!

THAT IS SO..

YOU SAW ME IN AFRICA, CUTIE, BUT I'VE DYED SINCE!

COME TO THINK...THEY WOULD NOT HAVE SENT YOU ALL THOSE MILES MERELY TO PICK ME UP... A STRANGE WHITE MAN IS CONSPICUOUS IN THIS TOWN THESE DAYS...MAYBE YOU ARE ON SOME REALLY BIG PROJECT...WHY MUST WE BE SO DISTANT ABOUT IT ALL, DEAR?

YOU ARE MUCH MORE ATTRACTIVE THAN WHEN WE WERE MARRIED

MMMM-M-M! STRONGER TOO!!

2 Years' Research at FIVE LEADING UNIVERSITIES Proves That Using Colgate's Right After Eating Helps Stop Tooth Decay Before It Starts!

YES, THE MOST CONCLUSIVE PROOF IN ALL DENTIFRICE RESEARCH ON TOOTH DECAY! Proof based on 2 years' research at leading universities—hundreds of case histories! Conclusive proof that when used right after eating, Colgate's helps stop decay before it starts! Colgate Dental Cream has been proved to contain all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive patented ingredient, for effective daily dental care.

THE TOOTHPASTE YOU USE TO CLEAN YOUR BREATH WHILE YOU CLEAN YOUR TEETH, now offers a safe, proved way to reduce decay! Modern science shows decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst right after eating. Brushing teeth with Colgate's as directed, helps remove these acids before they can harm enamel. And Colgate's active penetrating foam gets between teeth where food often lodges.

CHILDREN LOVE COLGATE'S FLAVOR! By the time they enter school, 9 out of 10 children have one or more decayed teeth. Children love Colgate's flavor—so it's easy to start them on the proved Colgate way to reduce decay! No dentifrice can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But using Colgate's as directed is a safe way to reduce cavities—help stop tooth decay! And only Colgate Dental Cream offers proof of such results!

Always Use Colgate's To Clean Your Breath While You Clean Your Teeth—and Help Stop Tooth Decay!

ECONOMY SIZE 59¢ ALSO 43¢ AND 25¢ SIZES

NO OTHER DENTIFRICE OFFERS PROOF OF SUCH RESULTS!

SUSIE ENTERTAINS THE SEWING CIRCLE
SORRY TO BUST IN ON YOUR PARTY, SUSIE, BUT THE BOYS THOUGHT THAT WHILE THE SEWING CIRCLE WAS SO NEEDLE-MINDED, IT MIGHT BE A GOOD TIME TO GET IN A FEW PLUGS FOR THE PRACTICAL SIDE OF LIFE!
I'VE GOT A GOOD NOTION TO GO RIGHT DOWNTOWN AND BUY A NEW HAT.
WELL, IT'S ONLY A RIP, BUT I SUPPOSE I'LL HAVE TO TAKE YOU HOME AND FIX THIS ON MY MACHINE!
I'VE ASKED YOU SIX TIMES TO TAKE A FEW STITCHES IN MY TAIL. BUT IF YOU WANT ME TO LOOK LIKE A SWALLOW IT'S O.K. WITH ME!
JUST PLAIN EXHIBITION-ISTS!
I WAS GOING TO ASK MOM TO SEW THE COVER ON MY BASEBALL, BUT I GUESS THIS ISN'T THE RIGHT TIME.
GEE WHITH, AND MY MOM HATH GONE TO HER CANATHTA CLUB!
OH, FREDDIE! YOU WOULD, JUST WHEN I'M MAKING THIS PRETTY LITTLE DOILY TO PUT UNDER YOUR DESK PHONE.
WE WANT BUTTONS ON SHIRTS
WE CAN'T WEAR GUEST TOWELS TO THE OFFICE!
I LEAD A DOG'S LIFE-
HOW ABOUT THE RIP IN MY OVERCOAT
WE DON'T WANT TO BE TREATED LIKE THE FAMILY
WE WANT SOMETHING BETTER
WE SURE PICKED THE WRONG TIME FOR OUR PARADE!
HEY, BESSIE! YOU FORGOT JOE'S SOCKS AGAIN!
A STITCH IN TIME SAVES NINE!
ROSES RED, VIOLETS BLUE, MY PANTS COULD USE A PATCH OR TWO!
RELAX, ARNOLD, I WANT TO GET THIS DONE AND GET BACK TO SUSIE'S BEFORE SHE SERVES THE REFRESHMENTS.
GEE WHITH, MYRTLE! IF WE HAD BEEN PLAYING, BATHEBALL, WE MIGHT HAVE MITHED THITH!

Prince Valiant
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
by HAROLD R. FOSTER
Synopsis: PRINCE VALIANT LOUNGES AT EASE BY THE FIRE, PLANNING TOMORROW'S SECRET DUEL WITH JARL EGIL AND LISTENING TO THE TINKLING OF ALETA'S CONTENTED CHATTER.

AND HE WONDERS IDLY IF THE SOFT, WARM, VELVET LIPS WILL BECOME HARD AND MUSCULAR WITH SO MUCH EXERCISE. FOR THE MUSIC OF HER CHATTERING IS ENDLESS. AND HE CAN MAKE NEITHER HEAD NOR TAIL OF IT, FOR SHE RARELY FINISHES A SENTENCE AND TALKS, PARTLY TO HIM, PARTLY TO HERSELF AND PARTLY TO NO ONE IN PARTICULAR.

CAN THERE BE A LICK OF SENSE BENEATH THAT SHINING MASS OF GOLD? THEN SHE LOOKS UP WITH SERIOUS GRAY EYES AND SAYS: "YOU FIGHT TOMORROW."

VAL SCRAMBLES TO HIS FEET:- "WHO TOLD YOU THAT SECRET? HOW DO YOU KNOW THESE THINGS?"
"ON YOUR FACE AND IN YOUR EYES IS THE LOOK YOU HAVE WHEN FIGHTING IS NIGH," SHE ANSWERS.

"AND WHY SHOULD I NOT KNOW YOUR EVERY THOUGHT? FOR I LOVE YOU. WERE I NOT YOUR QUEEN, WILLINGLY WOULD I BE YOUR SLAVE. THERE IS NO SUNLIGHT, MUSIC OR LAUGHTER WHEN YOU ARE AWAY. DO NOT LIGHTLY RISK YOUR LIFE!"

WITH THE DAWN THE SMALL, SWEET GIRL WHO HAD CLUNG TREMBLING IN HIS ARMS HAS BECOME ONCE MORE THE WARRIOR'S WIFE. AS ALETA HELPS HIM ARM, SHE ORDERS: "NOW FIGHT WELL AND WIN QUICKLY SO YOU CAN GET HOME IN TIME FOR SUPPER."
